Painful Spectacles the women who try to wash without Pearline. It's hard to look at, but it's harder yet to do it. Washing with Pearline is easy—for weak backs, easy on delicate fabrics. It does away with the Rub, Rub, Rub. There is nothing as convenient—nothing so effective. Washing with Pearline is safe; millions know it, and can tell millions who want to know.

Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—back. 576 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Mrs. Claudius Mansfield, one of the oldest residents of this vicinity, having lived on their farm east of town for over 50 years, passed away Sunday morning, aged 75 years. She was a person of kindly disposition, one of the best of neighbors, and beloved by all who knew her. The funeral took place at her late residence Tuesday afternoon, Rev. D. H. Ramsdell officiating.

The friends of Mrs. Hixson gave her a surprise last Tuesday afternoon, on the occasion of her 94th birthday. She is one of the few early settlers of Clinton still left and is enjoying good health for a person of her advanced age. A very enjoyable afternoon was passed by those present. Among those present were our friends Roswell Randall, aged 90 years, and Mrs. E. P. Felton, aged 86 years.

Rain put an end to the game of ball at Manchester last Thursday between the Clinton juniors and the Manchester —(we will not call them the grammar nine, for but three were in the game,) before the fourth inning was completed. As far it went the game was interesting. Our juniors were playing a stiff game. The Manchester's played their four innings and scored seven runs. Our boys in the first three innings scored three runs. When the rain came down in their half of the fourth they had scored another run. The bases were full, Hause at the bat, to be followed by other sure batters and only one man out. Our boys would no doubt have won the game easily, for they had on their batting clothes and left the field with seven hits to their credit to Manchester's three. No knowing how many more hits they may have made had they been able to finish the inning.

Mrs. James Hause spent Sunday with Jackson friends.

James Bradner and daughter, Mame, write home that they reached Seattle on June 16th. On account of washouts and the coal famine they were obliged to take a circuitous route which made their trip much longer than they anticipated.

L. J. Leek went to Adrian Tuesday morning to attend the wedding of his sister, Ella, who was married that day to Rha Conklin, of Lansing, at the residence of her sister, Mrs. John Aldrich. Rha has charge of the broom department at the blind school and is well known here, being a son of the late Norman Conklin. Ella has passed the greater part of her life here and will be greatly missed by the whole community. All wish them a long and happy married life.

One of Dan Embler's colts indulged in a lively runaway yesterday morning. Mr. E. was cutting grass in the road north of town and the colt hitched to an open buggy and tied to a tree. In some way the colt got loose and started out at a lively rate, the buggy striking one of Jas. Halladay's trees and was left in a demoralized condition. With one thill, cross-bar and whiffletree dangling at its heels the colt ran to Franklin street, thence west to Ogden's corner and turning south took the railroad through the depot grounds, over cattle guards. He was followed by Leon Clark on his wheel who headed him off down by Will Silvers' and turned him into the lane in time to miss the freight which was coming. Leon finally caught and brought him back to town. This is the second time the colt has run away.

The game of ball Saturday was a model one. There was no wrangling among the players or kicking at the decisions of the umpire and the crowd preserved perfect order, thus showing that it is not necessary to have such exhibitions as are frequently seen on the diamond. The Y. M. C. A. boys are perfect gentlemen and good players. The game was interesting from start to finish and but for a slight shower early in the game no interruptions. The game moved off rapidly and smoothly. Umpire Southard was prompt and impartial in his decisions and would not countenance any foolishness. The game was very close all through, which kept the interest at fever heat. It abounded in brilliant plays, both by fielders and the infield of each team. Some costly errors were made but the game was won by our boys being the heaviest hitters. The Adrians made two fine double plays and Bice's home run was a beauty. These were heartily applauded by the spectators. Below is the score:

Adrian.	0	0	2	1	5	1	0	0	0	—9

OBITUARY.

Died, in Adrian, June 19th, 1894, of consumption, Len L. Rogers, son of Geo. W. Rogers, aged 18 years, 5 months and 19 days.

In February he came to Tecumseh to visit his sister, Mrs. Emma Vedder, hoping that a rest might be a benefit. He soon began to fail and was unable to get home until a few days before his death. He felt that he could not live long, and was anxious to be taken home; his desire was granted by his friends, they carrying him home on a bed. He lived only four days, just long enough to see his many friends and bid them good-bye. He was a patient sufferer, and went home trusting in his Savior.

CARD OF THANKS.

To the many friends who so kindly extended sympathy and words of comfort, and brought such beautiful flowers and in many other ways rendered assistance to our son and brother, we would extend our heartfelt thanks.

MR. AND MRS. GEO. W. ROGERS.
MRS. EMMA VEDDER.

LENAWEE COUNTY G. A. R.

Their Annual Gathering held at Tecumseh, last Thursday. A Good Program and an Interesting Reunion.

The fifth annual reunion of the Lenawee Co. G. A. R. Association, in conjunction with the W. R. C. was held in Military Park, Tecumseh, Thursday, June 21st. The monument in the park and the speakers stand were very tastefully decorated with national colors, and with flags. The old veterans began to arrive about 9 o'clock and by 11, quite a number, together with their wives and children, were on the grounds. All were around with their lunch baskets, and had a hearty hand shake and a welcoming smile for everone.

The morning session was called to order at 11 o'clock, by Prest. J. B. Kessler, of Clayton. After an opening selection "Addison Hunter's March", by the Tecumseh Society Orchestra, the divine blessing was invoked by Rev. J. P. Varner. The orchestra followed with "Amanda Galop".

J. H. Smith, Prest. of the village, in a few well chosen words, bade the association a cordial welcome to the village. He was followed by the Prest. of the Association, J. B. Kessler, who thanked the village for their hospitality, and who said that although he was not a Michigan soldier, and although he went to the war under the command of the state of Iowa, yet today he was proud to be among the G. A. R. of the loyal old state of Michigan. This completed the morning progam, and the meeting then adjourned for dinner.

During the noon recess, badges for '94 were sold for twenty-five cents, to defray the expenses of the meeting. The W. R. C. provided tables and dishes, and served coffee to all, in connection with the basket picnic dinner.

After an hour of sociability, the afternoon session was called to order by the President. The roll was then called, the G. A. R. posts represented were: Ryder Post, Deerfield; Becker Post, Ogden; Scott Blissfield; Woodbury, Adrian; Eaton Post, Britton; Addison Post, Addison; Baker Post, Morenci; Corbett Post, Palmyra; Rowley Post, Clayton; Beers Post, Tecumseh.

After singing "America" by the audience, and a selection by the orchestra, Hon. Willard Stearns came forward and made the address of the afternoon. He spoke on liberty and freedom, showing that the same spirit of liberty which inspired our Puritan forefathers, and the same spirit which actuated that great statesman, Patrick Henry, when he exclaimed "Give me liberty or give me death," was identical with the spirit which prompted the boys of '61 to go out and battle for their country. He paid tribute to the fallen comrades, and finished by censuring the present pension laws; saying that where one man now got a pension, who did not deserve it there were 500 men who did deserve a pension, who did not get it.

This oration was followed by a quartette singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

The orchestra then rendered a selection, which was followed by a very neat flag salute by Miss Preston and her school of twenty girls, from Fractional Dist. No. 1, of Raisin.

The minutes of the last meeting were then read by the Secretary, Mrs. Jennie Kessler, of Clayton, and the election of officers for '95 resulted as follows:

Prest.—J. H. Reynolds, Adrian.
Vice-Prest.—S. E. Graves, Adrian.
Lady Vice-Pres—Mrs. S. E. Graves, Adrian.
Sec.—H. W. Stevens, Tecumseh.
Treas.—Byron Stansbury, Blissfield.

The exercises of the day were then concluded with a select reading "Our Unseen Guests" by Miss Hattie Somers, and the company then dispersed, feeling that they had spent the time well, in renewing old friendships and aquaintances. The place of meeting next year was left for a committee to decide upon. Much credit is due to the executive committee of Beer's Post, which was J. D. Shull, H. W. Stevens and Mrs. Jennie Avery, and also to the arrangement committee, Comrades Hanley, Sweet and VanTyne.

THE LADIES.

The pleasant effect and perfect safety with which ladies may use the California liquid laxative, Syrup of Figs, under all conditions, makes it their favorite remedy. To get the true and genuine article, look for the name of the California Fig Syrup Co., printed near the bottom of the package.

There was a large attendance at the W.C.T.U. ice cream social, held on Mrs. John Arner's lawn, Wednesday evening of last week. The time was spent very pleasantly, as M. Claude Bennett, who was spending a few days with friends, gave several selections with his phonograph, which were listened to very attentively by all. The society realized $15.45 for their labor.

On Thursday afternoon of last week, at the home of Lester Osgood, occured the mariage of his daughter Jennie to Prof. Frederic R. Gorton of the State Normal, Rev. Harley Cansfield performing the marriage service. With two or three exceptions, aside from the parents and sisters of the contracting parties, only cousins were present. The presents were numerous, useful and valuable. After a few weeks visiting among relatives, the young couple will make preperations for house-keeping and will be found at their home in Ypsilanti, after Sept. 15th. We in behalf of the many friends congratulate Mr. Gorton in his choice of a wife, as the bride is a most estimable young lady, with superior qualities. She leaves a large circle of school mates and friends, who wish for her a prosperous and happy journey through life, and can assure Mr. Gorton that our loss is his gain.

A MAN OF THE PEOPLE.

Short Sketch of the Life of the Democratic Standard Bearer.

Spencer O. Fisher is a Michigander through and through. He was born on a farm in Camden, Hillsdale county, February 3, 1843, and ever since has made the state his home. The story of his life runs parallel with that of many who are or have been men of mark in the nation—men who started with nothing but natural energy and indomitable perseverance, that were not deterred by any obstacle, however forbidding it might appear. He had limited opportunities for attending school while working on the farm, but when he did attend he absorbed all that a country teacher could give him. The world has since been his college, and contact with bright minds in the flesh and continued and close acquaintance with the best thought in literature, have contributed to make him a man of wide knowledge of men and affairs. When he was 17 or 18 years of age he left the farm to enter the employ of the firm of Sutton & Fisher, lumber dealers, who shipped their product east. He remained with that firm four years and then became a clerk in a "general store," and for three years made himself indispensable to his employers, Hill & Marvin. It is related that his agreement with the firm was that he was to receive $200 per year, but as he was not a "clock-watcher," and devoted himself assiduously to the firm's interests, they voluntarily paid him $600 for the year's work, and continued to raise his salary until they were paying him over $1,000 a year. That is the spirit that has animated Mr. Fisher during all of his life; if a thing be worth doing, it is worth doing well. He then branched out in business for himself, and was successful, of course.

In 1871, he thought he saw fortune in the Saginaw Valley and selling out his prosperous business settled at what is now West Bay City. He engaged in lumbering and from the start was successful. His business grew extensively in the town of his adoption. Anything that would benefit West Bay City he was for first, last and all the time. The question of profit never cut any figure with him; if the proposed scheme would add to the comfort, the convenience or the prosperity of the inhabitants of the city he threw his energy and wealth into the affair, and never let go until the enterprise proved a success. It is a dominent characteristic of Mr. Fisher to keep at a thing until it is moulded to his satisfaction. No halfway measures suit him; it is full length or none. He did not confine his energy to West Bay City alone. Bay City felt his influence for good. The inhabitants of both places are a unit—when it comes to a eulogy of this enterprising, hustling scion of the Wolverine state.

Mr. Fisher was married in 1867 to Miss Kate H. Crane, of Hillsdale, and the union was a happy one, the family now consisting of three daughters. They have a magnificent home at West Bay City, one of the finest in the state, and they entertain lavishly. Mr. Fisher is never so happy as when he has friends about him at his home and table. As a consequence the Fisher family is famous for its hearty hospitality.

He came first into politics at his home in West Bay City, when he was first induced to run for the office of mayor in 1882. He wrested that municipality from years of Republican rule. He was re-elected two years later, and the following fall was chosen as the standard-bearer of the Democracy for congress in the tenth district. Although the district was Republican by a large majority, Mr. Fisher was elected by a flattering vote, receiving a large Republican indorsement. At the expiration of his term he again led his party to victory and contiqued to look after the interests of his district at the national capital until January 1, 1889. To his indefatigable efforts are the people of Bay City indebted for the magnificent government building recently completed, and also for the holding of terms of the United States Circuit and District Courts there.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

Farmers' Home Reading Club.

Two letters were received last week by the Farm and Dairy editor, asking for particulars regarding the F. H. R. C. This is a home course of reading in agriculture, horticulture, dairying, etc., on the Chautauqua plan. It is a grand thing for our farmers, their wives, sons, daughters and the "hired man." Write Prof. F. B. Mumford, Sec'y., Agricultural College, Mich. We are reading this course and could not be hired to drop it. We expect to keep at it (in spite of the tariff, or the exit of silver) until we "graduate." Too much cannot be said in favor of this course for our young farmers who have had no opportunity to pursue a course of study at the Agricultural College. In these days it is almost criminal to live in ignorance. The well-informed, educated, practical, hard working business farmer is the one who ought to make the most money, and he generally does. He who wills may win.—Michigan Farmer.

THE TROTTING MATINEE.

The first trot of the season, here in Tecumseh, came off last Saturday afternoon, and considering the torrid state of the weather, the meeting was a decided success. There were three good races, every heat being driven to a close, and four wheelmen ended the days doings with a quarter mile bicycle dash. The attendance was good from all the towns in this section of the county. The first race was called at two o'clock and the last was finished about six o'clock. The judges were Granville Lyman, of Onsted, who acted as starter, John Gregory, of Adrian, and Eugene Piper, of Buffalo. Everything moved along harmoniously and both horsemen and spectators were perfectly satisfied with the program. Below is a full summary:

ADMINISTRATOR'S SALE.

For the purpose of making distribution and closing up the administration of the estate of William C. Heck, deceased, the undersigned administrator has secured license from the probate court for the county of Lenawee and has also the consent of the widow and all the heirs of said deceased to sell the property known as the Tecumseh Steam Mills. Said mill was thoroughly overhauled and refitted with Roller Process about two years ago. Is 2½ stories high above basement. Mill is 40x76 feet. Engine room is 20x70 feet. Is of fifty barrel capacity, has a good feed run and buckwheat run bolts. Is located but 3 blocks from the business center of a village of about 3,000 inhabitants. Has good reputation, a fine custom trade, has plenty of land for storage of wood, coal, etc., good sheds for customers' teams, and in my judgment is good investment for any man who wants a nice, steady income without large investment.

There will also be sold on the same day one of the finest resident properties in Tecumseh, consisting of a lot 5x12 rods, in the western part of the village on the corner of Chicago and Van Buren streets, well set with trees and small fruits. A commodious barn, a beautiful house comparatively new, built about four years ago, with hot and cold bath, Fire grates, city water for lawn and garden purposes. Beautiful lawn, fine substantial walks and nine elegant rooms.

The sale will take place on the respective premises on the 17th day of July, 1894, begining at 10 o'clock a. m.

This is the best chance to purchase an elegant home and a good business that has been offered in this locality within the last decade.

Any further information regarding said property will be cheerfully given if you will call on or address,

JAMES H. HECK, Administrator, Tecumseh, Lenawee county, Michigan.

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia; land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000·00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. A Warning From the Living.

Emissions Cured. "At 15 I learned a bad habit. Had losses for seven years. Tried four doctors and nerve tonics by the score, without benefit. I became a nervous wreck. I am now married and have two healthy children." C. W. LEWIS, Saginaw, Mich.

Syphilis Cured. "This terrible blood disease was in my system for eight years. Had taken mercury for two years, but the disease returned. When Independence day comes round,
Je-whit-i-ker! How father sings!
You'd think he had a pair of wings,
And mortgage on the world of sound!
He struts about quick, as a bird
Until a rester by a worm is he.
His stare-like gait seems so absurd.
Aloft he leaps with cock, crik, crik
At every patriotic word
When Independence day comes round.

When Independence day appears
Je-whit-i-ker! But father's shirt
If clings half dare it show its shape.
Just ready to explode with tears,
He sees we're not in mother's dress so plain.
He harries up the morning chore
And should there fail a single pail
He'll cuss a very whirlpool roars.
If storms? how he cows creation
When Independence day appears

When Independence day doth come,
Je-whit-i-ker! But father's voice
Keeps bidding all mankind "Rejoice."
It seems a patriotic drum.
He'll proudly don his Sunday clothes,
His shoes are blacked, a shiny hue
He to the celebration goes
Where farmer politicians [illegible] vends,
And change of harvest hands proposes—
When Independence day doth comes.

When Independence day gets here
Je-whit-i-ker! Then father's joy
Makes him appear an awkward boy,
With acts and language oh, so queer!
The stories that escape his lips
The actions that proclaim the day,
Our highest ideals all eclipse—
He gives his memory full play
And patriotism grips and grips
When Independence day gets here.

When Independence day arrives
Je-whit-i-ker! No day of earth
Has quite so much of regal worth—
Oh day on which our freedom thrives!
Day of all days! We date from thee
Man's splendid birth to grander powers,
Thou spirit of the great and free,
Oh day of sunshine and of flowers
Our freedom came from God through thee
When Independence day arrives.

It was advertised, by written notices stuck on trees, by deputy sheriffs whose business it was to ride throughout the country, by the cross-roads merchant, and even by the circuit-rider himself, that the Fourth of July would be appropriately celebrated in Wilson's Bend. Where could there be a more hidden community than Wilson's Bend? No soldiers found their way into this neighborhood, no one enlisted here, no recruiting officer came with his red, white and red cockade, no drum rumbled and no fife screamed. Indeed, when the country's great attack of indigestion took place, Wilson's Bend was completely left out of the reckoning. It has been said, and with more or less truth, that the war was not heard of until after it was over, and that great indignation was then expressed by the leading citizen of the community. "Why, we'd ought 'em all," said he, "what made 'em want to keep the thing so close fur? Jest had a rip snortin' time and never let a feller know nothin' about it. It's human natur', though. The older we git the closer we keep our affairs to ourselves."

It is not my intention, however, to tell of the characteristics of this peculiar community, nor to describe the habits of the people, neither shall I give in detail an account of the celebration, but shall reproduce the speech of an old negro made on that occasion. A newspaper had sent me to the mountains to gather what facts I could concerning the murder of a United States marshal who indiscreetly had asked for a night's lodging at the house of an illicit distiller. He was not only provided for overnight, but was given an apartment for all eternity.

I arrived upon the scene of the celebration just before Big Alf got up to address the crowd. The white orators had made their speeches, "filled up" and were asleep in the shade. What an enormous fellow old Alf was, now solemnly he spoke and how characteristically did he give the negro version of the war for independence. It was the first time that I had heard the birth of our liberty discussed from that point of view and I found it full of interest. And so here is the speech, almost word for word:

"You niggers dat has dun eat ez much ez you kin hold an' now ain't got nothin' ter do but ter lissun ter dis yere truth, eat I'se handin' out, doan' know how dis country wuz 'pressed at one time. Does you know, Uncle Lon?" he asked, nodding at an old man.

"I kain't say dat I does, sah, 'caze I'se been so powerful busy lately dat I ain't had time ter 'vestigate it."

"Why, why didn't you 'arn' suthin 'bout it, fo' you got busy?"

"Well, I jest tell you dat 'fo' er man gits busy he ain't got sense ernuff ter kere whuther he knows er thing ur not. However, I'se glad dat I has put it off till dis time 'caze now I'se got er wise man ter teach me."

The speaker bowed. "It's er monstus pleasure ter talk ter sich er smart an' 'telligent man ez you is, Uncle Lon, an'

OLD ALF DELIVERING HIS ORATION.

it do do me good ter see you. Well, dis country wuz powerful 'pressed at one time an' w'en er man come home at night he didn't know what wuz gwine take place fo' mornin.' Dis country wuz owned by de white folks at dat time jest de same ez now, but, buss yo' life, de white folks wuz owned by er king. Role on, now, I'm tellin' you. Owned by er kings an' in dem days er king was higher den de ace. So dar wuz de white folks an' dar wuz de king. De king said 'work' an' de white folks worked long wit' de niggers dat on owned. De king said: 'Gimme dat money' dat you got fur dat cotton,' an' de white folks had ter gib up. An' it went on dis way till it got ter be mighty tiresome. I tell you. In dem days dar didn't 'pear ter be no Fourth o' July, but 'scuse mine, de folks knowed dat one was comin' putty soon. Well, one day de king come 'long de big road an' he say ter his deputy sheriff dat de folks wuz monstus fond o' tea, an' den he 'lowed, he did, dat it would be er monstus good idea ter tax de tea. De white folks didn't say nuthin', but w'en de king had dun tuck dar tea 'way fruin 'em an' put it on er steamboat ga went down ter de landin', grabbed de fus fam de deputy sheriff an' flung it inter de riber an' den say ter de king: 'Help yo'se'f, sah. Good mornin.' An' now, jest ez luck would hab it, de Fourth o July come at dis time. Laws er massy, how dem folks fit! Wy, dar fit fust in one place an' den in ernudder an' long come Marse George Washington an' fit all ober at de same time. Laws er massy, de dust riz up like er drove o' mules dun gone down de lane; an' it wan't no dead sho' thing which side gwine whup. I tell you, but de fust thing you know Marse George he got de king down. 'Does you gib up?' says he. 'Not yit,' lows de king, an' den dey kep on er skuffilin'. 'Now does you gib up?' axed Marse George. But de king studied er little while an' sorter scratched his head an' says: 'Well, seein's dat it's you, I blebe I does,' an' he did. Well, after dis de country waz free, an' er gubermen' wuz 'stablished what 'lowed er man ter keep er part o' de money what nachuly 'longed ter him an' fellers citizens, it's er mighty fine thing ter be 'lowed ter keep dat what 'longs ter you. An' dat's whar de 'spression comes from: 'I'se gwine ter hold my own.' Of cose, dis is jest er story dat I'se tellin' you; but, comin' down ter de serious fack, we ought never ter stop thankin' de Lawd fur de liberty dat we'se got dis day. I'se talked ter er good many folks—I'se traveled er good deal—I has been 'way ober ter Spencer's branch an' down de county road ez fur ez de big mill; I has clim' ole Eagle Nest mountain an' seed mighty nigh all de worl' frum dat high p'int, an' I wanter say Peterby—Come, Susan, hurry up. Here it is nine o'clock and we want to enjoy all of this glorious Fourth.

Mrs. Peterby—We must not be unprepared, William. Have you got the liniment and bandage?

"They are packed away with the cholera mixture and the headache remedy."

"And the directions in case of drowning?"

"In my pocket with the 'sunstroke rules.'"

An Even Thing.

Bilter—Look here, old man! that boy of yours put a big firecracker under my window at four o'clock this morning and woke me up. Now what are you going to do about it?

Muggins—I'll tell you what I'll do, old fellow. You put one of your triplets under my window to-morrow morning at four o'clock and I'll call it square.—Judge.

A Wrong Impression.

Mrs. Twickenham—Oh, dear, that bad boy let off a big firecracker in the pantry, and I am afraid that angel cake I made for you is ruined.

Twickenham—Unph! I don't believe any firecracker would hurt your angel cake.

Mrs. Twickenham—Well, it did. There's a big dent in it.—Truth.

Good for the Purpose.

Willie—Papa, give me some money to buy some punk with.

Slimson—Use those cigars your mother got for me the other day.—Truth.

A CIRCUS

ON THE BILL-BOARDS

circus on circus day are two kinds of a thing. The greatest circus ally on the Bill-boards, and the circus on Circus Day is consequently ppointment. There is, of course, the occasional exception which s the rule. McCormick Binders and Mowers are an exception. Their se on the "Bill-boards" is always fulfilled on "Circus Day." For the makers of McCormick Grain and Grass Harvesters have been the World that they could and would at any time demonstrate the iority of their machines in the actual competitive field test. The boards" of other manufacturers have glaringly proclaimed that their ines are the best. But "Circus Day" came at length. The World's urged all these manufacturers to take their machines into the field he results might be compared. The McCormick was there; its show on. It's promises to the World were carried out. But how about her "great and onlys"? They stayed at home consoling themselves the reflection that "the people like to be humbugged," and their got up new pictures for the "Bill-boards." Before deciding about into these field trials, the competitors of the McCormick went and ined the crops to be cut, and realizing the severity of the conditions, said to themselves: "We don't propose to come here and compete the McCormick;"—"a live coward is better than a dead hero;"—"a r is born every minute, and we'll catch some of 'em anyway." policy may answer for the "Bill-board" sort of circus; it will not do he McCormick. Promises must not be broken. If McCormick ines are not better than all others, they must not be so advertised. ey are so advertised, every Binder, every Reaper and every Mower e ready at a moment's notice to go out into the field and show up. 's business. Write to the McCormick Harvesting Machine Co., ago;—or, better yet, call at once on your nearest McCormick agent.

CHAS. A. SLAYTON, Agent, Tecumseh.

Think well, I beg of you, of the Fourth of July.

Rate it second among the feast days of the earth; for it was only in giving Christ to the nations that other is rated first.

Scorn the man who scoffs at the Fourth of July. If you have children, teach them that man is no patriot. Train your pulses to thrill on this dawning of days. Reflect on the signing. Imagine the ringing of Liberty bell. Read the great declaration, and warm the corners of your heart with its majestic fire.

Set a flag at your window. Light crackers by day, and pierce the sky of night with rockets. Let eye and ear and nostril herald to the brain a nation's natal day has come.

Be patient with those who weary of the Fourth of July. Be patient but strong. On the altar of their hearts kindle a little of the fire, American patriot, that burns on your own. Feed it with reason. Fan it with hope. Enlarge it with the oil of glory. For the sum of our greatness is not yet half way to the zenith. And while Columbia's sons still love the stars and stripes, while they revere Bunker Hill and honor Washington, while they greet with hearty cheers each returning Fourth of July, that sun shall never decline to evening.

This is the best country. The larger race of a riper time finds here its richest home. Blessed is the child that is born here. Wise is the man that uses the good that awaits him here. Grand is the woman that fills out the destiny permitted American matrons.

For across the chill waste of Atlantic's waves has come an army of peace that has conquered our bravery. On its unsympathetic ears our cheers for the Fourth of July fall flat. Before its indifferent eye our flag is but cloth. To its million of children our history is a closed and unknown volume. Open that book, I beg of you, and read to them the noble deeds of American freemen. From the love in your heart glorify that flag of the free. With patriotic fervor teach them the music of "Hail, Columbia!" And atune the whole land to the hymn of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Or, if we fail in this, our nation shall die. The fires that burned dim and fitfully at Valley Forge, that sprung to heat at Trenton, that leaped and crackled in exuberant heat at Charleston, that mounted again at New Orleans, that would not be quenched at Gettysburg nor Richmond—this fire shall dwindle and die, till only the blackened ruins of hope shall tell where stood the American homes; till only the ashes of despair, wetted by tears of our sorrow, shall tell of a national disaster.

Think well, I pray you, of the Fourth of July.

A BARMECIDE PICNIC.

"AH, THIS is pleasant, indeed," remarked young Mr. Brownsmith, as the excursion train steamed out of the depot on the morning of Independence day. "My little picnic will be a grand success."

"You called it my picnic a while ago, when you were complaining because the train was late," replied Mrs. Brownsmith, who had just gotten a cinder in her eye.

"I only meant that it was gotten up in your honor."

"Oh! I didn't know. And you say the place where we are to spend the day is not near any farmhouse?"

"None at all. Trains do not stop there regularly, but this, being an excursion one, will let us off."

"But suppose it rains."

"Impossible; we shall have a delightful day."

"I hope so. My arms ache with carrying all these packages."

"One has to carry a good deal going where you can't possibly get anything. Still I see no use in that novel and camp stool."

"If you expect me to sit on a snaky stump and watch you fishing, you're mistaken."

"You could take care of the fish."

"Unnecessary, dear; I've been fishing with you before."

"Just let me take a look at that tackle, will you?"

"Why, where—goodness, Percy, I must have left it behind! I remember, I set it down in the waiting-room when you said my hat was on crooked."

"Good gracious! That's like a woman—can't be trusted to do anything. The day is ruined."

"Well, fishing is a cruel sport, anyhow. Can't—can't you use a bent pin and the string off one of the boxes?"

"You lost your senses, too, it seems. Couldn't you even take care of that?"

"I had also your two papers, a box of cigars, my parasol, my handbag, a bottle of ginger, in case we should be ill, and my overshoes. While you—"

"Had only your gossamer, umbrella, camp stool and novel, a coffee pot, my fishing rod and the lunch basket."

"Oh! I'm hungry; do get out the lunch basket. The sardines are in the left-hand corner, over the pie."

"Where is the lunch basket?"

"I haven't seen it since you set it down to show our tickets."

"And I forgot to pick it up again! Clara, we haven't a bite to eat all day, and the nearest farmhouse is twelve miles away."

And then the engine whistled for their crossing.

THE SOLDIERS OF '76.

WITH head erect the soldier boy
Stands in the village market place;
His father's stay, his mother's joy—
The proudest of the populace.

The steeple clangs its brazen bliss,
The guns their iron glee declare;
The patriot feels a manliness
Enter his breast and tarry there.

He rests his musket on the grass,
Its brightness shows a brother's pride.
The miller's daughter, bless the lass!
Fashioned the sword-knot at his side.

What knoweth he of war, this youth
Reared in the tranquil arts of peace?
War's lesson soon is learned, in truth,
When shackled nations seek release!

The cheers ring down the fearless line.
Congress hath issued a decree,
In language burning, just divine:
'Tis read, that Title of the Free.

'Tis read; from many a tender cheek
A telltale tear is brushed away.
And age exclaims, in utterance weak:
"Would I were younger than to-day!"

'Tis read, and souls that long have pined
In thralldom's cheerless, sable night,
Rejoice, like those from cradle blind
When first they see the morning light.

But freedom smiles upon the strong,
Spurning the weaker sons of men,
Till tyrants blush to do a wrong—
The sword must ever aid the pen!

He fought, that brave young villager!
He fought for that which could not fail;
He fought for parents, home—for her!
But came not back to tell the tale!

When "Yorktown" rang the country o'er
And bade unfettered pulses throb,
A comrade brought the knot he wore,
And they thanked Heaven through a sob!

Before the glorious day arose
To dash away the prison's gloom;
Before the nightshade bore a rose,
He found a soldier's nameless tomb!

Bold pioneer of human right,
Time vainly steals your mortal breath;
We see you still by freedom's light,
You live! You scorn the scythe of death!
—Thomas Frost, in N. Y. Herald.

Some Impossible Things.

Like a field of clover without a bee,
Like a peacock with out a tail to spread,
Like mother's needle without a thread,
Like a grown-up world with out girls and boys
Is a Fourth or July without a noise.
—Anna M. Pratt, in Youth's Companion.

His Turn Now.

"What a horrid noise you are making," exclaimed Susie Shattuck to her little brother, "banging your torpedoes and firecrackers all over the place!"

"Why shouldn't I?" retorted Freddy. "You indulge in banging your hair all the year round."—Detroit Free Press.

One More Unfortunate.

They find him where he moaning lies
And in his bed they tuck him.
He tried to celebrate the day,
And never knew what struck him.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. THE HIGH SCHOOL ALUMNI.

Program of the Reunion Exercises Held at the Baptist Church.

The regular annual meeting of the High School Alumni Society was held on Friday evening, June 22nd, at the Baptist church parlors. Although it was a very sultry evening and the prospects for a good literary program were not favorable, as many of the appointees were absent, still there was a good attendance and the exercises were much beyond expectation. The executive committee hit upon a good plan for the meeting. The lower parlor of the Baptist church was filled with tables, and the upper parlor served as a reception room. The menu, provided by the B. Y. P. U., was somewhat out of the usual order, but it was "just the thing" for a hot night, and the tickets were only twenty-five cents each. This part of the program was very nicely arranged and splendidly carried out, much to the credit of the young people of the Baptist church, who had charge of it.

The fore part of the evening as the members arrived was pleasantly spent in social converse and at nine o'clock the guests gathered about the tables to listen to the literary exercises. These proved to be an agreeable surprise. For over an hour the members were entertained with addresses, short talks and letters which were decidedly spicy and interesting. Prof. Kellogg, the President of the society called the assemblage to order and announced the program in the following order.

Prayer by Rev. F. C. Fistler.

The next in order was music which was furnished by Miss Jennie Root and George Knapp, and they provided the music during the remainder of the evening.

Prof. Kellogg, in a few brief remarks extended a cordial welcome to the class of '94, and Philip M. V. Keusch, president of the class, gave a neat and tasty response.

A. O. Howard, the orator of the evening, who was appointed as alternate last year, was then introduced and entertained his hearers with an excellent address. It was full of good points and was [illegible] delivered. As the speech was impromptu we can give only a brief synopsis of it. His theme was "Education in Everyday Life."

The speaker held the nominating committee responsible for his part in the program and said he could talk to better advantage about hayseed and pumpkins. The majority of people are everyday persons in touch with practical life. Life is a problem. Some would solve it one way, some another. Education is a help toward higher living. Some say we live in a circle, but why not make the circle a spiral rising higher each day. School days are pleasant. The speaker referred to the eventful first school day when the kind teacher took him on her knee and explained to him the mysterious twenty-six characters. He incidentally remarked that when learning the German alphabet in the high school the teacher was not nearly as solicitous of his welfare. Education trains the mind for all kinds of work and enables us to better direct our energies. Educated labor is an important factor in a nation's prosperity. As citizens we need trained minds. Better associations result from mental culture. Let us educate ourselves to the end that we may live honest, ennobling, useful lives.

The History was divided into two sections—classes of '85 and '86. The class of '85 consisted of six members: Lyster H. Dewey, Will H. Hayden, S. Mabel Hayden, Frank H. Hall, Rose M. Hendershot and Herbert L. McNair. In the absence of Miss Rose Hendershot, the historian, letters were read from most of the members of the class by Miss Etta Coddington. These letters were full of interest, especially to the older members present, and we give them in full below.

The class of '86 consisted of Inez M. Laing, Margaret L. Clarkson, Will S. McNair and Walter C. Burridge. Mr. Burridge filled the role of historian. As he had been unable to prepare a written biography of the class, he put in ten minutes time most acceptably in recounting some of his own and his classmates' experience during their undergraduate days. His address came very timely and was one of the best features of the evening's program.

The nominating committee was then appointed, consisting of Harry McClure, Abner Wilson and Miss Edith Ingersoll.

Refreshments followed and after the menu was properly disposed of the program was passed over to Mr. Thos. H. Temple, who officiated as toastmaster. He announced each toast with a few apt remarks which kept the guests in good humor, and performed his role in a manner that elicited the praise of all. Following are the toasts with the persons responding:

The High School Graduate in Business—J. H. Smith.

Then and Now—D. T. Hall.

Hash—S. C. Stacy.

Business Education—H. H. McClure

The nominating committee then submitted their report, which was duly ratified. Here is the list of officers for next year:

President—Thos. H. Temple.
First Vice-President—H. H. Baker.
Second Vice-President—Miss Hattie Conklin.
Secretary—R. S. Moore.
Treasurer.—Raynor Anderson.
Orator—Dr. Geo. Howell.
Alternate—Fred J. Boyd.
Poet—Miss Grace Gillespie.
Alternate—Miss Lizzie Russell.
Historian—S. W. Anderson.
Alternate—E. C. Norcross.
Toastmaster.—L. M. Waldron.
Alternate—Daniel T. Hall.
Executive Committee—Philip M. V. Keusch, Willis Finch, Miss Cora Payne and Miss Grace Heesen.

THE LETTERS.

Below are the letters which were read from Capt. Will Hayden, Frank H. Hall, Lyster H. Dewey and Miss Mabel Hayden. As they are both entertaining and possessed of historical value we offer no apology for giving them entire:

MISS ROSE HENDERSHOT,

DEAR FRIEND:—My first effort at doing anything was commenced the morning after graduation, by working for Mr. Hillman on his dairy farm. After ten days of this I commenced in the mill as a day hand, staying there one year, when I was compelled to quit on account of the dust. That winter I spent my time under the charge of Col. C. M. Woodward, then our family doctor. In the following spring I started out as an embryo wheat buyer and flour salesman, continuing so for two years, at the end of which time I became interested in the railroad street livery and severed my connection with the mill. I stayed in the livery as a partner until August, 1891, when I assumed the business, selling out in July of the following year to enter the mill office as bookkeeper, in which capacity I still am. Trusting my simple history will meet all requirements.

I remain sincerely,
W. H. HAYDEN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 16, 1894.
MISS ROSE M. HENDERSHOT,
1 Beecher Street,
Adrian, Mich.

DEAR MISS HENDERSHOT.

In response to your note of June 11, I send sketch of my life since leaving the T. H. S.

In August of '85, after spending a few weeks on the home farm, I entered the Michigan Agricultural College. Here I soon met our classmate, Dewey, and for three pleasant and profitable years we shared rooms, confidences and college scrapes. We were joined the next spring by Hillman, who for a long time was a member of the class of '85, and for a short period by Burns, a T. H. S. boy in the time of the G. C. Q. and A. F. G., so that the same pleasant old school days seemed only transferred to new scenes. But alas! the G. C. Q.'s were not represented at Lansing.

In August of '88 with the others of the Tecumseh trio I took my sheepskin and started—not exactly out into the world—but to help others along the path I had lately trod, being selected as instructor in mathematics at my Alma Mater. Two more years quickly passed in very pleasant work, one of these winters being spent, as one of those in my student life had been, in a district school near Tecumseh. My other winter I devoted to gaining a little practical knowledge of civil engineering by work on the line of the M. C. R. R. This practical application of college acquired theory enabled me to pass a successful examination as topographer in the U. S. Irrigation Survey and I was informed that my services would be required immediately.

I had not sufficiently mastered the old adage "A bird in hand is worth two in the bush," and resigned my instructorship. Congress failed to provide for continuing the survey, so I found myself "in the ashes between two chairs."

Then followed a year as principal of the grammar grades of the Pontiac city schools, but that proving too hard on my temper and health, I declined reappointment at the end of the year and tried farm life again. My life at home continued until October 15, 1892, when I came to Washington to take a position in the War Department. Here I remained a year, passing unhurt through the wreck of the old Ford's Theatre, and now am librarian and bibliographer in the office of experiment stations of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. My work is very interesting and instructive, as I have charge not only of the bulletins and reports of the fifty American experiment stations, but also of a vast amount of English, French, German and Italian literature upon Agriculture and its allied sciences.

I was married at Tecumseh, October 28, 1891, to May E. Avery, who until our senior year was a member of our class; and we now have a boy a year and a half old, who is lively enough to keep our spare moments busy, and entertaining enough to keep the smiles ever on the faces of those about him.

We are about to move into a cosy little home in a pleasant corner of this beautiful city, where we will always be glad to see any of the Tecumseh alumni, and to talk over the happy old school days and the varied events of life.

In the memory of '85.
F. H. HALL.

1337 WALLACH PLACE, N. W.,
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 16, 1894.

Miss Rose Heudershot, Adrian, Mich.

My dear Friend and Classmate.—Your letter asking for a full confession of my deeds and misdeeds during the past few years brings vividly to my mind a warm June evening ten years ago. The six of us forming the double triumvirate, twice as important in our own minds as the historical triumvirate of old, stood under that glorious motto of '85, "per Aspera ad astra" and with much inward trembling and outward boldness gave to our elders sage advice about running the government and other matters of which we knew not. As our motto indicated we were after the stars that night, but since then I think that most of us have been satisfied with the earth.

Two nights after that eventful 26th of June, and after my name had been enrolled with those of the justly celebrated Alumni of our Alma Mater, I betook myself to my father's farm and pursued the aforesaid stars through the prosaic difficulties of cultivating potatoes, moving among bumblebees and plowing among bluejackets. My memory faintly reminds me that these last-mentioned incidents were productive of stars.

In September of '85, having arrived at the conclusion that more learning might be added to my store which was certainly complete and exhaustive in June, I packed my grip and went to Lansing, where I was soon a full-fledged sophmore in one of Michigan's grandest and best institutions of learning, the mother of Agriculture Colleges in America, and the model of its kind through the world, the Michigan Agricultural College. Frank Hall, one of the sturdy ball players of '85, was with me and we roamed together. I sometimes had difficulty in getting him up to see the stars in the morning early enough to make the bed before breakfast, but when it came to scoring goose eggs in class his always had straight lines before them and mine didn't. Hillman, who ought to have belonged to '85, joined us in college, and I remember helping him to see stars one day when we were experimenting with electricity. In August 1888, after three years of work with chemicals, bugs, weeds and other agricultural accessories, I received my sheepskin with the privilege of writing B. S. after my name. The three long winter vacations while in college were spent in vain attempts to teach the young idea in certain district schools of northwestern Lenawee.

One week after receiving my college diploma I was engaged as an instructor in botany and assistant in the Experiment Station at the Agricultural Collegs. This exceedingly pleasant and fairly lucrative position furnished me with employment and bread and butter for two years, when a cosiderably increased salary attached to a nonpolitical position in my line of work, induced me to take the special civil service examination and, having passed, to come to Washington. Here for nearly four years I have been working almost under the shadow of the Washington Monument and at the opposite end of the Mall farm, that serious farce which which has earned the name of our 'double ring circus.' My works along the lines of economic and purely scientific botany is chiefly upon grasses and weeds of economic importance.

There still remains one phase of personal history, and to me a most interesting one, yet untold. While '85 was yet in its infancy in the second and third years of its high school life, it used to be said that "Dah," as we called our good Professor Hammond, thought that the boys and girls were rather too fond of each other, but with such girls as there were in those days, we boys couldn't help likin 'em, and the girls didn't object to being liked. In August 1889, four years after graduating in Tecumseh, I went back and brought one of the girls away. To her you may ascribe the credit that I have in some small measure succeeded well in my pursuit "per aspera ad astra" and there are not so many aspera to it as there otherwise might be. To complete our domestic felicity we have one small dimple-cheeked daughter, Grace Marguerite, who is endeavoring to train her parental papa up in the way he should go, as becomes a member of the honorable class of '85. Yours Sincerely,

L. H. DEWEY.

Of Old Mother Morey
And now my story's begun.
I'll tell you another
Of Jack and his brother
And now my story's done.

So it will be with my part of the history.

The winter after graduating and the Spring of '86, were spent in Detroit in the study of the violin at the Detroit Conservatory. The roseate dreams of the closing concert, were only realized in the still more roseate form of measles for me, and when my friends in the orchestra were taking off the palm, I was taking pills and powders to a very different tune. A closely cropped head was the result! After a summer at home I went to Grand Rapids to attend the wedding of Miss Lillian Berkey, who had the honor (?) you remember, classmates, of correcting the proof-sheets of the essays of our illustrious class.

The winter and spring '87-'88 were again spent in Detroit, this time not in the conservatory, but with Prof. L. F. Schultz, who had severed his connection with that institution and working independently, so now we were known as the Schultz Orchestra, and his tune, "Through difficulties not measley—to the Stars!" In Nov. '89, I again studied in Detroit, and till March 1890. Spent the summer at home teaching, and left, the latter part of August for Europe, in company with two young ladies from Ann Arbor and a large party from Detroit.

After a voyage of ten days we arrived in Antwerp. The trip down the Rhine was interesting for it gave some of us our first tangible idea of beautiful Old Ruins, vine-yards, german cooking; the river-came-dry, where the neighborly German women would bring their six month's collection of soiled clothes to the river's bank and all wash and gossip. Then we saw the famous bridge of boats connecting Ehrenbreitstein and Coblenz—and we saw the identical rock which served as a perch for Miss "Lorelis" when she would publicly get out the snarls from her tresses—with an 18 carat gold comb! I think I can appreciate Josiah Allen when he waited for the mermaid to "trot out that there comb, and begin to comb." I believe, I too doubt the genuineness of the comb. Perhaps it was no better than our horn combs after all.

Our party broke up in Leipsic, and the Ann Arbor girls and I went to Dresden September 18th to begin our studies under difficulties that a strange land and stranger language always present. But after a while we seemed to breathe in with the air, the Dutch, and to swallow it with the Saur-Kraut.

My summers were spent in travel—but I must stop. I could go on like the most active clap-traps but I won't. I'll be honest. I will tell you you can find a comfortable account of what Mark Twain and I both saw and did, even to witnessing a Heidelberg duel—you will find all in his "Innocents Abroad." In Jan. '93 I went to Italy, remaining 'till June, when I joined my sister in Paris, and we sailed from Southhampton for home reaching N. Y. June 15, '93. The time until Sept. was quietly spent at home and at Sand Lake.

About Sept. 1st. I started for the Lone Star State and located in Sherman, having accepted a position as teacher in violin and voice culture. After the usual many hardships and pleasures the year closed and I am back in good old Tecumseh. MABEL HAYDEN.

The great strike effects Adrian just this much: The Wabash freight service is entirely abolished, and Agent W. F. Bradley is refusing all perishable freight. The passenger service is somewhat crippled, west of Peru, and all tickets are sold subject to delays by strikes. The Lake Shore road has not yet begun to feel the strike here. The U. S. express company is taking goods except perishable goods for the Northern Pacific, must go at the owner's risk. Messrs. Robert W. Boyd, and Peter Spielman have received letters from the Swift Packing company, announcing that they will send out no more meat at present.—Evening Telegram.

Table Talk.

"Table Talk" for June will be a welcome guest in every household where it enters, it is so full and complete in all its departments, which are teeming with good things, demonstrating as usual its position as the American authority on culinary topics and asserting its popularity throughout the land. To the young and inexperienced housewife who has the care of the direction of the kitchen, its helpfulness is invaluable. This month we find it full of Menus for all sorts of occasions. One article of exceptional value and acknowledged authority is from the able pen of Miss Call, on the subject of "Physical Culture," written especially for this magazine. The "New Bill of Fare" department is brimful of information for progressive women, and the department of Luncheon and Tea Toilets is up to the latest notch. The Table Talk Publishing Co., Philadelphia will mail a sample copy of this magazine free to the readers of this paper. Price, $1.00 per year.

Public Opinion notes that "much interest has been aroused and much comment called forth by the alleged interview of Ex-Speaker Reed upon the Silver question," published in the London Fortnightly Review, suggesting that the countries favorable to free coinage of silver form a tariff union against the countries opposed to free coinage. This utterance of the Ex-Speaker, taken in connection with the Republican vote in the Senate upon the Lodge amendment to the tariff bill, embodying the same idea of tariff discrimination in favor of silver, has raised the question whether the Republican party will adopt this tariff-silver policy as a party tenet and go before the country upon that issue. The comment of the leading newspapers of the country, especially the Republican newspapers, upon this proposed policy is exceedingly interesting. Public Opinion in three late issues has reproduced extracts from a large number of prominent newspapers from all parts of the country upon this topic.

The big railroad strike is paralyzing business again.

Attorney John Bird, of Adrian, was in town Monday.

Most of Wm. Hayden's family are spending the present week at their Sand Lake cottage.

Rev. Edward Mott, of Raisin Valley, occupied the pulpit of the Friends church Sunday evening.

The local news market is exceedingly dull this week. The big railroad strike and 4th of July cover about the whole ground.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. McNeil started last Friday for Lansing, where they remain about ten days, visiting friends in the city.

A full attendance is desired at the next regular meeting of the O. E. S., Thursday evening, July 12. Business of importance.

Seven candidates received the right of baptism last Sunday evening at the Baptist church. The auditorium was crowded to suffocation and the services throughout were deeply impressive.

The Clinton team played the Y. M. C. A. nine on the grounds of the latter on Saturday. It was a plucky game on both sides but the Adrian club were the winners by a good score, 17 to 3.

The North Shore Hotel, formerly the Adams Hotel at Sand Lake, Mich., opens for the season July 2d. It is newly furnished, with new management, strictly first-class with popular prices. G. D. Kennedy, Proprietor and Manager.

Harley Temple, son of Palmer C. Temple, was visiting friends in town last week. It is eight years since he was here and people would hardly know him. He is filling a good position in a carriage manufactory at Harvey, Ill.

Frank Snedicor will occupy the north store of the new Temple when completed. He intends refitting his shop with the revolving and reclining barber's chairs of the latest pattern. T. H. Scott, of Ann Arbor, will work for him.

Eva Spayde has rented the double store on the ground floor of the new Masonic Temple block and will take possession as soon as they are completed. He has rented the north room fronting on railroad street to Frank Snedicor.

The summer school began its sessions last Monday morning in charge of Profs. Hogg and Daniels, with a very flattering attendance. Fifty-six names were enrolled the first forenoon. The regular attendance will probably be about sixty.

Forty probationers were admitted to membership in the M. E. church last Sunday morning, most of them receiving the right of baptism. The church was crowded and the services throughout were impressive. A portion of the number were baptised.

A very heavy thunder storm passed over this section last Thursday just at noon. In the north part of Deerfield township it did considerable damage. Barns were moved from their foundations, several windmills were blown down and orchards were badly damaged.

Rev. F. C. Fistler is now a full fledged Baptist. Last Sunday evening at the church he gave his reasons for a change in religious faith and was admitted into fellowship of the Baptist church. He was accorded an attentive hearing by an audience that crowded the church to suffocation.

Where did you celebrate the 4th?

Maud Emmett, of Philadelphia, is visiting friends in town for a few days.

The masons began work on the third story of the new block last Monday.

Our inside pages this week contain a fine assortment of 4th of July reading.

Do you want to buy a typewriter? Then read the card of the "National" on the second page.

A new banking institution was opened at Manchester last Saturday, called the Union Savings Bank.

Many of our citizens went away yesterday to celebrate, but more of them enjoyed the day quietly at home.

The friends of Master Fred Swan have received his graduating announcements, from a prominent college at Providence, Rhode Island.

Miss Mana Monaghan, who returned a few days ago from an extended Southern trip, left Saturday for Sand Lake to remain until the weather is cooler.

Andrew Ayres, of Cambridge, was in town Saturday and favored the HERALD with a friendly call. He says the farmers about Sand Lake are doing as well as could be expected in these hard times.

A copy of the Year Book of Albion College for '93-'94 is on our table. The attendance is larger than ever before, and the institution seems to be in a flourishing condition. Among the Freshmen we find the name of Walter E. Burnett of Tecumseh.

The Democratic State Convention held at Grand Rapids last week did its work well. A very strong ticket was placed in nomination and a good platform adopted. A biographical sketch of the nominee for governor, Spencer O. Fisher, appears elsewhere.

A special meeting of the First Universalist Parish of Tecumseh is called to assemble at the church on Saturday July 14th, at two o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing a treasurer of the Board of Trustees to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Albert Hyde and to transact such other business as may come before it.

A. W. Slayton reports that the wholesale lumber business is improving with him during the last few days he has shipped lumber from the following places in car lots: Basswood from Pigeon Mich.; Elm from Hudson, Mich.; Red Oak from Sylvania, Ohio; Basswood from Plymouth, Mich., Pine from Rosebush and Vanderbilt, Mich.; Basswood from Big Beaver, Mich.; Cherry from Harrietta, Mich. Loading a vessel this week at Oscoda.

The July Forum is not likely to be dull; for it is announced that Frederic R. Coudert, of New York, will publish an article in it on the "A. P. A." Mr. Coudert is most thoroughly "American" most thoroughly a Roman Catholic; and his attention to this secret organization is likely to make very interesting controversial matter indeed. As a companion-piece to Mr. Courdert's paper, Prof. J. B. McMaster, the historian, will write "The Career of the Old Know-Nothing party."

The Heesen family held a reunion yesterday afternoon. The residences of Geo. and John Heesen, which are located on the same lot on Union street, were both utilized for the purpose, and all the relation on both sides, with one or two exceptions, were present. Grandparents, fathers and mothers, children and grand-children were all there and it made an imposing gathering. It is unnecessary to add that all present had a jolly good time and considered it a good way to celebrate.

At the "Last Days of Pompeii" exhibition in Fort Wayne, June 30 and July 4th, and Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays thereafter, 350 correctly costumed performers take part in the pageant and $1,000 worth of novel fireworks will be nightly burned. The eruption of Mt. Vesuvius is exceedingly realistic, nearly a ton of powder, chemicals and batteries being used to represent the lava, explosions, earthquakes and burning of the city. Comfortable seats are provided for 10,000 spectators, and the price of admission, including seats, is only 50 and 75 cents.

A deadly affray took place at Adrian last Sunday afternoon, which may result in the death of the victim. John M. Cronin, a sub-compositor in the Toledo Blade office came up to Adrian Saturday night and got on a big spree. Sunday afternoon, he hung around the Lake Shore depot and finally got into a row with a gang of Italian laborers, who had been brought from Rome City, Ind. the day before, to work on that section. In the melee Cornin was stabbed with a stiletto by John Morrone, one of the gang. The wound proved to be a very serious one, and will undoubtedly result fatally. The gang of laborers, thirty in all, were marched off to jail.

Geo. S. Field took a trip to Wampler's lake yesterday on his wheel.

Miss Mamie Osborn, who has been teaching school at Paw Paw, is at home for the vacation.

Miss Lena Arnold and about a dozen other Tecumseh girls are occupying the Arnold cottage at Sand Lake this week.

Jos. H. Peele, a minister from Mt. Gilead, O., will occupy the pulpit of the Friends church next Sabbath, both morning and evening.

The railroad strike is assuming serious proportions in the west. The price of provisions is advancing, and an ice famine is threatened.

Chalk down another long credit mark in favor of the water works. About three o'clock Saturday afternoon a fire alarm was turned in, and the boys had the hose carts out in less than no time. J. H. Heck's barn was on fire. There was a stiff breeze from the west and several other barns in the same block were endangered; the Table factory also stood right in line of the fire. In ten minutes the flames were smothered and completely choked down. It was a splendid piece of work by the fire department. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

Here is the showing of Co. C in the late emergency. The total number of men in the company June 30th, was 58; enlistments on July 1st. '94, 2; July, 3d. 8; total number of men July 3d. Of these one is in California, one in Cleveland, O., one on the Great Lakes and one in the interior of the county at the time inaccessable. One man came from Sturges, one from Napoleon, Ohio, one from Dundee, one from Norvell and one from 12 miles north and west of Manchester.

The July number of The Forum will be, as usual, a special educational number; and, as usual, it will deal with very practical problems in education—problems of interest not to professional educators only, but problems that touch the very base of our system of training. The three articles are: "The Ideal Training of an American Boy," a working statement of the highest ideal, by Prof. Thomas Davidson; "Research the Vitalizing Method of Higher Teaching," by President J. Stanley Hall—the most suggestive of his series of articles; and "Will the Co-educated Co-educate their Children?" in other words, will women who attend co-educational colleges send their children, especially their daughters, to these colleges?

At an early hour last Tuesday morning Capt. Hayden received the following telegram, through Col. Tyrrell of Jackson: "Lansing, July 3—Col. J. E. Tyrrell, Jackson, Mich. Your regiment has been ordered to assemble at armories in fatigue uniform and await orders. They will, if necessary, be ordered to report to you by first trains. You will notify field officers and staff. By order W. W. Cook, Asst. Adj. Gen." The members of Co. C were notified with all possible haste and by ten o'clock nearly every man had reported, ready for marching. The boys were hanging about town in squads all day, and about six o'clock Capt. Hayden received further orders to dismiss the company, but hold them in readiness for marching orders at any moment. They expected to go to Battle Creek, as there has been trouble there among the railroad strikers. Under the circumstances their countemplated 4th of July at Devil's lake was indefinitely postponed.

The piano recital given by Miss Mary Anderson's pupils last Friday evening was the finest musical entertainment that Tecumseh people have listened to in many a day. Three pianos were used, two grands and one upright, five violins and a cello. Some of the selections given were of a very difficult character, one of them being executed with twelve hands on three pianos. We confess our inability to describe the performance according to its merits. It was intended for adepts in the musical art, and our music loving people, young and old were present in good numbers. To say that they were delighted with the program would be expressing the fact mildly. The entertainment was a most emphatic proof of Miss Anderson's ability as a music teacher, and it added new laurels to her previous reputation in that direction. The receipts were sufficient to pay all expenses, although she deserved a good surplus for the time and labor bestowed.

THE DEMOCRATS.

They Meet in State Convention at Grand Rapids.

Spencer O. Fisher the Nominee for Governor—Make-Up of the Rest of the Ticket—Summary of the Main Points in the Platform.

FISHER TO LEAD.

GRAND RAPIDS, June 29.—Michigan democrats on Thursday nominated Spencer O. Fisher for governor and declared themselves in favor of free and unlimited coinage of silver. The full ticket nominated is as follows:

For United States Senator (long term), Edwin F. Uhl, of Grand Rapids; for United States senator (short term), John Strong, of Rockwood; governor, Spencer O. Fisher, of West Bay City; lieutenant governor, M. F. Jordan, of Middleville; secretary of state, Lewis E. Ireland, of Allegan; state treasurer, Otto C. Karste, of Gogebic; auditor general, Frank H. Gill, of Kent county; attorney general, James O'Hara, of Muskegon; commissioner of land office, Peter Mulvaney, of Calhoun; superintendent of public instruction, Albert J. Jennings, of Manistee; member state board of education, Michael Devereaux, of Isabella county.

William F. McKnight, of Grand Rapids, was the chairman, and R. Kirke White, of Shiawassee, secretary. Spencer O. Fisher was named in a dozen words by C. E. Warner, of Detroit. He was seconded by all the twelve districts, Congressman Weadock making the only eulogy. He gave the candidate's age as 51, his birthplace as Camden, his business as a lumberman and his best claim to the nomination his congressional service and ability as a leader. The selection was made by acclamation and Mr. Fisher was brought in. The nominee outlined his policy along the lines of the platform and promised to work with a vengeance. Free silver was his watchword, since on that issue he went to congress in a district especially gerrymandered by the republicans to be republican. A synopsis of the platform adopted is as follows:

It denounces "McKinleyism," reaffirms the Chicago platform of 1892, declares in favor of nominating senators by state conventions, indorses Cleveland's administration, demands a free open waterway from the great lakes to the sea, recommends curtailment of immigration as a cure of Coxeyism and favors the settlement of labor disputes by arbitration; demands the forfeiture of all unearned land grants and denounces trusts and dishonest monopolies. The silver plank reads: "We declare in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio that will permit the debtors to pay their debts upon the same basis on which they were contracted," and demands that all currency be issued through the national treasury and be made full legal tender.

The following are members of the state central committee:

First district, C. E. Warner and John B. Moloney. Second district, Ed Duffy and W. P. Sterling. Third district, J. R. Champion and Samuel Robinson. Fourth district, Frank W. Lyle and H. M. Olney. Fifth district, William F. McKnight and George P. Hummer. Sixth district, C. C. Casterton and Aaron Perry. Seventh district, F. W. Hubbard and A. McDenison. Eighth district J. H. Fedewa and J. W. Mesner. Ninth district, Dr. H. W. Hammond and H. J. Hoyt. Tenth district, George Washington and C. A. Gallagher. Eleventh district, Dr. G. R. Andrews and J. W. Robinson. Twelfth district, W. C. Coay and John Cudahy.

[Spencer O. Fisher was born in Camden, Hillsdale county, Mich., February 2, 1843. In his earlier days he engaged there in the lumber and general merchandise business until 1871 when he disposed of his interest and removed to West Bay City, where he associated himself in 1873 with Alfred Mosher, under the firm names of Mosher & Fisher. The partnership continued until the year 1889. This firm engaged in the lumber and timber business, and carried on one of the most extensive establishments in the northwest. Since 1889 Mr. Fisher has conducted his lumber business alone. He is also connected with a number of other enterprises, and is one of those most actively identified with the enterprise and progress of the Saginaw valley. A public spirited and generous citizen, he has become popular with all classes in his locality. Mr Fisher has a brilliant political record. In 1882 he was tendered the nomination for congress in his district, but owing to his business relations he was compelled to decline. In 1884 he was again nominated and elected by a large majority, and in 1886 reelected for a second term. During his term he secured a government building and United States court for Bay City. He was elected a delegate to the national convention in 1884, and has been twice mayor of his own city.]

USED A DIRK KNIFE.

J. B. Cronin, a Printer, Viciously Attacked by John Marrone, at Adrian.

ADRIAN, July 2.—A work train arrived here Sunday on the Lake Shore with thirty Italians, who were to put in some side tracks. J. B. Cronin, a printer, while under the influence of liquor, passed by, and to some of the men who were sitting on the steps of the car he boasted of his ability to whip any Italian. No attention was paid to him, but afterward he returned and hurled stones at the car, smashing a window. John Marrone seized a dirk knife and rushed out after Cronin, who fled. Marrone overtook him and stabbed him under the arm, the blade entering between the ribs. Cronin fell and Marrone returned to the car. The yardmaster, who hurried to Cronin's side, found him unconscious, and, summoning help, conveyed him to the depot and sent for a physician. Cronin was unconscious when the doctor arrived. Marrone lives in Chicago on Union street. He is 37 years old and unmarried. Marrone was arrested. Cronin's case is critical.

TWINS ORDAINED PRIESTS.

Ceremony of Rare Occurrence and Unusual Interest at Detroit.

DETROIT, July 2.—Those who attended the ceremony of ordination at Sts. Peter and Paul's cathedral Sunday morning had an opportunity of witnessing an extremely rare occurrence, the ordination of twins to the Catholic priesthood. Peter and Michael Esper are the gentlemen who were ordained. They were born at Springwells, near Detroit, twenty-eight years ago. They look so much alike that people who have known them from childhood, even boys who have been raised with them, cannot tell them apart. They went to St. Francis' college near Milwaukee; from there they went to college at Baltimore, and thence to Cincinnati, where they finished their education, and took minor orders. Sunday morning Bishop Foley elevated them both to the priesthood. The only other incident on record in the United States where twins have been ordained occurred some years ago in Baltimore when the Quinn brothers, of Peoria, Ill., were ordained for the Chicago diocese.

Our ball boys went to Adrian Saturday and met a terrible defeat at the hands of the Y. M. C. A. team. Score 17 to 3. While but few thought the boys would win the game none expected such a slaughter. Our boys could not bat safely but were very successful in making errors. Never have our boys put up such ball all through a game and we are glad to know they are to play three more games with the same team, for we hope they will be able to show the Adrian people that they can play ball, and good ball. There was a fine attendance, perfect order and generous treatment and Umpire Southland gave entire satisfaction to all. Our boys and friends only regreted that they did not make a better showing.

LIFE'S BITTER SWEET.

Tell me your joy, that I may tune my life
To echo the glad music of your own,
The changing melody, the sunny strife
Of harmonies blent in one full sweet tone.
So shall the faithful shadow of my night
Heighten your happy radiance of delight.

Tell me your sorrow, that I may disdain
Mirth and rejoicing, banish all relief,
Save the sad ecstasy, the cruel gain
Of being one with you, dear heart, in grief.
You did deny me love. Have you no woe,
No pain, to share with one who loves you so?

GAME.

"Speaking about stubborn people always reminds me of poor Seth Cox of Indian Gulch," said an old pioneer from Mariposa county as he leaned against the bar of a down town hotel last evening and toyed with a tumbler.

"P'r'aps, though," he added, glancing around inquiringly, "you fellows never heard of him."

A withered old miner from Nevada county hinted that "mebbe he was related to the Bill Cox who was hanged at Red Dog in 1861."

This the Mariposa man disputed on the ground that Seth during his lifetime was too square a man to have even been a thirty-eighth cousin to the chap who had come to such an ignominious end at Red Dog.

"Why, sho!" he went on, turning from the Nevada man to the four other bystanders, "Seth was as square a man as I ever met in California. He would fight, if necessary, and would drink as much as the next man, and what more was wanted in those days?"

"But that ain't what I was going to tell you about. You see Seth had one fault, and that was stubbornness of the cussedest kind. All one had to do was to take a stand on anything, and Seth would as naturally take a hitch on the contrary side and outhold your hand somehow, even if you had all trumps.

"Seth was marshal of Indian Gulch, up our way, as far back as 1862, and being so stubborn he carried things pretty much his own way. If they didn't go his way, they were not likely to go any way."

The man from the butterfly county paused to gaze through the bottom of his tumbler for a moment, and then resumed.

"Now, sho! Just to give you an idea of how stubborn Seth was, I'll tell you of a little incident. He had a discussion with a miner about turkey buzzards, and just because the miner said they were stinking things Seth maintained that they were second to nothing in the poultry line. Well, the miner thought he'd take a fall out of Seth, and the next day brought him a turkey buzzard and dared him to eat it. Yes, wagered him $20 on it. Did he win? Why, sho!

"Seth ate the buzzard, and as he was picking the bones inquired if there was anybody else around who was anxious to pay him for eating one of the most delicious morsels in the world. That was Seth all over. He'd never give in on anything he undertook, sho!" and the Mariposa man refilled his glass.

"One day," he resumed briskly, just as the Nevada man was about to say something, "a new miner, who said he hailed from Chinese Camp, ambled into the gulch and made himself quite popular before night, treating everybody time and again at Red Ryan's saloon. As Marshal Seth thought it his duty to make the acquaintance of the strange pilgrim who was so well heeled apparently with dust, it wasn't long before Seth and the newcomer, who said his name was Dan Fletcher, were bucking against each other at poker.

"Now, sho, that was all right, but Dan, while they were playing, began to tell how he had made the pilgrimage all the way from Poor Shoat to Angels and cleaned out every poker sharp on the road. Seth, in his bullheaded way, said he reckoned if he had met Dan on that journey Dan would have had to take to the wilderness for want of clothes, he would have been so cleaned out.

"Then there was a hurricane of an argument, and finally Seth boasted that he'd put everything he had up against all Dan had and play poker until one or t'other was busted. Dan jumped at the offer, and arrangements were made.

"The game was to be played in a room at John Hanson's hotel, and each man's wealth was represented by 25 $20 pieces, which they used as chips. Seth, as marshal, proclaimed a holiday in town until he had cleaned Dan out, then he promised a big hurrah. The whole town was gathered around Hanson's place, and at intervals of an hour signs were hung out as to the game. One time it would be 'Seth is a hundred ahead,' and at another 'Even game, with Dan's ante up.' There was lots of betting on the result. Red Ryan wagered his saloon against a claim that Seth would win. And, sho, all the time Seth and Dan sat there flipping their cards like machines, and not noticing anything outside of the game!"

After stopping to clink glasses with his interested audience the man from Mariposa took a fresh twist in his reminiscences.

"About 10 o'clock that night Dan was out $300, and when some of the boys took up supper for the players, for they hadn't eaten anything, you know, he growled out to take it away, as no man could play cards and eat and drink too. Seth was so stubborn that he wouldn't stop either, for fear Dan would think he was weakening. The boys set down the supper and left 'em. In the morning breakfast was put down alongside the untouched supper. All they wanted was half a dozen new decks of cards. They had worn out four packs. Sho! no mistake.

"Well, now, there's no use drawing out the agony on a thing that turned out so serious as that game. As anybody at Indian Gulch can tell you to this day, Seth and Dan played there for five days and for five nights, a-seesawing and a-seesawing, but each as stubborn as the other and determined not to give in. They hadn't touched the meals we took up to 'em, and they hadn't slept either. You may say it's impossible, but just go to Indian Gulch, and you can prove it. The two men were like skeletons, and Seth was so weak that he could not deal the cards and swear at the same time.

"On the evening of the fifth day some of us boys met at Ryan's and decided in the interest of humanity to interfere and make Seth and Dan quit until they got into condition. But, sho, when we went up in the morning they were both stretched out on the floor dead. Yes, sirce, dead. Each had five cards in his hand, and Seth was clutching his last $20 as if he had just been calling Dan when he rolled over.

"'And he'd 'a' won, too,' howled Ryan as he looked at the hands. Then Ryan wanted the match declared in favor of Seth, but the boys wouldn't have it. Bets were declared off and the game called a draw. Seth and Dan had used up 67 packs of cards, and their golden chips were worn as smooth as glass.

"We buried 'em side by side that day, but now comes the strangest part of the whole thing, and to show you what stubborn critters they were—that night there was a light in the room where they had been playing, and as sure as I'm here there sat Dan and Seth as natural as life, a-flipping their cards and tossing their chips by the light of the ghostly candle. Maybe they didn't have that whole hotel to themselves. Sho! I guess they did. Nobody'd go nigh it. Hansen went around crying almost and saying he didn't see why two stubborn galoots couldn't stay where they were planted instead of coming to haunt an honest man's house and ruin his business. But nothing seemed to interfere with the game. Every night for a week Seth and Dan sat up playing, while the whole Gulch gazed at the light in the window and shivered and swapped ghost stories. At last Ryan one night said he had a mind to see how the game stood, and he climbed up to peep in the window. Just as he did so we saw a flash of light shoot across the room, and three minutes afterward Hansen's place was in a blaze.

"Ryan said that as he looked in the window Seth had caught Dan cheating and had thrown the candle at him. The place was burned to the ground, and Indian Gulch felt relieved to think that the ghosts were gone."

"I should say so" gasped one of the auditors.

"But sho as I'm here, gentlemen, there was a bluish blaze seen around the ashes of the burned building the very next night, and there Seth and Dan, looking as if they were made of chalk, were observed sitting on a pile of rocks that had been Hansen's chimney flipping their cards as lively as ever.

"This was too much, and Indian Gulch was scared in good earnest. But some of us got together and decided that Seth and Dan must go. We dug 'em up and carted 'em five miles up a canyon and there buried 'em. We never saw them again in Indian Gulch, but soon afterward some prospectors came down from the hills and said that they had seen two ghosts sitting under a tree and playing. But, sho, gentlemen, where are you going?"

The shriveled old miner from Nevada turned as he followed the others in their hasty exit.

"I did think," he said, "you'd have the decency to let them two cusses rest in their graves, but if you're going to yank 'em all over the country, why, go it alone," and the Mariposa man was left with the barkeeper.

"Well, sho, I'm durned," muttered the narrator of Seth Cox's adventures. "Reckon I'll go back to the Gulch tomorrow, where the folks are sociable and mannerly."—San Francisco Call.

Won His Cabin Boy at a Raffle.

Captain Barratt of the American bark Carrie Winslow has on board one of the strangest prizes ever captured in a raffle. It is nothing less than a boy, a swarthy young Argentine, Juan Baptiste by name, whom the captain won in a raffle at Buenos Ayres.

Juan is only 7 years old and was an inmate of a Spanish orphan asylum at Buenos Ayres when the Winslow reached there on her last voyage. Juan desired his liberty, but under the laws of the Argentine Republic that could only be secured by the payment of a cash sum that would go to a fund for the prosecution of persons taking out the orphans and then treating them badly. In Juan's case the amount required was $46, and in order to secure this the enterprising boy decided to put himself up in a raffle and sell the tickets himself. Captain Barratt became interested in the boy to the extent of $5 spent for tickets, and when the drawing was announced was somewhat surprised to find himself the winner.

The youthful prize has been installed on the Winslow as cabin boy, and though he has now been away from his native land several months shows no desire to return to it. He is bright and intelligent, and as he evinces a decided disinclination to associate with the crew Captain Barratt treats him as one of his own family.—Philadelphia Record.

How to Cure a Felon.

If you have the appearance of a felon coming, put some hard wood ashes in an old tin cup, pour over them warm water immerse the end of the sore finger in the ashes, set the dish on some live coals or on the top of the stove, keeping the finger in as long as you can, and soak it several times a day. If taken in time, it generally cures a felon from coming, if the finger is wet with it often.—Good Housekeeping.

New Theory of Auroral Light.

The latest theory concerning the cause of the aurora borealis has been deduced from a careful analysis of that light thrown through a spectroscope. This unique experiment clearly establishes the fact that it is caused by an electrical discharge among the particles of meteoric iron dust contained in the atmosphere.—St. Louis Republic.

The lady Maccabees served ice cream on Dr. Hendershot's lawn last Saturday evening. The weather was so cold that the crowd was somewhat small.

A "nose" social will be given by the Sunday school class No. 4, at the residence of Geo. Smith on the evening of July 25th. Ice cream and cake will be served on the lawn. A literary program will be presented by the class.

T. V. & L. C. Hoagland will build a grain house on the lot, corner of Oak and Chicago streets, opposite the bank. The locality is first-class and close to the railroad. The building will be two stories high, 30x40 on the ground. Lamont is a hustler and we think the undertaking will be a great help to our village.

Early Thursday morning, July 5th, the business men of our town were somewhat surprised by having Elder E. Mudge call on them and asking them to swear that they did not sell or give away any intoxicating liquors on the 4th. We hardly thought that the Elder would even think for one moment that there were any business men in our quiet village that would do such a base thing as that. We have not learned how he was answered. We understand a large amount of money has been raised to ferret out this matter.

The Morenci Observer, of June 28th, contains the following complimentary notice of one of our citizens: "Will Osgood goes back to Britton to day to take charge of the undertaking business in that place. For several weeks he has been a student in Scofield's establishment and has taken full advantage of the excellent opportunities there afforded—the long experience of the proprietors and the magnitude of their trade—assiduously devoting himself to the varied practical details of the mortuary profession, including embalming. Later on he will spend some more time here in the same way; but we have it on the word of E. W. Scofield that Mr. Osgood has worked to such good purpose that he regards him as now being quite competent to prepare bodies for burial and conduct funerals.

How Britton Celebrated.

"Let the eagle scream." Whoever uttered this sentiment ought to have been in Britton on the glorious Fourth. Britton never does anything by halves, especially on special occasions, and the celebration which her citizens prepared and executed on the last Independence Day, could justly be called a rouser.

Visitors began to arrive early in the day, and the residents of the village themselves must have been "up in the morning." There was a liberal supply of bunting to be seen on the stores and buildings. John Britton's lawn and the Exelby House were profusely decorated in the national colors. Several lunch and ice cream stands were erected in the vacant lot between the Wabash track and the hotel, and the whole town presented a gala appearance. The W. R. C. served ice cream on Britton's lawn and the Maccabee ladies had an ice cream tent of their own. Nearly every store was transformed into a lunch room, or held a lemonade counter, and there were several stands erected on the sidewalk in front of the stores.

The regular exercises of the day began at 11 o'clock when the crowd assembled beneath the big apple trees on Britton's lawn and listened to a very appropriate address from Grant Fellows, Esq., of Hudson. The program opened with music by the band. Then followed an invocation by Rev. E. Mudge. Dr. E. E. Hendershot, President of the Day, made a few introductory remarks, and Mr. Fellows' address followed. It was modest in length, patriotic in sentiment, scholarly in composition and eloquently delivered. It made a most excellent impression upon the auditors present. The program closed with music by the band.

The noon hour had now arrived and the entire crowd, old and young, great and small, gave themselves up to the task of getting dinner. The eating stands had plenty to do, but the crowd was well provided for.

Promptly at one o'clock the program of races and games was opened, under charge of M. L. Gillen and this was dispatched expeditiously to the edification of a large crowd that lined both sides of Chicago street from Lenardson's corner to the Wabash track. They made lots of sport for the boys and for the older spectators as well. Below is the official award of prizes in each race:

Foot Race—Clarence Lowe, 1st, $1.00; Wm Larrabee, 2d, 50c.

Egg Race—Wm. Larrabee, 1st, $1.00; Clarence Lowe, 2d, 50c.

Kid Race—Robt. Stewart, 1st, $1.50; Geo. Price, 2d, $1.00; John Houseman, 3d, 50c.

Bologna Race—Elmer Lockwood, 1st, $1.50; Charley Beasley, 2d, $1.00.

Calithumpian Race--Grant Ousterhout and Cyrus Smith, 1st, $5.00; Linas Zeluff and Roy Britton, 2d, $3.00; Chet Caswell, 3d, $2.00.

Bicyle Race—Geo. Clark, 1st, $2.00; Huey Craig, 2d, $1.00.

Pie Eating Contest—Elmer Lockwood, 1st, $1.00.

But the big attraction of the day arrived on the scene at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon. This was Gen. Cochrane's division of Coxey's Commonweal Army. It numbered about 100 men and had marched from Holloway that morning. They got their breakfast at Holloway, then took their line of march up the Ridge road to Ridgeway village and thence down the turnpike to Britton. Upon arriving in town they halted about ten minutes on Chicago street, to give the crowd a chance to inspect them, and then proceeded to the vacant lot south of the Wabash depot, where they broke ranks and remained about two hours. During their rest here they took lunch. The crowd were in a very inquisitive mood and plied the general with all sorts of questions, which were good-naturedly answered. The two leaders of the division were intelligent looking men, evidently working for pay, from some source, but the men themselves were a rough, sorry looking set. They were mostly aliens, a majority of them being Poles, who could not speak a word of English. At 4:00 o'clock they formed ranks again and set out toward the north star on their way to Detroit.

The parade of the calithumpians took place about 3 o'clock, and rivaled the Coxey army, at least the rag-tag-and-bob-tail portion of it. There were some business floats in the procession which were tastily gotten up and must have cost considerable time and labor. The Lenardson Brothers wagon was fixed up as a lemonade stand. Another one was drawn by a team covered with blankets calling attention to Haight's Anti-Trust Tinware" and to the fact that "Haight sells the Perfection Washer;" Hoagland & Curtis had a farm wagon covered with a platform, on which was perched a top carriage, the latter holding a ragmuffin band.

The base ball program did not materialize as was expected. Owing to the uncertainty of trains on the Wabash the Detroit club failed to arrive. A few innings were played between the Britton team and a picked nine to amuse the crowd, who put in an hour's time to good advantage in this manner.

The new undertaking firm of Osgood, Linn & Co., displayed a fine show of funeral goods to all who called at their store. They have fine quarters and an elegant stock. The Exelby House did a thriving business throughout the day and furnished over two hundred meals to visitors. There was a dance in Exelby hall during the afternoon and evening which was well patronized and afforded congenial amusement for the young people.

A grand display of fireworks in the evening fitly ended the day's festivities, and closed the most successful celebration that Britton has ever seen.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Low rate excursions every month over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. E. E. Posey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile, Ala.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 12, 1894.

The latest revised tariff bill has passed the Senate, but it is by no means a law yet.

The tariff bill has gone back to the House and Congressman Wilson will take a hand at "tariff tinkering" now.

The great railroad strike will entail a loss of millions of dollars upon innocent persons, and what will the strikers themselves gain by it in the end?

The position of the railroad strikers should not be confounded with that of the Pullman employes. The latter had the sympathy of the public, but the men who commit lawless raids on railroad property stand on a different footing.

The locomotive brotherhood have decided to remain neutral in the present strike. It was called on without consulting their Order and President Arthur declares that all locomotive engineers must run trains when ordered to do so or forfeit their position in the brotherhood.

The Louisville Courier-Journal hits the nail on the head in this fashion: "With plantation manners at the top and New York slum manners at the bottom, with a sprinkling of cowboy manners in the middle, the Senate of the United States is in danger of being sucked in by a mudhole.

Tariff and free silver are matters of small concern just now. The great railroad strike, which has developed into the most gigantic strike this country has ever known, is extending its limits, and law-abiding citizens cannot help viewing the situation with some anxiety. Where will this great struggle between capital and labor end?

The sugar trust got out of the Senate very easy when the state of public sentiment is considered. It loses the money that it might have made by bringing in free raw sugar until the first of next January, by reason of the adoption of Senator Hill's amendment making the sugar schedule go into effect as soon as the tariff bill becomes a law, but by a majority of one vote it succeeded in getting the extra duty upon refined sugar kept in the bill.

The present railroad strike may have one good effect—to compel the enactment of state or national legislation referring all disputes of this character to a Board of Arbitration and compelling both employers and employees to respect its decision. Either this plan or a governmental control of railroads must be adopted. Strikes of this magnitude, which paralyze all business and threaten to involve the whole country in civil war must be stopped in some way.

The action of the Senate in striking out, just before the tariff bill was passed, the amendment to the income tax paragraph, exempting the President of the United States from payment of that tax, which Senator Hill had sarcastically offered and the Senate had seriously adopted while the bill was being considered in committee of the whole, meets with general approval, and removes one obstacle to an agreement between the House and Senate. No good reason exists for exempting the President's or any other official's salary.

Resolutions and bills have been introduced in both House and Senate concerning the great railroad strikes and there is much talk concerning them and the action of the administration in ordering that U. S. troops be used if necessary, either to compel the prompt forwarding of the mails or to carry out the orders of U. S. courts and officials, but the outlook is not favorable to Congressional action. It will be the same old story; while the strike is in progress Congress is interested; when the strike is over Congress will forget all about it as quick as possible.

The sugar schedule as it now stands will never be accepted by the House, unless a considerable number of Representatives vote against their opinions and upset their records. The argument that the revenue is needed by the government may possibly result in the acceptance of the duty on raw sugar, notwithstanding the overwhelming sentiment in the House in favor of free sugar, but it is not believed that any argument can be advanced that will bring about the acceptance of the duty on refined sugar, which is not intended to bring in revenue but to shut out foreign refined sugar and leave the sugar trust in control of the market.

The plutocrats who contribute to the campaign funds of both parties are having a gay and festive time at present in Washington, but wait till the people get a whack at them next November.

Hoke Smith's paper, the Atlanta Journal, asks this proper question: "What will the country think of the Democratic party, if, after its proclaimed principles and intentions, it passes such a burlesque on tariff reform as the Senate bill?"

The latest news from Chicago is of a decidedly war like character. Special policemen and U. S. marshals are being sworn in by the hundred, and the state militia has been called out. The mob has grown into such magnitude there that the legal authorities seem powerless to control it.

Tecumseh has suffered but little from the big strike thus far, as the Lake Shore and Mackinaw roads are not involved. Freights are somewhat irregular, but all passenger and mail trains on both roads have been making the regular trips. Passenger travel, however, has been very light since the Fourth.

The present strike was inaugurated ostensibly for the purpose of punishing Geo. M. Pullman, for the tyranny practised upon his employees. Meanwhile Mr. Pullman himself is taking his comfort at his summer home down in New Jersey, and the business interests of the country are receiving the punishment. This must be a case of vicarious atonement.

The death of Ex-Gov. Winans, which occurred on the afternoon of July 4th, removes from earth one of Michigan's most respected citizens. His strict integrity, his simplicity of manners, his broad minded statesmanship had endeared him to the masses of the people, with whom he was always in sympathy. His death was a great shock, as it was not generally known that he was ill, and his sudden demise will cause profound sorrow throughout the state.

The most deplorable feature of the present gigantic strike is that innocent parties are the chief sufferers. Railroads are "common carriers," in the eyes of the law. They are not simply private property but are run, or should be, for the benefit of the public. The tying up of a railroad inflicts not only inconvenience but positive loss upon all the towns through which it passes. The great public have rights in this controversy and one is to be served by all conflicting carriers in a legal manner.

These are wise words taken from the St. Louis Republic: "No law can prevent men from quitting work. No law can give them rights against other men when other men have not against them. A railroad company cannot touch an employee's home without his consent. Without the consent of the company a striking employee cannot lay a finger on a coupling pin or move a nail. So says the law, and the officers of the law should enforce it to the letter. It is public policy that commerce should proceed. No man is required to help unless he chooses, but every man can be compelled to keep his hands off when other men desire to help. And everybody should understand that it is a primary duty of the government to use all the force necessary to compel hands to be kept off.

In his proclamation to the striking employees, President Debs said: "I deem it my duty to caution you against being a party to wilful enduring the existing difficulties. Our conduct must conform to our profession in that respect. The man who commits any violence in any form whatever, whether a member or not, should be promptly arrested and punished. We must triumph as law-abiding citizens or not at all. Those who engage in force are our enemies. Our cause is just. The great public is with us. We have nothing to fear. Let it be remembered if men can be secured to handle trains they have that right. Our men have the right to quit, but the right ends there. Others have the right to take their places; whatever the propriety of so doing may be. Keep away from railroad yards, or the rights of way, or other places where large crowds congregate." This is good sense, every word. The trouble in the present strike is that the strikers have passed beyond the control of their leaders entirely. President Debs has unloosed a power that he cannot control now, if he would.

The Outlook, in a powerful editorial, states the case in these words: "The present law seems to us clearly defined by United States Judge Caldwell in his message to the receivers of the Santa Fe road, reported in the Chicago Times. He says: 'The men in the employ of the Atchison railway system must discharge all their usual and accustomed duties or quit the service of the receivers altogether and permit other men to take their places who will fulfill these duties. * * * Any or all the employees can quit the service of the company if they desire to do so, but when they quit they must not interfere in any manner with the property or the operation of the road or the men employed to take their places.' This being the law, the whole power of public authority should be directed toward the enforcing of it as it stands. This is the whole duty of executive officers. Meanwhile it is the duty of the public to demand a change of the law, so that neither employees nor employers on the nation's highways may withold employments or labor simply as their own interests dictate, without regard to the interests of the other and the interests of the nation at large."

GEORGE M. PULLMAN; HIS TOWN.

At a safe distance from the scene of operations George M. Pullman has thought it advisable to talk to the eastern newspaper reporters concerning the existing railroad troubles in the west.

Mr. Pullman believes, or affects to believe, that the development of the strike or the boycott has carried it to a point where it no longer concerns either him personally or the company of which he is the head, directly or indirectly. He believes that the issue between himself and his employes has been submerged and lost sight of in the trouble between the railroads and their employes. He believes, in short, that the public has no further concern in the dispute which led to the present paralysis of trahsportation and trade west of the Ohio river.

Mr. Pullman is altogether mistaken. He mistakes the significance of the present situation and he mistakes the feeling of the public toward him and his company. He mistakes American support of law and order for support of George M. Pullman and the Pullman company. He mistakes hostility to lawbreakers and rioters for hostility to his ill-fed, underpaid employes. He is mistaken in every one of his assumptions and he will realize his mistake when the present emergency ceases to exist.

Law and order will eventually triumph in the struggle that is now going on. They have always triumphed in this country; they always will triumph. Sooner or later—peaceably if possible, forcibly if necessary—the railroads will be restored to the possession of their property; lawbreakers will be repressed, rioters will be put down. The men who are destroying property and defying the authority of all government—municipal, state and federal—will be punished for their misdeeds. Peace and obedience to the law will be firmly established once more.

But the termination of this struggle will not affect by one jot or one tittle the standing of George M. Pullman in the court of public opinion. He will stand just where he stood before the switchmen quit work, before the first coupling pin was pulled, before the first car was derailed. The lawlessness of Eugene V. Debs and his followers will not acquit George M. Pullman. The patent fact that the American Railway Union was utterly wrong will not put the Pullman company right. The case remains unadjudicated. It has not been decided; it has been merely postponed.

In advance of the inevitable trial Mr. Pullman will do well to consider certain facts. He has set up in the town of Pullman a modern satrapy—a survival of medieval feudalism repugnant to the thought and spirit of the nineteenth century. He has endeavored to combine a great industrial establishment with a hodge-podge jumble of Bellamy socialism and Russian aristocracy. He has attempted to revive in America an institution that has not been seen even in Europe since the fifteenth or sixteenth century.

How well the experiment has succeeded he himself can testify. Satisfactory at first, like all things novel, the "model town" has degenerated. The "thousands of happy, contented, well-paid workmen" have been transformed by degrees into sullen, discontented strikers—justified, unhappily in their sullenness and discontent. The wheels are idle, the chimneys of the mills stand smokeless.

Does Mr. Pulman feel justified in continuing the experiment? Granting that he may defeat his striking employes this time, does he care to invite another strike and another, and yet another—inevitable so long as wrong conditions exist? These are the questions he should consider carefully, and any true friend—if he has one—will advise him as to their answer.

He should subdivide his town and sell lots to any one who will buy. He should abolish the system of overseers and inspectors and quasi-spies. He should enfranchise his workmen—make them free men instead of feudal retainers. He should come down from his ducal throne and take his place among Americans as an American. He should become a democrat instead of an autocrat: a benefactor rather than a slave driver. He should be a man.

It remains with George M. Pullman to say whether he will be a public benefactor or a public enemy. He should make his choice wisely. His battles will not be fought for him either by the press or by the public. If he decides wrongly he will stand alone against the sentiment of the whole country.—Chicago Herald.

Farmers' Home Reading Club.

Two letters were received last week by the Farm and Dairy editor, asking for particulars regarding the F. H. R. C. This is a home course of reading in agriculture, horticulture, dairying, etc., on the Chautauqua plan. It is a grand thing for our farmers, their wives, sons, daughters and the the "hired man." Write Prof. F. B. Mumford, Sec'y., Agricultural College, Mich. We are reading this course and could not be hired to drop it. We expect to keep at it (in spite of the tariff, or the exit of silver) until we "graduate." Too much cannot be said in favor of this course for our young farmers who have had no opportunity to pursue a course of study at the Agricultural College. In these days it is almost criminal to live in ignorance. The well-informed, educated, practical, hard working business farmer is the one who ought to make the most money, and—he generally does. IN THE LANE.

Limb linked with limb old elms o'erspan the lane,
A dim, sweet spot where one would surely rest
To hear the wind among the leaves like rain
And gaze awhile upon the dappled west
With gentle sadness, yet no touch of pain,

As I do now, while with warm odorous wings
The evening hovers down, and gleam by gleam
The cloud glow darkens and familiar things
Grow beautifully strange, as in a dream,
Amid the glamour that the twilight brings.

And silence, like a presence whose soft palm
Rests in light benediction on the brow,
Soothing the spirit with lethean balm,
Stands in the porch of night, the world below,
And all the starry solitudes are calm.

AN AUCTION SALE.

There were stir and excitement in the village of Two Hills. Granny Lemon's mite of possessions was to be put up at auction.

Granny Lemon's daughter had died owing money and owning furniture. It was only right to the dead woman that the slur of debt should be removed from her name.

Justice was bound to be hard on Granny and the baby. There was not a doubt in the mind of the villagers that Granny and the baby would have to be dispatched to the county poorhouse.

One by one the effects of the late Mary Ann were knocked down to the neighbors. The last article sold was a broom which was nearly all handle. It was knocked down to a broad shouldered man, who had put upon it the tremendous bid of 20 cents.

"Mary Ann Lemon was his gal once," said an old inhabitant of Two Hills.

"She'd best heap 'a' took him," said some one else. "He'd 'a' kept her comfortable behind the blacksmith shop."

The auctioneer had entered the cottage to make sure that all the furniture had been put up at the sale. Everything was gone. Only for granny and the baby the little room was empty.

The old woman sat upon the steps leading to the door above. She was holding the baby in her arms.

The auctioneer was not considered an odd man, but he was a man of impulse, big and bold when the impulse took hold of him. He hesitated a moment, looking at the old woman and the baby. Then he went forward suddenly and picked the baby out of the old woman's arms.

"I've got an idee, granny." The auctioneer stepped to the door after uttering these consolatory words and mounted the table, which had already been sold, with the baby clinging fast to his neck.

"Now here's a fine piece o' ware," he called out loudly. "This baby's a-gunno save its old granny from the poor's house, that's what it's a-gunno do. Who'll put a big bid on a rosy cheeked, hearty baby? Say, what'll you bid?" The people did not comprehend. There was silence in the crowd.

"I'm not in fer acceptin a little bid," roared the auctioneer. "I don't want no offerin of dollars or cents, I want hundreds o' dollars. Some people would hand out a power o' money fer a baby like this'n. Ain't there nobody in Two Hills what's hungerin fer a baby?"

"Five hundred dollars!" called a voice in the crowd.

The villagers turned with one accord and stared at the blacksmith. What did Sam Winters want with a baby? He hadn't any wife to look after it.

The grocer's wife pulled her husband by the arm and whispered, "What'd we give fer a baby like that, John?"

"Make it $700!" said the grocer.

"Seven hundred dollars!" shouted the auctioneer. "Seven hundred dollars fer to pervide fer old mammy all her life. No wonder she's a-laughin at you. The Lemons, as a rule, is long lived. Make it a thousand. Come, who'll make it a thousand?"

"One thousand dollars!" said the blacksmith.

"One thousand dollars! Goin, goin, goin for $1,000. She's worth more'n $1,000. She'll give a body more'n $1,000 wuth of satisfaction. Look at her now. You've skeered her. She's as purty when she cries as when she laughs."

The little maid was puckering up her face; the tears were filling her great dark eyes. She put up her little fat fists and hid her eyes as the auctioneer again turned her to the crowd.

At this moment a carriage that was about to pass came to a standstill, a liveried footman sprang to the door, and the great people of Two Hills came piling out.

"Yes, it is true," cried the young lady, with a pretty, excited face. "They are actually selling a baby! Tom, look at the baby

"Goin, goin, goin, for $1,000, the prettiest baby in Two Hills, the money to keep its old grandmother from the poorhouse!"

"Eleven hundred," cried the young lady, waving her black gloved hand frantically.

The blacksmith bid as high as $1,500, the rich lady made it $1,600, and the man turned and walked away.

"Gone to Mrs. Eustice at $1,600," said the auctioneer, making a fine bow, but looking as if he didn't know what to do with the baby.

But the great lady ran up to the auctioneer and received her property in her arms

G'anny's baby went through a wonderful transformation during the following week, and the people in Two Hills talked about the "luck" that had befallen both Mary Ann's offspring and Granny Lemon.

But Granny Lemon's spirits had not risen with the knowledge that she was not to go to the poorhouse. Indeed it was suspected that Granny Lemon hardly realized the blessing that had befallen her. Since the day of the sale she had been growing apathetic and feeble.

One day when g'anny's baby pointed at him from the carriage window the blacksmith left his job of shoeing and retired to the interior of the shop.

"You couldn't 'a' done fer her as she'll be done fer, Sam," said the old man whose horse he had left half shod. "You couldn't 'a' made a fine lady out o' her."

"No, I couldn't 'a' done that," said Sam.

During the summer the news spread through the village that g'anny's baby was getting kind of cross and peevish, and that the great lady had said to the nurse that it was a mistake for a person to adopt a child.

Two months later it was declared positively that Mrs. Eustice was going to Europe with her husband and her great aunt; that g'anny's baby lay ill in the big house; that Mrs. Eustice had told the doctor she never could forgive herself for adopting the child.

The sun was about three feet from the top of the second hill when the bit of flying gossip reached the blacksmith's shop and was just sinking behind the hill when a broad shouldered man walked hastily across the grounds and entered the big house by the rear way.

While the man sat waiting in the library he took from his pocket a greasy pocketbook, and opening it laid the contents on his knee. His hand trembled as he counted the notes over to make sure they were all right—$1,600.

There was a sweep of dainty garments along the hall, and Mrs. Eustice came into the library. She gave a slight start upon recognizing her visitor, regarding him not so much as the blacksmith, whom she knew by sight at the shop, but as the man who had bid against her for g'anny's baby.

"I hear," said the man slowly, "that you're goin off to Europe."

"Yes," said the lady.

"And they say that the baby ain't so well."

"Yes, that's true too. It's been ailing all summer. What did you wish?"

"I was thinkin," he said, "that as the whole transaction was a business one—that, now being as you're goin away, and the baby's sick, mebbe as you might be willin to sell. I'm ready to give you yer price."

Mrs. Eustice was startled. She had lamented that reckless squandering of her money at the village auction more than once; but, according to herself, she was honest.

"You ought to see the poor little thing," she said. "Come, I'll show her to you."

Silently Sam Winters followed the great lady to the nursery, where the baby tossed in its little crib. "She's had the best of doctors," said Mrs. Eustice, "but I don't believe anybody knows what's the matter with her."

"I'll give you $1,600," said the man huskily.

"Oh, dear no!" cried the lady; "that wouldn't be fair. Why, I doubt if she lives till we return. I tell you what, I'll take $500 if you are willing to run the risk. It's outlandish, selling a baby; but, then, you know, I bought her."

Winters counted out the money and handed it over. He had not dared to touch the baby that belonged to the great lady, but after paying the $500 he stooped and patted the little flaming face.

Down the richly carpeted steps, through the broad hall, out into the park and on along the pike hastened the man with his precious bundle, his $500 baby.

He did not go to the blacksmith shop or the bachelor quarters behind it, but directly to that little whitewashed cottage where lived the old woman who had been rescued from the poorhouse. He went into the house and laid the baby on the bed.

"Granny," he called softly, "Granny!"

She came in slowly from the kitchen, shading her old eyes.

"Don't you think you kin nurse a little baby till she's well?"

The old woman fell on her knees beside the bed, she gathered the baby close in her arms, she swayed to and fro as if she were rocking it. The apathy had vanished from her face; it was as glad as sunshine.

"I'll nuss her till she gits well," she sobbed, "or we'll die together."

Six months had passed away. It was on a beautiful afternoon in the springtime. All the roses in Two Hills were abloom. A carriage drawn by two splendid bays came clattering up the village street. The great people had returned.

Sitting in the doorstep of a little whitewashed cottage was a small yellow haired girl. She was swinging her feet and singing at the top of her voice. Above her the red roses trailed themselves luxuriously.

The lady looked out and waved her hand and smiled. The child stopped singing and stared.

"She doesn't know me," said the great lady, with a half sigh and a laugh.

But the yellow haired girl rose from the doorstep with alacrity, ran into the cottage and laid her head in the old grandmother's lap, hiding her face. "I'm g'anny's baby," she sobbed.

The old woman heard the carriage wheels and the clattering horses. She passed her hand tenderly over the ruffled yellow head.

"Yes, deary," she said fondly, "and her ain't never goin to be sol' no more."

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. HEART DISEASE!

Fluttering, No Appetite, Could Not Sleep, Wind on Stomach.

"For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which fluttered almost incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I would be compelled to sit up in bed and belch gas from my stomach until I thought that every minute would be my last. There was a feelling of oppression about my heart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I could not sweep a room without resting. My husband induced me to try and am happy to say it has cured me. I now have a splendid appetite and sleep well. Its effect was truly marvelous."

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN.

A Bicycle Trip all the Way from Tecumseh to Denver.

CHICAGO, ILL., July 4th, 1894.

EDITOR HERALD:—My trip to Denver, Col., began June 30th, at Tecumseh, Mich. When about to make my departure two young men came up on wheels and announced their destination as Chicago. They were unacquainted with the route, and I assumed the important role of guide as far as Hillsdale where I was to pass Sunday with friends.

Our wheels were soon speeding over the road to Adrian. We quickly arrived there, and were told that on the road to Hudson we would meet a company of Coxey's Army. Our cavalry of three intrepid bike-men could surely dismay a company of 75 or 80 infantry, so we mounted and advanced upon the enemy. We reached Hudson in good order, and the Coxey contingent was reported as between there and Hillsdale. The hour of peril was put off. One of my companions got his tire punctured here and we were delayed two hours while he repaired. We could not charge the veteran Coxeyites with one disabled steed. At last we pedaled on with breath bated for Coxey but the Army must have heard of us and gone another way for we never met them. Life was not destined to be monotonous all the way to Hillsdale however: about 9 miles out one of my comrades broke the forks to his wheel, and his chum and I carried the broken parts into Hillsdale leaving the rider at a farm house. On our arrival I went to the house of my friends, and my companion had the break repaired and returned to his chum. They stayed at the farm house that night and rode into Hillsdale next morning. I gave them the route from town to town into Chicago and parted with my companions of a day, mutually wishing each other success.

Sunday was a day of rest, and visiting, and eating. The last was especially observed by me, for although a bicycle does not eat yet it endows the rider with marvellous powers in the gastronomic regions. Monday morning at 8 o'clock my Victor and myself were again on the road. The hills were numerous but the consoling coast after a hard climb kept me in good spirits.

Perhaps you would like to know some of the sins of a bicycle tourist so I will confess. Just at present the cherries are ripe all along the way, and I glide steadily up to a tree and procure a handful to regale me upon the road. On one of these occasions I was just helping myself from a thickly leaved fruit laden tree, when a voice from above cried out "Gee, but you scart me." I was sorry and embarrassed so mumbled something about "thanks for the berries," resumed my seat on the noiseless steed and silently sneaked away. Another little sin is asking to buy a glass of milk at farm houses, where I know that they wont let me pay for it. I put my hand suggestively to my pocket, the farmers wife says disdainfully, "I don't want pay for a glass of milk." Then I look modest, and am sorry to have troubled her: thank her profusely and if she is young I smile winningly and depart. But I was leaving Hillsdale before this diversion. Nothing novel happened that day, but I saw a very odd house in the suburbs of Coldwater. A large bronze eagle sat on the peak of the gable roof, and on either side of the front door were two fierce bronz Nemean lions, while gamboling about the lawn were various sizes of cast iron deer, and rabbits of a fearless metalic nature. Some Nimrod doubtless dwells there.

Beyond Coldwater somewhere I came upon a little town, scarcely a four corners, where there was a cemetery of such dimensions, that a city of 7 or 8 thousand inhabitants might have been proud of so great a display of tombstones. The people of the village must have a very long line of ancestry, and must have most of the line underground. That day I rode 66 miles and stopped for the night at White Pigeon, Mich. The only hotel had burned recently but I found a boarding house and passed a very restful night. Before breakfast I rode to Mottville, 7 miles, where I sat down to a humble repast in a little hotel on the bank of the St. Joseph river. From here nearly 40 miles I had a delightful ride; nearly always in sight of the St. Joseph river, often on the edge of the bank about 50 feet up from the river. The St. Joseph at most points is 100 yds. wide, and seldom very deep. The yellow stones on the bottom gleam in the sun, and the water ripples very little as it passes over the stoney bed Woodland borders it in many places, and waving grain fields approach to its very edge at others. It is an impressive river as viewed from the high bank along which I rode. I passed through Elkhart about 10 o'clock. This busy town was very attractive along the streets which I traversed with my wheel. I did not linger there but went on to South Bend to dinner. Here I left the St. Joseph river, and all the afternoon rode through level prairie land, though forests were to be seen at a distance. Indiana landscape differs from Michigan in the deepened colors. They have the same grains, the same trees in the woods, but there is a richer color to all. The feilage is denser and the forests more compact. There is an oppressive odor of vegetation at times, and the odorous catnip fairly makes the sense reel as one passes through marsh and mead land. I noted a great number of log houses along the road. The country is so level that towns came in sight at distances of 3 or 4 miles. That day I rode 84 miles and my weary limbs found rest at Westville, Ind. On the glorious 4th, I started on in splendid spirits to reach Chicago. You should have seen the celebration which I happened upon at Dwyer, a small village on the boundary of Indiana and Illinois. There was a band of four pieces and this was followed by 10 or 12 prominent citizens with red and white ribbon in their button holes. The rest of the population sat upon the tavern steps to see the pageant go by. My wheel spoiled the procession because the people preferred to see that. As I got into Dalton, a suburb of Chicago, I met a young darkey boy on a wheel. He volunteered to guide me, but he was too slow and I soon left him far in the rear shouting directions. I rode for 7 or 8 miles on the M. C. R. R. track. There was no train running: engines stood lifeless along the tracks. I was in the city but one night. It was lonesome, desolate, not a soul at work. Pullman too was deserted. I passed the World's Fair grounds which is now a pale ghost of departed glory. From there I chased a cable car for a number of miles and finally reached my friend's house and rested. I had ridden 65 miles. Will write you again next week.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Regular session, July 2nd., 1894. Present the entire council.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

The president, as chairman of the special committee appointed to have charge of Mill street bridge, reported that a contract had been executed with Jas. E. Lowry and Jas. Mitchell to build abutments for the sum of $1,000; report accepted and adopted. Moved and supported that Recorder be instructed to draw necessary orders to pay cost of brick work, under the direction of the special committee. Carried.

The bond of H. W. Stevens, as marshal, in sum of $5,000 with C. A. Slayton and B. C. Knapp as sureties was presented, surties approved and same ordered placed on file. The Marshal reported that a horse, of F. Zeluff, Ridgeway, had broken through the Globe Mill bridge and injured itself, on the night of June 29th. Mr. Zeluff appeared in person and accepted $5.00 in full settlement of all demands.

The Sexton's report presented, showing four adult and one infant interment during June: three lots sold and $20.00 collected and presented note of A. S. VanWinkle, for $30.00 with H. T. Richter as surety: note accepted and surety approved.

The street commissioner's report for June shows 23 and 1-2 days fire team labor; 36 days hired team labor, costing $65.00; 60 days hand labor, costing $98.75; poll tax collected $46.75. Report accepted and placed on file.

Report of Superintendent and clerk of the water board presented and accepted and placed on file. Superintendent of water board was instructed to settle the disputed water rate with Brewer & Co. Moved and supported that order be drawn in favor of A. James for 60 cents, rebate on water rate, carried.

A petition, signed by F. P. Deuel and eight others, was presented, asking that water main be laid on Logan St., between Maumee and Division streets. Referred to water board.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following bills were presented and refered to the finance committee: Telephone & Telegraph Construction Company, $7.50; W. Mellon, labor $2.50; C. Cook, labor $2.50; A. Hyde, street commissioner $23.00; W. J. Ingersoll, Recorder $25.00; Waterworks, A. Park, $11.02; C. A. Hooten $40.00; Robert Owen, $14.40; Michigan Supply Co. $120.19; C. J. & M. Ry., freight $48.26.

Finance committee reporting favorably on all of above, Recorder instructed to draw order for said several amounts.

Moved and supported that Marshal proceed to construct a sidewalk along the west side of Van Buren street, between Chicago and Killbuck street immediately; carried.

Street comissioner instructed to proceed to fill with water the eastern tank of the old water system, carried.

Council then adjourned.

W. J. INGERSOLL, Recorder.

Dun reports 181 failures in this country last week, against 334 for the corresponding week last year. Showing plainly that but for labor troubles times would be a great deal better.

OBITUARY.

The death of Lewis George Lester occured at his home on the morning of Saturday, June 23d, 1894. He had been ailing for some days, but was supposed to be improving. Waking during the forenoon from a sleep, he soon complained of severe pain in the region of the heart, and quickly passed into a condition of unconsciousness, from which he never rallied, dying within a few minutes. Mr. Lester was born July 6th, 1827, in Ontario county, N. Y. He was the fifth in a family of six children, but all the family had preceded him in the experience of death. At the age of 25 he came to Michigan, and was for a time in the employ of the L. S. & M. S. R. R., being stationed at Sturgis. For more than 20 years he has resided on the farm in Raisin township, where he died. May 1st, 1859, he was married to Miss Harriet Scofield. Of this marriage two sons, Rev. C. S. Lester, pastor of the Baptist church at Eaton Rapids, and S. C. Lester, of Detroit, were born. These with the widow remain to cherish his memory as a tender and loving father and husband. Of a quiet, retiring disposition, he never seemed unduly prominent in any circle in which he moved, but easily secured and held the high esteem of those who came to know his worth. On Feb. 14, 1886, he made public profession of his faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and with his wife was baptized into the fellowship of the Tecumseh Baptist church, of which he has been a loyal, consistent member. The funeral services were held at the church on Monday afternoon, June 24th, and were attended by a large gathering of friends and neighbors, who tenderly laid away the body to await the resurrection morn.

Died, at his late residence in east Macon, July 3d, 1894, Joseph Mellin, aged 67 years. Mr. Mellin was born in Ireland, county Antrim, in 1828. His father died when he was but 7 years of age; he was left in charge of a goodly uncle. The early instructions were strictly of a religious character, brought up under the influence and fostering care of the Presbyterian church, of which this uncle was a member. In 1851, Mr. Mellin left Ireland and came to America, and settled in Livingston county, N. Y. In the autumn of 1865 he moved to Lenawee county, Mich., in Macon township, and has remained in this county and township until called away by death, July 3d, 1894. He was married to Miss Rosa Boyd, in 1849, who survives him. Their family consisted of ten children, four of whom are still living. Mr. Mellin had many friends; a man of exceeding tender feelings himself; he very carefully avoided injuring the feelings of others. His entire life has been marked by this characteristic. Useful and beloved in his neighborhood, kind and gentle in his family, he has passed a busy and quiet life. Strictly attentive to his worldly concerns, he has acquired a competence for his loved ones who are left behind, of worldly goods sufficient to meet all wants without lack of anything. In his death, the Reformed church, of east Macon, (known as the DeSpelder church) has lost a valuable elder. He was among its first organizers: has always been ready by influence and pecuniary support, to extend the influence and usefulness of this, the church of his choice. His sickness was protracted and very severe: at times his bodily sufferings were very great, but not a murmer escaped his lips. A spirit of perfect resignation was manifested throughout, and on the evening of July 3d his happy spirit took its flight to the God who gave it. While one of his daughters sat beside him, he breathed an audible prayer and while in this act he closed his eyes in death, and without a sigh or tremor, passed away in the twinkling of an eye. His funeral was attended from the DeSpelder church, by a large concourse of neighbors and friends, attesting the fact of the estimation of all for the life and friendship of Joseph Mellin. His end was peace. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth."

Thursday, July 26th, the Toledo, Ann Arbor & Northern Michigan Ry. will run a special excursion to Crystal Lake and Frankfort on Lake Michigan, leaving Dundee at 10:45 a. m. arriving at Crystal Lake at 8:40 p. m., Frankfort at 9:00 p. m. This special train will stop at only a few of the principal points north of Dundee, so it will not be so tedious a ride as excursions usually are. Round trip rate only $5.00, and tickets will be good to return on any regular train until Saturday, August 4th, inclusive. Frankfort and Crystal Lake are among the most beautiful of Northern Michigan summer resorts, and the extremely low rate places the trip within reach of all.

The sugar trust got out of the Senate very easy when the state of public sentiment is considered. It loses the money that it might have made by bringing in free raw sugar until the first of next January, by reason of the adoption of Senator Hill's amendment making the sugar schedule go into effect as soon as the tariff bill becomes a law; but by a majority of one vote it succeeded in getting the extra duty upon refined sugar kept in the bill.

Adrian vs. Tecumseh.

Last Friday afternoon the T. H. S. nine met the Y. M. C. A. nine, of Adrian, in the national game, on Bill's race track grounds. A slight shower just before the game was called served to lay the dust and made the diamond in splendid condition. The game was called at 3 o'clock, with the Y. M. C. A. at the bat. During the first of the game the T. H. S. had things pretty much their own way, the Y. M. C. A. not scoring a run until the fifth inning, then they braced up and made four runs to the T. H. S. seven. It was an interesting game, and we hope to see the Y. M. C. A. on our grounds again. Umpire Southard pleased both sides by his open and fair decisions. The batteries were Carlton and Clapp for the Y. M. C. A. Harris and Gillen for T. H. S. Score 7 to 4, in favor of the T. H. S.

TRUTHS EASILY DIGESTED.

Concerning the New Method of Curing Dyspepsia and Stomach Troubles.

Dyspepsia and indigestion are considered incurable by many people who do not realize the advance made in modern medical science, and by the old methods and remedies a cure was rarely, if ever obtained.

Dyspepsia is now cured as readily as any other disease.

What the dyspeptic wants is abundant nutrition, which means plenty of good, wholesome, well-cooked food and something to assist the weak stomach to digest it. This is exactly the purpose for which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are adapted and this is the method by which they cure the worst cases of dyspepsia, in other words the patient eats plenty of wholesome food and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digest it for him. In this way the system is nourished and the overworked stomach rested, because the tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not. One of these tablets will digest 3,000 grains of meat or eggs.

This splendid remedy is prepared by Stuart Chemical Co., of Marshall, Mich. Your druggist will tell you that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is a remedy sold entirely on its merits and is the purest, safest and cheapest remedy for stomach troubles, and every trial makes one more friend for this excellent preparation.

The July crop report says: The returns at hand indicate that the wheat crop of the State this year will be about 15 per cent less than the crop of 1893. The reduction is entirely due to decreased acreage. The farm statistics returned by supervisors, so far as compiled, show a loss of 15 per cent in the southern and northern counties, and of 19 per cent in the central. Clover meadows and pastures are in bad condition, due to insect depredations. The timothy fields are in better condition, but are much below a fair average. Clover sowed this year promises well. They were killed and found to be suffering from the disease. Cats that had been fed milk from this cow were killed and found to be suffering from consumption, probably infected from the milk.

A recent copy of the Daily Express of San Antonio, Texas, contains an account of the first public reception of the San Antonio Art League in which we find a few words of favorable mention concerning our whilom friend LaVerne Wheeler: "Mr. LaVerne Wheeler gave a lecture on portraiture, which not only gave many valuable hints to Americans, but being entirely free from the prosy style which characterizes many 'talks' was highly interesting to the entire audience. Railroad Men Tie Up All Roads at Detroit —But Few Trains Are Moving—Situation at Other Points—Militia in Control at Ironwood.

ALL QUIT WORK.

DETROIT, July 9.—Every railroad entering this city was tied up tight at 10 o'clock Friday night. This action applies to the Wabash, Grand Trunk, Lake Shore, Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee; Detroit, Lansing & Northern; Flint & Pere Marquette, and Michigan Central. It was decided on at a meeting of the employes of the various roads early Friday evening. All day long the A. R. U. organizers, Spence and Chapman, have been addressing small bodies of railroad employes endeavoring to have them take a decided stand. The Michigan Central switchmen and freight handlers hung out, claiming that they had no grievance against their company. But they yielded to the combined persuasion of the strikers on all the other roads and announced their intention of going out. Ten o'clock Friday night was the hour, and promptly on the hour the seven roads were tied up. Mail trains are moving at fairly regular intervals without the slightest interference from strikers except in refraining from work.

The Detroit, Lansing & Northern, the Flint & Pere Marquette, the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee and the Chicago & Grand Trunk are moving a few trains. The freight handlers at the Front Street Union depot warehouses have returned to work, the association returning boycotted freight and promising to receive no more. The strikers are orderly.

The Michigan Central has been able to move a few trains, although all its switchmen, freight handlers, and many of its firemen and brakemen are out. On the Lake Shore and Grand Trunk two trains have got out of the city under a heavy guard of deputies.

The Cleveland, Canton & Southern, the only railway entering this city not affected by the strike Thursday, was tied up Saturday. It is in the hands of the court, and Receiver Wardwell says he will put new men at work and run his trains if it requires an army of armed deputy marshals.

Mayor Pingree received a telegram from General Manager Spicer, of Chicago, of the Detroit, Lansing & Northern and Chicago & Grand Trunk railroads, notifying him that the city would be held liable for damage to cars in West Detroit. The mayor replied that he did not consider the city liable.

The trouble now shows signs of spreading into Canada. At Windsor, across the river, the Michigan Central and Grand Trunk switchmen have gone out and the American Railway union organizers are working with the Canadian Pacific employes to organize them for a tie-up. Their efforts are meeting with much success.

At Benton Harbor.

BENTON HARBOR, July 6.—Sixty employes of the Michigan division of the Big Four railroad went out on strike Thursday morning. The order to strike came from the headquarters of the American Railway union. At a meeting of the local lodge it was decided to obey the order. All freight trains are tied up. Two passenger trains got out after much difficulty in making up. The strike was ordered on account of the Big Four handling cars filled with potatoes from the Louisville & Nashville road, which is included in the boycott.

At Grand Rapids.

GRAND RAPIDS, July 8.—The freight business on the southern division of the Grand Rapids & Indiana road was tied up at this end early Saturday morning by an order from Fort Wayne. The crews quit work when they reached the end of their run here. A train loaded with Milwaukee beer received from the steamer Nyack at Muskegon stood here all day, the men refusing to take it out. During the day five freight train crews quit work when they reached here, went to the general offices and asked for transportation to their homes, which was furnished, most of the men living at Fort Wayne. The roads reaching here have no trouble locally, but are tied up at Detroit, except the Detroit, Lansing & Northern, which avoided the trouble by refusing to handle boycotted freight.

Trains Abandoned.

KALAMAZOO, July 9.—The general manager of the Grand Rapids & Indiana road has issued orders to abandon all freight trains on account of the strike. The east and west roads being practically stopped leaves nothing but local freight to handle, and this alone does not pay for running trains. The Michigan Central, Grand Rapids & Indiana and Lake Shore roads accept no perishable freight at this point except at shippers' risk. The Michigan Central is now short of cars on account of the large numbers that are full of freight on the side tracks in Chicago. The shortage of cars has materially affected the business of several of the large manufacturing institutions in this city, and a number have shut down entirely, while others are running light until after the strike shall be settled, the local warehouses being fast filled with manufactured goods ready for shipment.

About two blocks of Grand Trunk track, near Vicksburg, were torn up Sunday by tramps. Deputy sheriffs were sworn in and tracks repaired. All freight traffic on the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad has closed. The men struck because the company removed stranded beef from the Grand Trunk track at Vicksburg and saved it from destruction.

Militia in Control at Ironwood.

IRONWOOD, July 7.—The Menominee company, Michigan national guard, arrived Thursday morning and proceeded to camp at the armory. All is quiet and no collision has occurred between the troops and the strikers. There are now 260 soldiers in camp. The strikers have daily meetings and are accumulating all the arms they can. It is reported that no less than 300 have arms.

Labor Commissioner Morse is here viewing the ground. It is thought he will order the militia home, as the mines cannot work even with ample protection. Business men and the city administration favor the course of the strikers, but violence and bloodshed is almost certain to follow the withdrawal of the troops if the strike is not settled before the militia leaves.

STRICKEN DOWN.

Heart Disease Suddenly Ends the Career of Ex-Gov. Winans.

He Dies at His Home Near Hamburg—Ill Only a Few Hours—Impressive Services—Brief Sketch of the Dead Man's Life.

EX-GOV. WINANS IS DEAD.

HAMBURG, July 5.—Ex-Governor Edwin B. Winans died at his home here at 4:30 Wednesday afternoon of heart disease. While he had not been in good health for several months, the attack which proved fatal was sudden and of short duration. Two physicians, who spent the night with him, had expressed grave fears of the outcome. They remained most of the day and the end came quietly this afternoon, with Mrs. Winans, his son, Maj. George Winans, and the other members of his family at his bedside. He had been troubled for several years with a supposed stomach difficulty, but the heart trouble was a new development and entirely unexpected.

(Ex-Gov. Winans was 68 years of age. He was born in Avon, N. Y., and came to Michigan with his parents in 1854. He was one of the Michigan men who started for the California gold el dorado in 1850, and spent eight years on the slope, amassing considerable property—enough, in fact, to buy a handsome 320-acre farm near Howell on his return. He was a member of the legislature from 1861 to 1864 and of the constitutional convention in 1867, judge of the probate court from 1877 to 1881, and was sent to congress in 1883. He was elected governor on the democratic ticket in 1891, and since the expiration of his term has lived quietly on his farm.)

HAMBURG, July 7.—Edwin B. Winan's remains were laid at rest Friday afternoon. Besides the friends and neighbors present a special train from Detroit brought Messrs. Alger, Pingree, Campau, Judge Miner and several others to pay their last respects. The remains lay in the bay window in the entrance hall of the residence. The body was inclosed in a red cedar, state casket, covered by black broadcloth. Wreaths and floral tributes filled the space about the coffin. Rector Stone, of Hamburg, read the Episcopal service, and afterwards Rev. Mr. Osborne and Judge Newton delivered brief eulogies. A line of carriages a mile long followed the hearse to the cemetery.

IN the senate numerous amendments to the tariff schedule were agreed to on the 2d, one being to make the repeal of the sugar bounty take immediate effect. A resolution was introduced for the appointment of a joint committee of the house and senate to inquire into the cause of the existing railway strike, but no action was taken.... In the house a resolution was passed directing the commissioner of labor to investigate the question of the work and wages of women and children. Adjourned until the 5th.

The populists divided their strength, Kyle and Allen voting in favor of the bill and Peffer and Stewart against it. The action of the committee of the whole in exempting the salaries of United States judges and the president of the United States from the operation of the income tax was reversed. Adjourned to the 6th.... The house was not in session.

IN the United States senate no business of importance was transacted on the 6th, and an adjournment was taken until the 9th.... The point of interest in the day's proceedings was the taking of the tariff bill from the speaker's table and its reference to the committee on ways and means. Several unimportant bills were passed. The evening session was devoted to private pension bills.

THAT TIRED FEELING.

Is a dangerous condition directly due to depleted or impure blood. It should not be allowed to continue, as in its debility the system is especially liable to serious attacks of illness. Our base ball boys met the Adrian Light Guard team on the home ground Saturday afternoon. While our boys did not present as strong a nine as at Jackson, having some players who had only played one game before this season, they however were fortunate enough to win the game. At one time it looked as if they might have to play the ninth inning. The game though not a fine one, was at times interesting and exciting, for it was close. The visiting team were genial fellows and we hope to see them again. Following is the score:

Clinton,	2	0	1	0	4	4	1	0	0—14

Blanchard for Clinton bore off the batting honors with two doubles. For Adrian E. Sorter, Watson and Davis each had a double and single to their credit. Umpires Muldary and Rogers gave fair satisfaction.

The game of ball our team played at Jackson on July 4th, was directly the opposite of the one they played up at Adrian the Saturday before, and deserves more than a passing notice. Our boys were on their mettle, full of vim, batted well when it was needed and stole bases like league players. The game was too one-sided to be intensely interesting. In justice to the athletic club, who recently won at the tournament in that city, and played the Grand Rapids league team the day before (July 3d), we would say they did not play their accustomed game. They were less spirited than usual, and made several costly errors unusual to them. Before giving the game we wish to notice the treatment our boys received at the hands of the Athletic Club and the people of Jackson, for the impression has gone out that Jackson is not noted for very hospitable treatment of visiting ball teams. No one could receive better attention than was accorded our team by all. When our boys reached Jackson the Athletic team was there to receive them, and escorted them to the hotel Ruhl where every attention was given them by the genial proprietor and his gentlemanly assistants. The clubs went to the fair grounds together and during the practice work our boys showed up well and at once gained favor with the spectators who were very liberal in their applause all through the game. Umpire Ed Dixon did his work well and gave entire satisfaction to both clubs.

The game began at 3:30 p. m. with Clinton at the bat. Schofield made a nice single and reached second on a passed ball. Hause made a base hit; both moved up a base on La DeCour going to first on balls. Another passed ball took Schofield home. Hause to 3d and La DeCour to second. Merriman struck out. Hause reached home plate on an error by F. Stinson. Sutfin got first on an error by McClary (La DeCour scoring) and stole second, but got no further, as Wade struck out and Carpenter flew out to McClary. 3 runs. In the third, Hause was thrown out at first. La DaCour got his base on balls and stole second. Merriman made a single and stole second; both scored on a wild pitch. Wade got his base on balls, but Carpenter was thrown out at first by McClary. 2 runs. In the fifth Schofield made a hit. La DaCour reached first on Wesley's muff of his fly to right. Merriam went out on a fly to Webber in center field, who made a fine double play by throwing Schofield out at second. Sutfin made a hit and stole second, but Wade went out on a grounder to Zeigenhein. 1 run. In the seventh inning Hause made a hit and reached third on an error by Phillips. La Da Cour made a scratch hit, Hause scoring. Merriman went out at first. Sutfin fouled out to Hobbs. Wade reached first on Zeigenhine's error, went to third on an error by McClary and home on an error by Hobbs. Carpenter reached first on McClary's error and got his base on ball, both scoring on a passed ball. Kennedy went to first on another error by McClary, but Schofield went out on strikes and the inning closed. 5 runs. In the ninth Sutfin went out on a live hit to Hobbs. Wade got first on Zeigenhein's error, second on Carpenter's single, stole third and scored on Kennedy's hit. Bice struck out and Kennedy was put out at second on Schofield's hit to McClary. 1 run.

Jackson received six goose eggs. In the seventh Webber made a scratch hit but was put out by Schofield in attempting to steal second. Zeigenhein made a hit and stole second. Wesley got a base on balls. Davenport made a fine hit, scoring Zeiginhein. A. Stinson struck out and F. Stinson struck out at first. In the ninth Wesley made a hit and got second on an error by Carpenter. Davenport went out on a fly to Merriam. A Stinson reached first on Hause's error. F. Stinson struck out. McClary made a great hit to left field, Wesley scoring. A Stinson tried it but Wade made one of his phenomenal throws and he was nipped at home plate and the struggle was over. 1 run.

DANGEROUS SURGERY.

Death follows the Surgeon's knife—Not the Surgeon's fault of course. He can't help it.—You can.

Pyramid Pile Cure cures piles quickly, painlessly, without danger. People go along for years suffering with piles. Then try this, and that and the other thing; from carrying a buckeye to getting treatment from a physician. They obtain temporary relief, maybe, but they are never quite cured. A little strain in lifting, excessive fatigue, a little constipation or a little diarrhoea and the piles come back.

They don't seem to amount to much, but they banish sleep and appetite. No position is comfortable. There is intense local pain and that dreadful, agonizing feeling of weight in the perineum.

Maybe in the early stages some of the many salves on sale will afford temporary relief. If the case is of long standing there is only one speedy and sure remedy. It is Pyramid Pile Cure. Even in light cases it is the safest thing to use. Other applications may cure and may not. Pyramid Cure is always certain, always reliable, always brings comfort at once. It's prompt use saves months of severe suffering. In extreme cases it will save surgical operations and their attendant dangers and discomforts. It is better than a knife. Will cure easier, quicker and safer. Thousands have used it. Thousands have been cured by it. The cost is trifling compared with what it does. The price is one dollar. Most anybody would gladly pay ten dollars to be rid of piles.

Druggists sell Pyramid Pile Cure. If yours hasn't it, he will get it for you from the Pyramid Drug Co., Albion, Mich. (sole manufacturers.)

After a horse dies the people begin to hear that the owner has refused hundreds and hundreds of dollars for it.

BIMETALLISM AND MONOMETALLISM

BY

OF

DUBLIN, IRELAND

Owing to the great demand for Archbishop Walsh's pamphlet an monometallism and its ruinous effects on the land TENANTRY of IRELAND we have reproduced it on elegant book paper, neatly bound; containing 80 pages. It is one of the most logical, practical, illustrative and convincing arguments in favor of BIMETALLISM that has ever been published. This pamphlet is having a wide circulation and should be read by every citizen of the United States. He had been a great sufferer from liver trouble for a number of years, which finally caused his death. The deceased was born in Deleware county, N. Y., on Feb. 23th, 1818. He came to this vicinity when a young man and purchased the farm where he died, which he occupied for nearly 57 years. He was a very kind neighbor, very charitable to those that needed charity; good in attending upon the wants of the sick, and an indulgent husband and parent, and will be greatly missed from the circle of friends which had always surrounded him through life. The services were conducted by Rev. Robinson on Friday afternoon at the North Rome First Baptist church, and the remains were laid in the cemetery near by his former wife, who had preceeded him about 17 years. They were once parted but now reunited.

Britton and Liquor Selling.

Your Britton correspondent in last week's issue says: "The business men of our town were somewhat surprised by having Elder E. Mudge call on them and asking them to swear that they did not sell or give away any intoxicating liquors on the 4th."

That such liquors were sold your correspondent will not deny. That those selling were guilty of a triple violation of state and national law, all will agree. Strong suspicion, not entirely without reason, was placed upon our home dealers. The undersigned does not practice bestowing patronage upon those who sell liquors as a beverage, much less those who sell such liquors in defiance of law. As a matter of individual principle I asked these dealers if they were willing to declare upon their honor as men that they did not engage in such unlawful traffic. The innocent certainly were not wronged by making the declaration. Several dealers, without hesitation, signed the papers handed them. The firm represented by your correspondent has not responded. I have the gratification that I have made an individual protest against this whole procedure, whoever was guilty. In the sermon on the Sunday following I voiced the moral and christian sentiment of the community against a thing of this kind.

If our dealers can be made to feel that they cannot afford to surrender the patronage of good and regular customers for the little margin they may receive for unlawful vending of liquors one day in the year, then the disgraceful exhibition of the 4th will not be repeated. If there were guilty parties they may thank their stars that they meet the indignant protest of their own citizens and escape the heavier penalties of the law. E. Mudge.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

The drouth is becoming terrible. Everybody prays for rain—or should at least.

The "kid" nines of Pentecost and the club school play a game of base ball at Sand Lake next Saturday. Harry Moore is to act as umpire.

These are busy days for the farmers wife—canning fruit, getting up meals and lunches for the hungry husband, men etc. The days are long and the nights are all too short for needed rest.

There will be an ice cream social at J. S. Pentecost's pleasant home, at Pentecost, on the evening of July 25. There will be good music, vocal and instrumental, and also good ice cream and cake, all for ten cents.

Some miscrant drove furiously along the road a few nights since, yelling and firing a revolver, startling people from their sleep and doubtless thinking they were doing something vastly fine, but really only making a silly nuisance of themselves.

The report comes to us that Manly Morley, a farmer, of Woodstock, started to drive to the barn last Monday, with his reaper, after he had finished cutting his wheat; the wheels ran over something, jolting him off the machine and causing instant death, probably breaking his neck in the fall. His funeral took place on Wednesday.

A remarkably fresh specimen of a drummer for a grocery house went into a country store in this county this week and finding a young lady clerk alone in the store, he became so very demonstrative and affectionate that the lady ran to a neighbor's house for help, when Mr. Drummer decamped in haste, and unless he thinks a coat of tar and feathers becoming to him he will do well to avoid that vicinity in the future.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE STORE.

It is particularly pleasant, especially amid the din and tumult—the general unsettledness and dissatisfied condition of affairs throughout the entire country, to discover some little resting spot where peace and harmony, tranquility and prosperity reign undisturbed. It is an example of what honest purpose tightly directed and a determination to succeed is able to accomplish, under the most adverse condition and difficulties. The subject of this sketch is under the management of Walter C. Mack.

At the beginning of the present year, when times were gloomy and the outlook discouraging, as never before, when in the mouth of every merchant was the prediction: "this will be the dullest spring Ann Arbor has ever known," instead of being governed by these discordent notes of warning and preparing themselves to meet such a condition of trade by reducing expenses and cutting down their salery list, they adopted an exactly contrary plan to meet such an emergency. To his salespeople, Mr. Mack explained that it was his determination to make this "the greatest season The Store has ever enjoyed"—"never mind about the times" he said, as the proposition fell upon many incredulous ears. "Washtenaw county is big enough—her resorces are large enough, the people are intelligent, will be economical enough in such times as are upon us, that with the extraordinary effort we will make and the splendid merchandising we propose to give them, they will readily recognize our efforts, and their advantage, and will respond in a way that will be a mutual benefit to all.

Having adopted this plan for the season no time was lost in executing it to the fullest extent. With plenty of capital at their command, the markets were ransacked for their best values, great lines of seasonable goods were bought in unbroken lots at prices never before obtainable—nothing that had the merit of a big bargain was allowed to escape, and goods were piled up in The Store—filling its great capacity—and this too, with a paralysis of business coming upon them. The goods had to be sold—that was certain. No carrying purchases beyond the season, and to do this they could resort to but one means—tell the people what they have got, let the people know what they have been doing in the way of buying goods, let them know just what they expected to do in the way of selling them. For this, they relied entirely upon printer's ink. Not in homeopath doses but in gigantic quantities, enough to tell their story in every household of the country. The great trade-tide at once began to flow Ann Arborward, rising higher and higher—each day submerging all previous sale records, all attempts at competition. This season's remarkable retailing, this rapid assembling and disbursing of large quantities of merchandise, illustrates how thoroughly equipped they are to take advantage of every commercial condition in any part of the country, renders it impossible for any house in the whole country to undersell them, renders it altogether improbable for any local house to meet the marvelous merchandising at The Store. It was these advantages, combined with an undoubtable will that has made the first half of the present year the most successful in its history.

A FINAL MID-SUMMER SALE.

As a fitting ending of this remarkable season they are now preparing for a great mid-summer sale to close out all odds and ends of their great purchases, but more especially to close out their entire line of Carpets and Draperies—goods advertise in these lines of goods—prices this country has never known, and it is their intention to clean out this entire department in the next few weeks the public can look for something startling. This will be all the more appreciated in the city where housecleaning is now in full blast in preparation for next year's college year. Too much cannot be said of those special sales as well as their Saturday sales, which bring a concourse of people to Ann Arbor in the course of the year and make The Store what it really is—Washtenaw Co.'s Trading Center—Taken from the Ann Arbor Register.

Referring to the above we desire to say that Walter C. Mack, manager of The Store at Ann Arbor, is sole owner of The Store at Manchester, and that a portion of some bargains bought for the Ann Arbor house are sent to the Manchester store. Thus far The Store in Manchester has been a great success, owing very largely to the fact that Mr. Mack has given his patrons greater bargains than they ever enjoyed before. From the start he made it a rule to mark everything in plain figures and makes one price to all, thereby gaining the confidence of the entire community. With the great purchasing power he possesses, coupled with the fact that he sells for cash only, lies a double guarantee of The Store's continued success.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 19, 1894.

About all one can say in favor of the Senate tariff bill is that it is a great improvement on the McKinley law. That is not much, but it is something.

An indictment has been found against President Debs for conspiracy and he has been held for trial under bonds of $1,000. Now let the law take its course.

The suburbs of Detroit are mostly taken up with potato fields and the Detroit papers are praying that the potato bugs may find pasture outside of that city.

While the people are wrangling over the "poor down-trodden victims" of Pullman, let us not forget that those same victims are in need of money and assistance.

It seems to be a triangular fight between Uncle Sam, President Debs and the irrepressible Pullman and at this writing the latter is clearly in the lead.

It is now said that President Debs is the graduate of a Kentucky institution. That explains some things in the management of the strike which were incomprehensible before.

President Cleveland has appointed an arbitration commission under the provisions of the Erdman act. The act is inoperative in such cases as the present strike.

President Debs is getting mad. He declares that the strike has been conducted in a peaceful manner in every particular. But what will Mr. Debs say when the strike has collapsed?

President Cleveland's popularity is revived. With his usual courage he is stronger than ever to-day, and many will pray earnestly for his success in these times when we need a strong and healthy man at the helm.

Congressman Breckinridge's bill for the suppression of immorality along the Ohio river is offered as a measure that his constituents would like to see enacted into law. Of course, that is the principal object of all legislation.

As the Knights of Labor did not strike last week, when a strike would be of no significance, it follows that the collapse of the big strike to-day is a matter of course. All strikes are again moving as usual, and the great strike has passed into the track of fast-vanishing history.

A strange thing about the Pullman receivership was that the provisions contributed for the support of Pullman was seized by the strikers and burned. That is a queer way for laboring men to show their sympathy for Pullman employes.

The Saginaw Republican puns pretty in this wise. "Treasurer Hill is discovered, and a good three years' job he's the man to arbitrate when everything won't go. The boys stand ready to accept and trade at cost." Three years more of Grover C.

Senator Morgan, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, and in charge of the Chinese treaty, has given an indefinite leave of absence for a week and is not expected to resume his duties during the present session. This indicates that no action is to be taken on the treaty at this session and that the administration had asked that the matter be called up again at this session is an indication that the administration is satisfied with the present status of the matter and to the prevailing sentiment.

The Outlook touches on "courtesy" in this fashion: "Senator Chandler, of New Hampshire, charges Senator Allen, of Nebraska, of the grossest want of courtesy in giving away his vote, and Senator Allen replies by characterizing his colleague as 'the saloon' of the Senate. Senator Hill, of New York, tells Senator Harris, of Tennessee, that his manners are those of the plantation, and Senator Harris replies that Senator Hill's manners are those of the slums of New York. Governor Tillman, of South Carolina, who is a candidate for the United States Senate, charges that the railroads are raising a corruption fund in the interest of his opponent, Senator Butler, and the latter retorts by calling Governor Tillman a liar and a coward. This is one week's record. Now will some one define what is meant by 'senatorial courtesy'"

The real fight for tariff reform is yet to come in the conference committee, and a few days there will tell the story.

General Master Workman Sovereign does not seem to be sovereign nor master of all he surveys in this strike. In his efforts to call out the United Workmen he was pretty badly snubbed.

Out of all the numerous bills, resolutions, etc., introduced in Congress on account of the strike, the only one that looks like it is going through is the resolution reported from the House committee on interstate commerce providing for a thorough investigation by that committee, not only of the Pullman strike but of all of those which have followed it that affect in any way interstate commerce. The idea seems to be to let other bills and resolutions rest until the investigation is made and a report submitted to Congress.

The Pullman strike has brought the taking of railroad travel to a certain extent under government control. A bill has been introduced in Congress limiting the charges for berths on sleeping cars to $1 00 per night and to abolish the porter tipping nuisance. Heretofore the lowest price has been $2.00 per night with the additional fee that had to be paid to get half way decent attention, which run from 25 cents to $1 00 more. This bill should certainly become a law. The sleeping car monopoly and tyranny combined has become a [illegible] which ought to be abated in some way. A DAY'S LESSON.

Bend to the breeze. 'Tis the lesson the grasses
Teach us each day in their lowly estate.
Better to bend 'neath the storm as it passes
Than to be broken by pitiless fate.

Bend but a little, the cloud will pass over;
Then in the lull you can lift up your head.
Straighten yourselves like the grass and the clover;
Better be bruised and be living than dead.

"Stand like a rock!" That may do for a hero
Covered with mail and well used to his lance,
But there are mortals, too many, as we know,
Weakened by failure, coerced by a glance.

"Never give up." It is easy to say it
When all your weapons in order are found.
Courage grows faint when we need not display it;
All can be brave when the lions are bound.

"Nothing succeeds like success," that is certain,
True as the gospel in these latter days.
Put out the footlights, and ring down the curtain
If you have nothing that people must praise.

Bend to the breeze. 'Tis the lesson the grasses
Teach us today; 'tis a lesson of love;
Bend till the storm of adversity passes,
And the clear sunshine is once more above.
—Clara J. Heath in Good Housekeeping.

ALWAYS BEAUTIFUL.

On the banks of the Orge, but a short distance from Belles-Fontaines, can be seen an elegant little chateau of modern construction, roofed with slate. Standing on the hillside, in the midst of grassy lawns and surrounded by low trees, the house attracts the attention of the few rowers who from time to time descend the Orge to Juvisy. Occasionally a fisherman in search of a good place to throw his hook has perceived on the heights above a woman, her face covered with a thick veil, and a young man who walked slowly beside her, leaning on her arm. At the slightest sound of an oar both disappeared around the bend of a path or behind a clump of shrubs. The people of Juvisy had vainly employed every effort to penetrate the mystery.

After having exhausted all imaginable suppositions the innkeeper and the grocer of Juvisy had decided that the young man was a maniac, whom his family had imprisoned in that property, bounded by a high wall on the side toward the road and by a river on that toward the fields. As for the woman, she was a relative or a hireling, and when a painter, returning from Belles-Fontaines, asked who was the owner of that sheltered, mysterious looking park, without the slightest hesitation they replied, "It is a madman who lives there."

On July 10, 1884, during one of those periods of heat which Senegambia envies us the Viscount de Montbrun left his small hotel in the Rue Varnet at 9 in the morning and walked down the Champs Elysees. M. de Montbrun was one of those Parisians who never leave Paris. "The sea," said he, "was made for fishermen and sailors. It has its beauties of course, but it is agreeable only one hour each day. As soon as it begins to ebb it uncovers a lot of pestilential mud, compared with which our great sewer is a bottle of cologne. As for the country, it is always just as hot there as in Paris, with this difference—you just don't know what to do with your evenings there." On all sides he saw hacks loaded with trunks.

The preparations for the approaching 14th of July festivities saddened his heart, for the true Parisian is the inveterate enemy of public holidays and of all manifestations which disturb his repose.

"Where can I take refuge for three days?" thought M. de Montbrun. The year previous he had gone to St. Germain, and they had made just as much racket and shot off quite as many bombs there as at Paris. Montbrun then remembered that he had promised himself an excursion into Brittany before the pick of the demi-dishes had finished transforming that old corner of his country. To see again Vitre Fougères, pass a day at St. Malo and then return would be just the thing. He would thus avoid the crowd and noise.

On the morrow Montbrun arrived at Vitre. It was Saturday evening. In provincial towns to fairly judge the beauty of their women it is necessary to take one's post on Sunday at the door of a church. That is why Montbrun stood as early as 8 in the morning before the splendid edifice dedicated to St. Martin, waiting for mass to be over. Before leaving Paris he had thrown into a postbox a few words addressed to Mlle. Paula Salimberi, an artistic dancer at the Eden theater. Paula was a superb girl, a native of southern Italy, with all the ardor of that clime beaming from her large, dark eyes. She had made her debut at Naples, and after a season at the Italian theater at Nice had displayed to the Parisians her irreproachable shape and varied graces.

Montbrun was then 28 years of age, a handsome man, well versed in theatrical doings, whose personal charms were augmented by an income of 60,000 francs a year. His admiration for the charming ballet dancer was at once reciprocated, and they were soon launched upon the waves of a desperate flirtation. But the young man's fancy was short lived. It was not long before the shallow attractions of the Italian beauty ceased to please him, and he longed to escape from her altogether. But Othello's jealousy was puerile compared to hers. Montbrun was fairly afraid of her. He dared not tell her outright what the gradual decline of his attentions portended. He had simply dropped a note to her upon his departure for Vitre bidding her a long farewell and intimating that he might never see her again. As she believed that he had no means of procuring his address, he thought himself now well out of her way.

Mass was over, and people were beginning to come out of the church. Suddenly Montbrun was seized with admiration. Amid the crowd he had caught sight of the face of a young girl. Never in his most ardent dreams had he imagined aught so lovely as that face, with its ideal lines, its more than earthly beauty—beauty so calm, so serene, so radiantly pure that it seemed that of one of God's angels. He wondered if it were possible that such a creature existed. He held his breath as he gazed on her descending the church steps, smiling at an older woman who accompanied her, her mother doubtless. Instinctively Montbrun followed them from afar and saw them enter a small house of modest appearance. Taking the number, he returned to the hotel and asked for information.

"That beautiful girl? Mlle. de Larade. Her father was an excellent man. His family were rich before the revolution, but each succeeding generation had sold off little by little land and fields and woods to keep up their rank. Finally poor M. de Larade had taken refuge in a small building formerly occupied by his intendant. There he lived, as best he could, with his wife, nee Laroche-Glaieul, and his daughter Jeanne. He had probably not more than 1,200 or 1,500 francs' income, but the ladies knew how to live on very little, while he, poor gentleman, had even given up taking snuff."

The viscount wrote to his notary at Paris, requesting him to at once send him a letter of introduction to a notary of Vitre and to apprise that gentleman that he, Montbrun, came of a good family, had the reputation of being a man of honor and was not without fortune, after which the notary of Vitre would effect his acquaintance with a family wherein he hoped to find happiness.

Everything happened as the viscount had arranged. He was presented to Mlle. Jeanne de Larade, found her all he thought, came again and again to her home and was finally accepted as her future husband upon certain conditions. Montbrun promised everything they wished. He was in an ecstasy of bliss during the few weeks which preceded the day fixed for his marriage.

In the midst of his dreaming he received through his notary—he had carefully concealed his address from all others—a letter from one of his friends, who write him that Paula Salimberi was seeking him in every direction and uttering direful threats.

At length the eventful day arrived. The contract had been signed. Two friends of Montbrun had come from Paris to serve him as witnesses, and on the 10th of September, at 11 in the morning, the guests left in carriages for the mayor's office. The viscount and two or three persons were speaking with a functionary at that office when they were startled by a piercing scream, followed by a long clamor of voices. Rushing to the windows, they saw a hurrying crowd, amid which a small group were massed about a recumbent form.

"What has happened?" exclaimed Montbrun, almost suffocated by apprehension.

"An unknown woman has thrown vitriol in the face of Mlle. de Larade. All one side of the poor child's face is badly burned and an eye destroyed. They are carrying her to her home."

Montbrun fell, rigid and unconscious, to the floor.

He tried vainly during the day to be received at the home of his betrothed.

"Tell him that he will never see me again!" she cried, shedding tears that, rolling over her raw wounds, burned her like fire.

The suffering of M. de Montbrun was intense. Consumed with fever, his heart seemed pressed in a vise.

A little later a small package was delivered to him.

The unknown woman, arrested immediately after the perpetration of her crime, stated that her name was Paula Salimberi; her motive, vengeance.

Montbrun shut himself in his bedroom and opened his parcel, which contained a small quantity of white powder. Folding a handkerchief into a bandage, he measured out two spoonfuls of the powder and spread it on the bandage, which he then placed over his eyes, tying it in a firm knot at the back of his head.

Two hours after he arrived at the home of M. de Larade in a coupe, from which the notary of Vitre helped him to descend.

"Do not come in," said Mme. de Larade, "it would kill Jeanne."

"Tell her that she may receive me now," replied M. de Montbrun. "We shall be married as soon as she is able to leave the house. For me, her image will remain eternally what it was—I am blind."

* * * * * *

M. and Mme. de Montbrun lead a retired life in their chateau at Juvisy. Jeanne adores the husband who for her renounced forever the sight of sky and fields and flowers. As for the blind man, he has kept intact the picture of an ideal maiden smilingly descending the steps of the Church of St. Martin. He is happy, for in the unending night to which he has condemned himself he sees her always young, always beautiful.—Translated From the French For San Francisco News-Letter.

Wizards of High Degree.

Russian Fins, or "Roosian" Fins, as Jacky has it, were, and are yet, wizards of high degree, says Lieutenant J. D. Jerrold Kelley in an article on "Superstitions of the Sea" in The Century. Hurricanes blew, calms beset, gales roared as they willed, and their incantations began to operate by the simple sticking of a knife in the mast. If they wished to drive the rats out of a vessel, they shoved the point of a snicker skew into the deck, and every rat ran for the sharp blade and willy nilly performed hara kiri. No one ever saw in sailor lore a penniless Russian Finn, for by slipping his hand into his pocket he can always produce a gold doubloon—why a gold doubloon no one seems to know, but it is always that coin. His rum bottle, often consulted silently and alone, is never full nor empty—a gentle plashing of the tide—half tide bringing fat content, and woe be to the incautious mariner who bites the weather side of his thumb at him, for harm will surely follow.

ACROSS ILLINOIS ON A WHEEL.

MARENGO, Iowa, July 11, 1894.

DEAR MR. EDITOR:—The first letter describing my trip from Tecumseh, Mich., to Denver, Col. on a bike, was written at Chicago where I tarried one day, the 5th of July. On the evening of that day I witnessed the great fire at the World's Fair Grounds. The spectral appearance of the great buildings was changed to one of begrimmed ruin. The following morning at 10 o'clock I left Chicago, with its strikes and tied up railroads, and as I gradually reached the open country, I breathed a breath of relief. I sped very fast for about twenty-two miles, for a strong lake breeze was at my back. At Lombard, a little German town, I squandered a quarter for hospitality, and a good substantial dinner. Here several traveling men who could not travel envied my independence of railroads. The roads are fine through Ill., and I rode along very steadily while viewing a country which differs in no way from Southern Michigan, except that it is more level. At Roselle after riding 90 miles, I gradually passed and slumbered until six the following morning when I set out to make Dixon, where I intended to pass that day and the night with an old friend.

Getting out of town I was deliberately coasting a hill at full speed, when trouble commenced. A condemned bridge at the foot of the hill had been barred up with a long plank. Ten feet away I became aware of the fact by the thoroughfare. I jumped, pulled my wheel on its side and slid. My W. took off a little of its ornamental nickle and I lost about as much cuticle skin. A few baby-blue bruises on my arms and legs but otherwise a complete and well adjusted anatomy. Now I had an awful doubt. Perhaps this was the wrong road? Well I could ask at the next farm house so I pushed on. Farm houses were not as frequent as were went. I was getting nervous. At last a house loomed up in the distance. I rode rapidly and was soon there. It was a school house and as silent as a grave. All the erudition with [illegible] could not aid me. Thus disappointing and again I hastened on. Another house and I saw people at the door. This was a relief, I left my wheel at the fence and went up to my destinations. At the first call I was not needed but when close by I attracted attention and soon discovered to my chagrin that husband and wife were deaf and dumb. This was interesting but I passed on, and at the next house found to my relief that I was on the right road. Dixon is a busy town, about 8000 inhabitants. It has felt the hard times very little because of the stability of one of its largest industries, a condensed milk company, which uses the milk of over 5000 cows. It was in this town that I spent nearly two days, and enjoyed a very romantic boat ride by moonlight upon Rock River. With its islands and rocky banks this river is very picturesque. On Monday I resumed my westward wheeling, and by noon reached the Mississippi River at Clinton. The river is spanned by a bridge which rises up to a head at the center, and allows the tallest boats to pass beneath. The first indication of the river was the sight of two enormous paddle wheels and a smoke stack far appearing above a high bluff before me. When I reached the summit of the peaked bridge, I looked up the river at the long line of wooded bluffs that extended as far as the eye could reach and down where the shores [illegible] bayous were to be seen separating the land from the main stream of the river. My mind filled with memories of the historic events connected with the American father of waters and I pondered while I coasted down upon the other side into Iowa. Suddenly I heard vigorous shouts, and had scarce my poetic meditations to look back at a man pursuing me frantically down the incline. I put on breaks and came to a stand wondering what crime I had perpetrated in crossing the Mississippi. The man came up breathless and held out his hand and I shook it thinking to make friends if he was an officer. He gasped "five cents" and he smiled and said "bicycles same as foot passengers." It was toll for passing that bridge. Clinton on the [illegible] a city of 30 or 40 thousand inhabitants. I soon became aware that prohibition does not prohibit for there were saloons in full blast on all sides. That afternoon I rode 30 miles into Iowa to Grand Mound. Did you ever drink graveyard milk? Rather an uncanny beverage but near Dewitt where I stopped at an Irishman's farm for a glass of milk in lieu of paying for it, I complimented the milk and the old lady said with an grimace, "Yes, it's a foine pasture the cows have on the grave yard beyant." I looked and beheld the grave yard and passed on in maiden meditation. The lacteal fluid extracted by nature from the bones of the departed isn't very appetizing. Tuesday I spent climbing hills for 65 tedious miles. When nature made Iowa she just threw mud pattycakes at random over the landscape, and when the inhabitants made the roads they used a cork screw as a model and hunted up all the hills and chased the roads over their summits. Not only that but there are eight roads to every town, and not two men agree as to which is the best. Germany is a huge hatchery to supply Iowa with farmers; two-thirds of the farmers are Germans and the other third Irish. Scarcely any wheat is raised on the belt through which I am passing. Corn is the staple. Rye and oats are also grown. The festive swine gambols along the road side, almost omnipresent. Every large oak tree where I would like to get into the shade and rest, is infested by at least one or two lazy hogs. The view of the country from the summit on many of the huge knolls is grand, as the land seems to roll away and break upon the horizon of forests. The bluffs along Cedar River as I neared Iowa City were very high and wooded with oak. At Homestead I found a very peculiar town. It seemed a place of 800 or 1000 inhabitants. The main street was apparently a row of dwelling houses but from each one ran out a sign board advertising here a hardware, there a grocery, and so on through the category of necessary stores for a village. I am now on a straight route to Omaha which I expect to reach by Saturday night, and will write to you from there.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will get more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Low rate excursions every month over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. E. E. Posey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile, Ala.

DIED.

On Sabbath, June 24th, about 5 o'clock p. m., Mrs. Cordelia Peters, wife of Dr. H. Peters, from her late home in Blissfield, Mich., after a few days of intense suffering, departed into her eternal rest.

Mrs. Peters was born in Monroe, Mich., Dec. 20, 1829. She was married Oct. 1st, 1854; and leaves her husband and three children. For the last forty years of her life she has been a most devoted Christian and a member of the Presbyterian church. She was distinguished for her keen sense of right and wrong for her activity in Christian work. The deep and wide spread grief caused by her departure is evidence of the high esteem and love in which she was held by all who knew her, which affection was won by her Christ like life. Many are the hearts that have been cheered by her tender loving ministries in material and spiritual things. She was a loved teacher in the Sabbath school, an active worker and officer in the W. C. T. U., and W. R. C. Many friends deeply sympathize with the bereaved husband and children in the loss of their loved one, but rejoice in that she has ceased from her sufferings and labors of earth and has entered upon the fuller companionship and joy of our Redeemer and the redeemed. She could have said with Paul, "For me to live is Christ, to die is gain."—Blissfield Advance.

Frankfort and Crystal Lake are among the most beautiful of Northern Michigan summer resorts, and the extremely low rate places the trip within reach of all.

THEY WANT NAMES.

The Russell Art Publishing Co., of 925 Arch Street, Philadelphia, desire the names and address of a few people in every town who are interested in works of art, and to secure them they offer to send free, "Cupid Guides the Boat," a superbly executed water picture size 10x15 inches, suitable for framing, and sixteen other pictures about same size, in colors, to any one sending them at once the names and address of ten persons (admirers of fine pictures) together with six two-cent stamps to cover expense of mailing, etc. The regular price of these pictures is $1.00, but they can all be secured free by any person forwarding the names and stamps promptly.

NOTE—The editor of this paper has already received copies of above pictures and considers them really "Gems of Art."

The Simplest Cure for Indigestion.

As well as the Safest and Cheapest.

The new medical discovery, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, digest the food instead of making the worn out stomach do all the work, give it a much needed rest, and a cure of dyspepsia is the natural result.

You get nourishment and rest at the same time because these Tablets will thoroughly digest all wholesome food in the stomach whether the stomach works or not. A cure is certain to result because the digestive organs are given a chance to rest and recover their natural vigor and tone. The Tablets are then no longer required.

To show the manner in which the remedy acts on different people and how quickly and effectually it cures stomach troubles we present a few recent cases:

Mr. J. O. Wondly of Peoria, Ills., writes: I was unable to eat anything but the plainest food, and even that often distressed me, but since using one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets I can eat anything and everything I want.

Mrs. Samuel Kepple, of Girty, Pa., writes: I have been entirely relieved of stomach troubles by your Tablets. I suffered three years with sour stomach and gas at night. I am thankful for them.

Mrs. A. E. Bowen, Barnard, Vt., writes: I think Stuart's Despepsia Tablets are the best thing for dyspepsia I ever took. I will recommend them to anyone troubled as bad as I was.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will not disappoint because they cure Dyspepsia surely and lastingly by causing the food to be properly assimilated, and cure constipation by producing the proper quantity of bile. Prepared by Stuart Chemical Co., Marshall, Mich., and sold by all druggists at 50cts. per package.

An interesting game of ball was played between Blissfield and Tecumseh, Friday afternoon. The game promised to be a close and interesting one from start, but some costly errors were made by our boys in the 5th run, when Blissfield made nine runs, bringing the score to 12—six in their favor. In the 7th inning score stood 11 to 12 in favor of same. At the close 12 to 16 in Blissfield's favor. Our boys have no reason to feel discouraged this being only the second game they have lost. Harris struck out 15 men, while Regan got only 4. Some very good fielding was done by both sides a very marked play being made by Owens, he making a running catch, then making double play by throwing it to Whelan on the first. Blissfield made a double play in the 9th innings. Regan and O'Leary of Toledo, were the battery for the Blissfield nine.

HE OWNED UP.

A Captured Criminal at Detroit Makes a Confession.

He Acknowledges to Extensive Forgeries Throughout the Country—Formerly a Member of the Minnesota Senate, and Son of a Millionaire.

STORY OF HIS DOWNFALL.

DETROIT, July 16.—Alonzo Jay Whiteman, at one time a member of the Minnesota senate, the son of a millionaire and worth $300,000 in his own right, occupies a cell in the central station. When arrested he gave the name of Frederick Henry Cooper, but he was recognized by a former chum in the Columbia law college, of which he is a graduate. He has made a full confession to Detective Baker. Whiteman lived in Danville, N. Y. His father, now deceased, had made him executor of his will without requiring him to give a bond. The result was he had nearly $1,000,000 at his disposal. Most of the money was invested in good securities in New York state and part of it belonged to his sister. While living in Duluth Whiteman became addicted to gambling. It is asserted that he misappropriated large sums from his sister's share of the estate and later became identified with a gang of forgers who have been doing business in different parts of the country.

He says that his home recently has been in New York city and that during the last nine months he had made $5,000 out of his forged paper. The detectives in this city have information to the effect that there is $50,000 worth of spurious checks forged by him held by the Corn Exchange bank in Chicago, and that the Board of Trade bank also holds a considerable amount of the worthless paper.

Whiteman is under arrest here for complicity with James R. DeWitt in passing a forged check for $50 on the Cadillac hotel. Whiteman said in his confession that he was a moral and physical wreck and that gambling had caused his downfall. The police think he has also done crooked work in New York.

GOOD WORK ON THE WHEEL.

Road Records Are Broken on the Belle Isle Course at Detroit.

DETROIT, July 16. Five hundred wheelmen on Saturday saw both the 25 and 50-mile road race records broken over the Belle Isle measured course. F. H. Herrick, of this city, finished the 25 miles in 1:07:46 1-5, breaking the record for the distance made by Grant over the same course last June by nearly two minutes. C. L. Barthel, of Detroit, was with him all the time, having started out to break the 50-mile record. He was but a wheel's length behind Herrick at 25 miles, and all who saw him say he could have taken the record for the distance had he desired. When Barthel called for time at the 50-mile mark it was to be seen that he had made the last lap faster than the one he had ridden with Herrick. He finished his third mile at 1:07:32 and came around passing the end of thirty-five miles in 1:51:55. He finished his forty miles at 2:15:07. His forty-five miles at 2:35:07 5-5 and the half century mark was passed at 2:37:35 1-5. The fifty miles were covered in 2:42:35 1-5. The record was 2:57, made by Jake Line man of Buffalo.

BEAT THE RECORD.

Fantasy's Wonderful Performance on the Track at Saginaw.

SAGINAW, July 16.—Fantasy was driven against the 4-year-old record Saturday and beat it by a second. She made the quarter in 34¾, the backstretch quarter in 33¾, the upturn in 30¾. Swinging into the homestretch Geers sat like a statue, but did not urge. With true gameness her finish down the last quarter was in 31¾, and mile in 2:09, a second from her own mark made two weeks ago over the Hamilton (Ont.) track, and the record of Alix made over the Cumberland park track in 1892. She came the last half in 1:02½, a 2:05 gait, and many conservative judges believed she could have gone a mile thirty minutes later in 2:07. In the free-for-all trot Alix had only Nightingale to beat and did it in straight heats.

HIS LIFE AT STAKE.

Charles Macard on Trial for Murder at Grand Rapids.

Charged with Killing an Old Lady for Her Money—Henry Prame, an Accomplice, Makes a Confession on the Witness Stand.

HIS STORY.

GRAND RAPIDS, July 15.—Charles Macard has been on trial here for several days on charge of murdering Mrs. McKendrick in this city on June 17 last. The case is one of the most interesting in the criminal annals of the state. Mrs. McKendrick was an old woman living with her husband, a mechanic, in a small house in the southern part of the city, and was known to habitually carry a large sum of money on her person. On the morning of January 17, a grocer's boy, delivering goods, found her on the floor of her kitchen, gagged, bound hand and foot and dead. Her money was gone and the police had no clew.

Macard lived about a mile from the McKendrick house. He had killed an old man named O'Hara several years ago and was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to Jackson. The supreme court a year later granted him a new trial and this resulted in his acquittal. He was suspected of the murder of Mrs. McKendrick and fled from the city, being captured in San Francisco and brought back.

Soon after Macard's arrest Henry Prame was arrested at Freeport, Ill., as an accomplice. He weakened and confessed his part in the crime, claiming that Macard was the instigator of the plot. On Saturday Prame was placed on the witness stand. His story was a vivid recital of the crime and a searching cross-examination failed to break the force of his narrative in the slightest particular. Prame was employed on the Anchor line docks in Chicago last summer with Macard and they became intimate friends. Macard urged him to join an enterprise in Michigan for the robbery of a woman who had much money and he finally consented. They worked their way to this city, arriving in December, and for four weeks lived at Macard's house.

Early on the morning of January 17 they went to McKendrick's house, overpowered Mrs. McKendrick, who was alone, bound and gagged her and tied a tablecloth about her head. Prame held the woman down while Macard fastened the ropes, gag and cloth. After securing the money they went southward, threw the raincoats they wore into a swamp, divided the money and separated. Macard returned to this city while Prame walked to Ellendale, where he threw away his old shoes, and thence took the train for Lansing, and at noon started for Chicago. The rubber coats which they threw away were produced and identified, also the shoes which Prame discarded at Ellendale. The story of the crime was well told, and had a visible effect upon the jury. Macard sat beside his attorneys, apparently unmoved by the recital.

MOVING TO THE CITIES.

Michigan Rural Population Decreases and That of the Towns Increases.

LANSING, July 15.—Returns from the state census, the taking of which has just been completed, are being received at the office of the secretary of state. A remarkable fact in connection with the census is that the returns from the first eighteen counties reported show a decrease since 1890 in population outside of thirteen cities of about 10,000. The population of the thirteen cities increased 70,000 during the past four years.

The Iron Hall Muddle.

LANSING, July 13.—The supreme court has decided that Lewis Tomlinson and others who have matured claims against the Iron Hall can bring suits in garnishment against the funds of that order in their state. The case came up on a writ of mandamus to Receiver Stephen Inch to stop the suits, so that he might collect the funds of the order and distribute them pro rata among the members. The cases will now be tried in the Wayne circuit court.

Short Strike at Marshall.

MARSHALL, July 16.—The firemen, engineers, brakemen and a number of shopmen on the Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinaw road went out here Friday morning. No reason was given by the strikers, but it is supposed to be on account of the road handling coal for the Grand Trunk. The firemen and shopmen returned to work in the afternoon and new men are being hired in the traffic department to replace the striking conductors and brakemen.

Ann Arbor Transfer Line Opened.

MENOMINEE, July 14.—The business of carrying passengers and freight over the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan's new transfer line was formally opened Friday. Ann Arbor No. 2 arrived and cleared with several passengers and fifteen cars loaded with lumber for the east. The opening of this line will prove a great benefit to Menominee and vicinity. The landing place for the big boats in this city is the best on the lakes.

Geo. W. Freese, Len W. Kimball, John T. Clark, Chas. F. Clark, Henry Lancaster and F. D. Lancaster attended the Detroit races Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Clinton delegates to the Christian Endeavor convention returned home, some of them Monday and the rest on Tuesday. They were all delighted with their trip and also with the several sessions of the convention.

Another old settler has gone the way of all living. Wm. Ellis, who has been failing for a long time, died Friday at his home east of town and his funeral was held Sunday afternoon, Rev. Mr. Ramsdell officiating. He was 74 years of age.

One of Edison's phonograph concerts is given this evening at the M. E. church under the auspices of the Epworth League. Admission ten cents. A fine program will be rendered. The papers speak very highly of this entertainment.

The woolen mill is running full time now, with a full set of hands, and the prospects are good for an excellent season's business. Wool is cheap and the demand for the grade of cloths now made at the mill is constantly on the increase.

A. F. Kishpaugh has received official notification of his appointment as postmaster, and has forwarded his bonds duly executed. He expects to receive his commission in time to enable him to take possession of the office about the first of next August.

A subscription paper is in circulation to raise a fund for buying and drawing gravel to improve the Chicago turnpike, a mile west of the village. It is proposed to gravel the highway from the top of the hill at Post's dwelling house to the west side of the sand hill near Lloyd Conklin's, about 100 rods in all. A good sum has already been pledged and the fund is growing.

A plan has been suggested and is rapidly assuming form, to plant a row of maples on each side of the highway from Clinton to Ed. Smith's section farm at the four corners near the school house. This is a good move and ought to succeed. This road is being gravelled as the highway taxes are worked out each spring and will soon be a splendid highway. It would add greatly to its beauty to have a fine row of maple shade trees on each side.

Miss Lou McDermott who came home from Detroit several weeks ago, very much out of health, passed quietly away Monday morning. She has suffered intensely for some time and she longed to be at rest. She kept up bravely but in vain, as consumption had taken hold of her. The funeral was held at her father's residence Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock and was largely attended by her intimate friends. The floral tributes were beautiful and many, for she was a favorite both at home and in Detroit where she has held responsible positions with Merrill and with Newcomb, Endicott & Co. The beautiful service of the Episcopal church of which she was a member, was impressively rendered by the Rector, W. R. Blachford, and the choir.

The game of ball Saturday between the Palmyra's and the home team was a very pretty one. Wilson, their pitcher, though young, is every inch a ball player. His curves and drops are great and are puzzles difficult to solve by batters. The game about led in fine style and the score was very close. It would have been hard to tell just how it would have terminated had the nine innings been played. The game closed in the last half of the eighth inning with our boys at the bat and but two men out, two of the visiting team leaving the game to take the train home and the club would not substitute other players. Our boys could do nothing with Wilson's curves until the seventh inning, having made but two hits, but in the seventh inning they made three runs and when the game closed in the eighth they had made three more. Kennedy who pitched a hard game at Jackson the day before was not in the best of form and in the third inning Palmyra made three hits. In the fifth inning Harris went into the box and proved a mystery, as not a hit was made in the four innings. Clinton executed a pretty double play in the first and Palmyra one in the eighth.

THE FLOWER MISSION.

Report of the Ridgeway Delegate, Mrs. Henry Pocklington.

On arriving in Adrian at about 9:00 a. m. we had our horse put out, and then proceeded to hunt up the W. C. T. U. headquarters. We inquired our way but were directed wrong. On looking around us we found others engaged in the same search, and by following some ladies who were laden with baskets of flowers, we soon arrived at the rooms which are on Maumee street a short distance west of Main street. We were welcomed by Miss Hattie Johnson, who took our names. She said she received the 50 cents which our Union sent, but had been so busy that she had neglected to acknowledge the receipt of it, and so took that opportunity to do so and to thank us for it. She then asked us to help with the bouquets, which we did; and I then learned a new way of wrapping the bouquets so they would stay fresh longer. They had small pieces of cotton batting thoroughly saturated with water, which we wrapped around the stems; over that a wrapping of paper, then a little rubber band was slipped over that to keep them in place. I note this, thinking it might be of service to us at some time.

About 10:30 a. m. a committee, headed by Mrs. Channing Ackley, who is superintendent of that part of the work, followed by as many of "we delegates" as wished to go, went to the jail. We found Aunt Laura Haviland, who is 85 years old, waiting for us. She is rather small, was dressed plainly in black, with the Quaker arrangement of white around the neck, and the thinnest and daintiest of muslin caps, which covered but did not hide her snow white hair. She had a sweet face and the kiss and greeting she gave all around seemed like a benediction. I presume you all have heard of her and her life's work, and so will I trust, excuse me for wandering from my notes to give personal descriptions. There were nine men and two women in the jail. Seven of the men came out and seated themselves on long benches before us. We were in a long, narrow corridor, and they were separated from us by iron bars. Miss Mattie McFetridge sang "Can a Boy Forget His Mother?" Then scripture reading from the 16th chapter of Acts, and prayer by Miss Carter, of Macon. The next was a song by Miss McFetridge, entitled "Beckoning Hands." Aunt Laura Haviland, after being presented by Miss Ackley, as a friend to everyone, and especially to those in trouble, spoke very kindly and feelingly to the inmates. She told them of the prodigal son, and how willingly the father went out to meet him when he was yet afar off, and pointed them to Jesus. She urged them to seek him at once, just as they were, and waiting not; to rid their soul of one dark blot; told them of the love and power of God, and how willing he was to receive them into the fold if they would only earnestly repent of their sins and ask his forgiveness. She then pointed to the white ribbon and told them what it signified and that she warned them in the name of the Union against the saloon, the evils of intemperance, and the serpent lurking even in the social glass. I can't remember near all she said, but it was all very good. This was followed by remarks by Phoebe Lamb Mitchell, which were good and to the point. Mrs. Ackley also spoke a few words to the men, telling them of Jennie Cassidy, whose birthday we were celebrating, by doing the things which she used to love to do. Then, while we all joined in singing "Depths of Mercy," Aunt Laura Haviland presented the bouquets. She said to each young man, "I present you these flowers in the name of the W. C. T. U., and as a representative of your mother." They all thanked her and were quite respectful throughout the exercises. We next went up stairs where the two women were. Miss McFetridge sang "Beckoning Hands." Aunt Laura Haviland read and prayed fervently for these poor souls, and after Miss McFetridge sang "Mother's Prayers" she talked to them about Jesus and their need of Him, and gave them their flowers. We then went back to headquarters and ate our lunch, which we bought down town. The ladies in charge said they sent cards to all unions that the delegates were to bring their lunch with them and they would be furnished tea and coffee at the rooms. As we did not hear of it we were not prepared, but that was easily remedied.

In the afternoon conveyances were furnished to take all who wished to go, over to visit the inmates of the County House. Our party of ten ladies, ourselves included, rode over in the lake wagon. We were most all acquainted, and being a jolly lot, we had bushels of fun going and coming. It seemed so good to get out into God's free air and sunlight after the gloom of the prison. The inmates that were able to be out doors were out under the trees. The exercises begun by all joining in singing "Rock of Ages." Mrs. Dale then read the first 12 verses of the 5th chapter of Matthew and offered prayer. Next came a quartette by young ladies entitled "One Sweetly Solemn Thought;" then a recitation by Miss Payne, who won the gold medal at the contest held at Ridgeway. This was followed by a few remarks by Mrs. Casey about the life of the late Jennie Cassidy, of Louisville, Ky. Miss Payne then gave a recitation entitled "Orphan Annie." After prayer by Mrs. Clark, bouquets, bananas, peanuts, cakes and candies were distributed. There was also lots of books and papers and a 50 pound and a 25 pound sack of pieces for patchwork sent in. There are nearly forty inmates.

On getting back to the city we got our own rig and drove out to the Industrial Home. The girls were all out on the lawn near the entrance gate. They were all dressed in light calico and each had a bow of bright ribbon at their throat. Miss Dibble told us that their ribbons were given them at Christmas, worn then and at Easter, then on flower mission day, and after that they could wear them every Sunday, but were not allowed any more until Christmas. The girls sang a greeting song, then marched two by two to the chapel, each class of girls accompanied by their matron. The exercises began with instrumental music. After the girls were all seated, the organist (who was one of the girls) played a voluntary, then all sang "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name." Mrs. Street then read the 21st chapter of St. John and prayed, then the girls chanted the Lord's Prayer. Next the choir sang a quartette, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought;" a recitation by one of the girls; instrumental music, followed by a song by the girls; a recitation by Miss Payne; quartette by choir; an address by Mrs. Susan Carpenter, of Blissfield, and to me this was the best of the whole day's program. Mrs. Sarah Pocklington and myself were called upon to help distribute the cards. There are 240 girls in the Home. Tables were spread out under the trees in front of all the cottages, so we judged supper was to be served to the girls out there. We then came home very tired but with a feeling of thankfulness to God for all His mercies, and with the consciousness of a day well spent in his service.

THE MICHIGAN FARMER

Some Reasons Why It Should Be in the Family of Every Farmer in Michigan.

It is the recognized State agricultural organ. It contains matter written by educated successful agriculturists, who are practical farmers, live stock breeders, horticulturists and dairymen of this State. It gives all the agricultural live stock, dairy and horticultural news of this State. It publishes full and reliable markets from all important points where Michigan farmers sell products. It reaches every post-office in the State within twelve hours after it is printed. Its editors and correspondents are Michigan men, thoroughly in earnest in their desire to advance, protect and improve the agricultural interests of this State. It is filled with original paid for matter written expressly for it. It is first-class in every particular, its publishers sparing no expense to make it the equal of any agricultural paper of America. It admits no immoral, snide or swindling advertisements. It is a weekly of 52 issues a year—64 columns in each issue—and is furnished at the lowest possible price that such a paper can be published at; and last and greatest—Because it is many times more valuable and instructive to the agriculturists of Michigan than any agricultural paper published outside of the State.

We clip the following from the Detroit Evening News: Dr. D. Berdan, of Cheboygan, Mich., one of the best known physicians in northern Michigan, and surgeon of the Mackinaw division of the Michigan Cental, died Sunday of pneumonia. He leaves a widow and young son. Mr. Berdan was a son of Mrs. Wilson Berdan, of Saline, and a nephew of Mrs. John C. Mills. He had a large practice with very bright prospects. His mother was prevented from reaching him before his death, on account of the strike. Mr. Berdan was intered at Cheboygan.

Nine Tenths of Human Ails Hinge on Poor Digestion.

The stomach distributes either health giving properties to the various nerves and blood vessels or it scatters poisonous acids. It all depends upon its condition. If the digestion is poor the life-giving food force is lost and the blood becomes vitiated, often setting up gout, rheumatism, bronchitis, consumption and various other diseases.

When the stomach refuses to perform its natural work nature needs help and needs it quick. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digest the food in the stomach thereby giving the organs of the stomach a chance to rest. This remedy helps assimilation and aids in distributing nutrition to the various parts of the entire system. It is not an experiment, but a scientific remedy, positive and speedy. Most all druggists keep it because their customers have learned of its merits by experience.

REV. CHAS. A. FULTON.

The following notice, clipped from a late number of the Chenango Telegraph published at Norwich, N. Y. contains pleasing news to many of our citizens, who used to know the "Fulton Boys" when they lived in Tecumseh:

"It always is a pleasure to record the success of a Norwich boy; it therefore gratifies us to reproduce from The Baptist, published at Baltimore and the southern organ of that denomination, the following sketch of Rev. Charles A. Fulton, who is known to most of our readers. The sketch is accompanied in The Baptist by a half-tone portrait, which looks enough like him to speak.

Rev. Charles A. Fulton, the genial and benevolent pastor of the Immanuel church of this city, whose portrait adorns this page, was born in Tecumseh, Michigan, where as a child he attended the church where his maternal grandfather was a deacon and his paternal grandfather had been pastor. He removed to Binghamton, N. Y., and when a child at the age of 12 joined the Baptist church at that place; he took his college and theological course at the Colgate University and at Hamilton Theological Seminary. He was ordained in Norwich, N. Y., in July '86, in August of the same year he was called to the pastorate of the Baptist church in Camden, S. C. In the spring of 1888 he was called and became pastor of the First Baptist church in Norristown, Pa. During his pastorate over 400 were added to the church by baptism; the main audience room and Sunday School room were thoroughly renovated and refrescoed, the church was carpeted, and a new pipe organ was put in at an expense of $5,000. At the close of his pastorate the church was out of debt and benevolent contributions had more than doubled. When the popular A. C. Dixon resigned from Immanuel, a committee of 30 were appointed to name his successor and they unanimously decided in favor of brother Fulton. He became the pastor in February, 1890; during his pastorate the debt of the church has been reduced $2,000, a pipe organ has been purchased, and over 100 members have been added by baptism, while a considerable number have been dismissed to constitute the Curtis Bay church. Brother Fulton is one of the most genial of men, a fine preacher, and the very best of pastors.—The Baptist, Baltimore, Md.

APPOINTED TO WEST POINT.

Out of two appointments to West Point in the gift of the President of the United States at this time, one has gone to Mr. Charles Annesley Romeyn, son of Capt. Henry Romeyn, of the Fifth United States Infantry, now stationed at Jackson Barracks, in this city.

Young Romeyn will doubtless acquit himself with honor, as he unites in himself, in addition to the army blood that flows in his veins, every attribute that is essential to a successful military career. He has always been an ardent student and an enthusiastic and successful athlete. He was at one time captain of the Tulane football team, and is as much at home on horseback or at the tiller of a yacht as he is in the water or at home among his books.

In 1892-3 Military Academy Candidate Romeyn was a student in the preparatory department of DePauw University, Greencastle, Ind., where he played upon one of the football teams and was a non-commissioned officer in the cadet battalion. He won his chevrons by severe competitive examinations and could have held higher grades if they had been open to men of his class. He is now nearly twenty years of age, five feet eleven and one-half inches in height and weighs in training about 170 pounds. Together with his father, Capt. Romeyn, he has followed the flag into pretty nearly every nook and corner of the nation. His birthplace was Port Gibson, Cherokee Nation, where his father was at the time stationed.

The above is taken from the New Orleans Times Democrat of July 10th. Capt. Romeyn and also his son will receive the congratulations of their old Tecumseh friends over Charley's good fortune. Although Charley's birthplace was among the "injuns," we claim him as a Tecumseh boy.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 26, 1894.

The real fight over the tariff bill is now on. Time will show whether the tail can wag the dog in the U. S. Senate.

Grover Cleveland will gain new friends among the people by his manly stand in favor of Democratic principles and honest tariff reform.

Geo. M. Pullman has had his say. One would suppose, to read his published letter, that the Pullman company was a very philanthropic institution.

As a letter writer Grover Cleveland has lost none of his versatility. He has fired off several letters, everyone of which hit the target square in the center.

Shall a cabal of soft shell Senators, who are trying to sell out the cause of tariff reform, rule the whole party. That is the issue now presented in the U. S. Senate.

Grover Cleveland is himself again. His letter to Congressman Wilson has the clear ring. If the bastard Senate bill is to become a law the President will put the responsibility therefor where it belongs.

Congressman Crain, of Texas, has introduced a bill to place on the free list all products controlled by trusts, among which is Paris green. The law as it stands, protects the trust and the bugs, rather than the farmers.

Arizona and New Mexico are not to be left out. The Senate committee on territories has directed that bills for their admission, similar to that passed for the admission of Utah, be prepared and submitted at its next meeting.

Senator John Sherman is a strong opponent of the income tax and yet in 1870 he used this language in a public speech delivered in the Senate: "The income tax is the only one that tends to equalize the burdens between the rich and the poor."

It is gratifying to know that Vice President Stevenson is never sick nor ailing. Born in Kentucky and bred in Missouri, he is said to possess a commissary attachment that will dispose of everything, from buttermilk and cucumbers to sole-leather and carpet tacks.

The enabling act for the admission of Utah as a state has been passed, and before many months have gone, that flourishing western territory will be a member of the Union, with polygamy left out. The provisions of the act prohibiting the "twin relic" are very stringent.

We are still told by our high tariff friends that the foreigner pays the duty. How do they reconcile this statement with what Senator Aldrich said the other day in the Senate: "It will cost the people of the United States from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 a year for sugar duties while it will cost them from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 to maintain the bounty."

The Courier-Journal puts it this way: "Every man has a right to work, or to quit work, just as he pleases. But no man has the right, natural or acquired, to prevent another man from working if the other man wants to work. It is the business and duty of the government to protect every man in his rights and he who opposes the government in this will do so at his peril. The laws must be enforced, and all men must be made to obey them."

The Evangelist, in discussing the heresy question, makes this good point: "What a lucky escape it was for John Calvin, as well as for Martin Luther, that he got out of the world when he did and that he is now safely dead and buried; for if Luther rejected the Epistle of James as part of the Bible, Calvin did the same with the second Epistle of Peter, so that neither of them would have come up to the modern requirements of preachers of the gospel."

Somebody will make a neat sum on sugar when the new tariff goes into effect. The importations of free sugar, exclusive of beet sugar, are larger than were ever known before. In the four months ending March 31st, the amount imported was 277,000,000 in excess of the importations for the corresponding period last year, and they are still heavy. All this comes in free, and most of it has been imported by the sugar trust, the largest dealer in sugar in this country. The profits, when the tax goes on, will be something big.

The school marm is now taking her vacation, and may she enjoy it. No one earns a rest more faithfully, needs it more or appreciates it better. May she have a good time.

If the soft shell senators wish to force the fight on the compromise tariff bill, let them sail in. President Cleveland and the House have the people behind them in this controversy.

Pullman is right on one point. The American people do not want Debs for a dictator. But neither do they want Pullman or anybody else in that capacity. The business of governing this country is a job which the people do not intend to surrender to any man.

In commenting upon the political situation that now confronts the Democracy the Baltimore Sun aptly says: "If the House of Representatives will only stand firm and compel the passage of the House tariff bill with its original list of free raw materials substantially unchanged, we are satisfied that the Democratic party can go forward to the fall elections with confidence. If the party obeys the people, the people will sustain the party, but if the party disappoints the people, the people will punish the party. In the face of much tall talk on the Republican side about the foregone conclusion of the coming Congressional campaign, we believe the Democratic party still has the control of the next Congress at its own disposal on condition that it does its duty in the present one."

The tariff bill is either dangerously near death, or some very heavy trading is being indulged in. The disagreement which the conference committee has reported leaves one in doubt as to which is the real situation. While the disagreement is on record it is known that if an agreement could have been reached on sugar, coal and iron there would have been little difficulty in fixing up the amendments. If the House insists upon the stand taken by its conferees as to sugar, coal and iron ore there will be no tariff bill passed, as in addition to the six or eight Democratic Senators who forced the acceptance of amendments placing duty upon these articles the solid Republican vote can be depended upon to support them in their demand that those amendments remain in the bill.

Some of the strongest advocates of an income tax are found in the eastern states. The Ithaca Democrat says: "The income tax will become a law, and it will remain a law, because it is founded upon just principles. It is the fairest way that burdens can be equalized between the rich and poor taxpayer. There may be crudities in the present law, although the Senate has worn the measure of the worst of them. But they will be corrected hereafter. The law will not be repealed. Since the discussion commenced in the Senate the Republicans in a number of states, both in the east and west have held their conventions, but in not a single instance have they denounced the measure. The income tax will not hurt the Democratic party. By the enactment of that measure they have simply made an effort to effect justice. They have sought to equalize the burden of taxation between the rich and the poor.

Paul Cooley's letter to President Cleveland commending his course during the late strike at Chicago, will be heartily endorsed by all law abiding citizens. The letter itself will bear repetition:

ANN ARBOR, MICH., July 10, 1894.

President Grover Cleveland:

HONORED SIR—Now that the great strike in which your official intervention became so necessary, has been clearly shown to be a failure, I beg to be allowed to express my unqualified satisfaction with every step you have taken in vindication of the national authority and with the restoration of law and order which has followed or is now in progress. The caution and deliberation with which you have proceeded are, I think, worthy, like the accompanying firmness, of highest praise, and I am specially gratified that a great and valuable lesson in constitutional construction has been settled for all time with remarkably little bloodshed. You, and the attorney-general also, have won the gratitude of the country, not for this generation only, but for all time, and that God may bless you for it is the sincere prayer of

Your Obedient Servant,

THOS. M. COOLEY.

Here is a little income tax lesson taken from the New York World, and it is a pretty good simple tax lesson too: "William Waldorf Astor owns a thousand or more houses in this city. The navy of the United States is maintained to protect this city and Mr. Astor's thousand houses from bombardment. There are at least one thousand reasons why Mr. Astor should contribute more to the support of the general government than the ordinarily prosperous man with one house. But Mr. Astor lives in England and spends his three or four millions there. He does not even contribute to the income of this government by staying here, importing his coats from London or smoking American cigars. He contributes less to keep up the navy that protects his thousand houses, to uphold the laws which enable him to own a thousand houses, than the poorest of the thousand families that pay his rents. Is it 'socialism' to ask that Mr. Astor contribute something to the support of the government of the United States?

The Tariff Fight.

Mr. Cleveland's letter is a direct challenge to those so-called Democratic Senators who have been steadfastly opposing the policy of their party and are trying to wreck tariff reform without the manliness to do so openly. It will make some of them angry, but it will force them into the open and make them take the responsibility of their obstructive attitude.

There is no doubt that Mr. Cleveland represents the sentiment of his party and the general sentiment of the country in his desire that the instructions upon which this Congress was elected shall be faithfully carried out. He is also clearly right in his intimation—which might have been made stronger—that the opposition to the sugar tax, an entirely sound measure of revenue, has been made a shield for the defense of the combined monopolies that are dependent on the existing tariff.

What effect this letter will have upon the conflict between the two houses is not clear. Mr. Wilson stated very plainly in the House, what is evidently the truth, that if the Senate conferees had felt as free as those of the House, an agreement could have been reached. But the Senate conferees are afraid of the kickers, the small minority who have succeeded in controlling the Senate's action, and the fate of tariff reform appears to depend upon whether they or the majority shall now prevail.

In any event, the President has made it clearly understood that, whoever else may waver, he stands true to the cause he represents.—Philadelphia Times.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmer does their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Farmers' Home Reading Club.

Two letters were received last week by the Farm and Dairy editor, asking for particulars regarding the F. H. R. C. This is a home course of reading in agriculture, horticulture, dairying, etc., on the Chautauqua plan. It is a great thing for our farmers, their wives, sons, daughters and the the "hired man." Write Prof. F. B. Mumford, Sec'y., Agricultural College, Mich. We are reading this course and could not be hired to drop it. We expect to keep at it (in spite of the tariff, or the exit of silver) until we "graduate." Too much cannot be said in favor of this course for our young farmers who have had no opportunity to pursue a course of study at the Agricultural College. In these days it is almost criminal to live in ignorance. The well-informed, educated, practical, hard working business farmer is the one who ought to make the most money, and—he generally does. "Gentlemen—My mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Wolfe, at the age of 72 years, was attacked with a violent form of salt rheum; it spread all over her body, and her hands and limbs were dreadful to look at. At the same time, my little daughter Clara, who was just one year old, was attacked by a similar disease, like scrofula. It appeared in the form of large sores under each side of her neck; had the attendance of the family physician and other doctors for a long time, but seemed to grow worse. A little book fell into my hands, in which were numerous testimonials from people who had been A WOOD SONG.

A sylvan path, a forest aisle,
Romantic, dim retreat,
Where love may stroll a quiet mile
And hear no passing feet.

A day in May, when sunbeams fall
Asleep upon the ground,
When soothing minstrels faintly call
To dreams of bliss they've found.

A weary heart bowed down with care,
Indifferent to woe,
Seeking a breath of solace where
The sweet crabapples grow.

But not the breeze, the bloom, the birds,
Conjured his soul that day,
A gentle maid of simple words
His sorrow charmed away.

—George E. Bowen in Chicago Inter Ocean.

THE WRECK.

As the violent storm of the other night has thrown us on the Corsican coast, let me tell you a terrible story of the sea, of which the fishermen of the place often speak at eventide, and about which chance has enabled me to learn strange particulars.

It was three years ago. I was sailing the Sardinian seas with seven or eight sailors of the coast survey. It was a rough voyage for a novice; we did not have one good day through March. The wind was furious, and the waves never calmed. One evening as we were flying before the tempest our vessel came for refuge to the mouth of the strait of Bonifacio, among some little islands.

Their aspect was not alluring. They were great bald rocks, covered with birds, some bushes of lentisk, a few tufts of aloe here and there in the slime decaying pieces of wood. But, my soul! it was better to pass the night among these sinister rocks than to be on a frail old bark, half decked, where the blast came in as though it were quite at home. So we contented ourselves.

No sooner had we disembarked than the sailors lighted a fire for the fish soup, and the captain called me, pointing to a little inclosure surrounded by a white wall almost lost in the mist at the end of the island. "Will you come to the cemetery?" said he.

"A cemetery, captain! Where are we?"

"On the Lavezzi islands, monsieur. The 600 men of the frigate Semillante are buried here at the spot where she was lost 10 years ago. Poor fellows! As they don't receive many visits, the least we can do is to go and say 'bonjour' to them, so long as we are here."

"With all my heart, captain."

How sad it was, the cemetery of the Semillante! I see it still, with its little, low wall; its iron door, rusty and hard to open; its silent chapel, the hundreds of black crosses hidden by the weeds. Not one wreath of immortelles, not one souvenir—nothing! Ah, the poor, abandoned dead! How cold they must be in their chance tombs!

We staid a moment kneeling. The captain prayed aloud. Enormous gulls, the only guardians of the cemetery, circled over our heads, mingling their hoarse cries with the wailing of the sea. The prayer finished, we came sadly back to the corner of the island where the bark was anchored. No time had been lost during our absence. We found a great fire flaming in the shelter of a rock and the soup smoking. Sitting down in a circle, with our feet to the flames, soon each had on his knees a bowl of red pottery, in which were two slices of black bread covered plentifully with the broth. The repast was a silent one. We were wet, we were hungry, and then the nearness of the graveyard!

However, when the bowls were emptied, we lighted our pipes and talked a little—naturally of the Semillante.

"Tell me, how did it happen?" I asked the captain, who, with his head on his hands, stared at the flames with a thoughtful air.

"How did it happen?" said the good Lionetti, with a heavy sigh. "Alas, no human being can tell! All we know is that the Semillante, laden with troops, left Toulon the evening before in bad weather. During the night it grew worse—wind, rain and a terrible sea, the like of which was never seen before. In the morning the wind fell a little, but the sea was worse, if possible, and with it the devil's own fog, so that one could not have distinguished a beacon light four feet away. Those fogs, monsieur! You have no idea how deceitful they are. But I also have an idea that the Semillante must have lost her helm in the morning, for the captain even in a heavy fog could hardly have made such a mistake. He was a well tried mariner. We all knew him. He had commanded the Corsican station for three years and knew the coast as well as I, who know nothing else."

"At what time do they think the Semillante perished?"

"It must have been at noon—yes, monsieur, noon—but, forsooth, with that fog that noon was worth no more than a night as black as the jaws of a wolf. A life saver of the coast told me that the same day toward half past 11, having gone out of his cabin to fasten his shutters, the wind whirled away his cap, and at the risk of being carried off himself by the blast he commenced to crawl along the beach on all fours after it. You see the douaniers aren't rich, and a cap costs. Well, it seems that our man, lifting his head, saw right near him through the fog a great ship scudding along under bare poles toward the Lavezzi islands. This ship went very fast, so fast that he had hardly time for a good look. Everything leads to the belief that it was the Semillante, because a half hour later the shepherd of the island heard— Why, here comes the shepherd himself. He will tell you. Bonjour, Palombo. Come, warm thyself. Have no fear."

A muffled man, whom I had seen for some minutes prowling around our fire, and whom I had taken for one of the crew, because I did not know that there was a shepherd on the island, approached us timidly. He was an old leper, three-quarters an idiot and a prey to I know not what other scorbutic evil, which made his lips horrible to behold, so swollen were they. They explained to him at length what we were talking about. Then, lifting his dreadful lips with his finger, the old man said that on the day in question, about noon, he heard from his hut a frightful crash on the rocks, but as the island was covered with water he could not get out to see. It was not until the next morning that on opening his door he had seen the beach covered with driftwood and corpses, left there by the waves. Insane with fear, he had fled to his boat to go to Bonifacio for help.

Tired with having said so much, the shepherd sat down, and the captain went on with his story.

"Yes, monsieur, it was this poor old fellow who came to warn us. He was crazy with fright, and ever since his brain has been off the track. To tell the truth, there was cause enough for it. Imagine 600 hundred corpses in heaps on the sand, mixed with great timbers and strips of sail. Poor Semillante! The sea had crushed her into crumbs with one blow. Palombo with difficulty got enough wood to build a fence around his hut. As for the men, nearly all were horribly disfigured and mutilated. It was pitiful to see them clinging together in bunches. We found the captain in a gala uniform, the chaplain with his stole. In a corner between two rocks there was a little cabin boy with his eyes open. One might have thought him alive; but, no, it had been decreed that not one should escape." Here he stopped.

"Careful, Nardi," said he; "the fire is going out."

Nardi threw two or three charred logs on the embers, which quickly blazed again.

Lionetti continued: "The saddest part of the story is yet to come. Three weeks before the disaster a little cutter, which was going to the Crimea, like the Semillante, was wrecked in the same way in nearly the same place, only this time we managed to save the crew and 20 soldiers who were on board. We took them to Bonifacio and kept them there at the station with us for two days.

"Once thoroughly dry and on foot again, it was goodby, good luck. They returned to Toulon, from which port they embarked again several days later for the Crimea. And imagine on what ship! On the Semillante. We found them all—all 20—lying among the dead just where we are now. I picked up myself a handsome brigadier, with a long blond mustache, a stripling from Paris, whom I had taken to my own house, and who made us laugh all the time with his stories. To see him there crushed me. O holy mother!"

Thereupon the good Lionetti, much moved, shook the cinders from his pipe, and rolling himself in his cape wished me good night.

For some time longer the sailors whispered among themselves. Then, one after the other, the pipes went out. No one spoke. The old shepherd hobbled away, and I was left alone to dream away the hours in the middle of the sleeping crew.

Still under the influence of the lugubrious tale which I had heard, I tried to rebuild in my fancy the poor departed ship and the story of this agony of which the sea gulls were the only witnesses. Several details which had struck me—the captain in gala dress, the chaplain's stole, the 20 soldiers—helped me to imagine all the scenes of the drama. I saw the frigate leaving Toulon in the night. She lose sight of the port. The sea is bad, the wind high. The captain is a valiant officer, and every one on board is undisturbed. In the morning a mist rises from the sea. They commence to be uneasy. All the crew are on deck. The captain does not leave the bridge. Between decks, where the soldiers are shut up, it is dark; the air is close. Some are ill, lying on their knapsacks. The ship pitches horribly. It is impossible to stand up. Sitting on the floor, talking in groups, they cling to the benches. It is necessary to shout to be heard. Some begin to be frightened. Listen, then. Wrecks are frequent in the waters. The sailors are there to say so, and what they say is not reassuring. Their brigadier, too, a Parisian who always talks wildly, makes their flesh creep with his jokes. "A wreck! Oh, a wreck is amusing, very. We will be well out of it after our iced bath. Then they will take us to Bonifacio to eat blackbirds with old Lionetti."

Suddenly a crash. What is it? What can it be?

"The helm is gone;" cries a dripping sailor who goes running between decks. "Bon voyage!" shouts that madman, the brigadier. But no one laughs now. A great tumult on the bridge. The fog prevents their seeing one another. The sailors go and come, groping along frightened. The helm is gone. It is impossible to guide the ship. The Semillante, adrift, flies before the wind. It is at this moment that the douanier sees her pass. It is half after 11. Just ahead they hear, like the roar of cannon, the breakers! The breakers! It is finished. There is no hope. They are going straight on the rocks. The captain goes down to his cabin. He comes up in a moment to take his place on the bridge in his full uniform. He wishes to meet death in brave attire.

Between decks the soldiers, in mortal terror, gaze at one another without a word. The sick try to sit up; the little brigadier laughs no longer. Then the door opens, and the chaplain with his stole appears on the threshold.

"To your knees, my children!" All obey. In a ringing voice the priest begins the prayer for the dying.

Suddenly a fearful shock, a great cry, outstretched arms, clinging hands, wild eyes, before which the vision of death has flashed. Miserere!

It was thus that I passed the night dreaming, bringing back through 10 years the souls who had perished in the poor ship whose debris surrounded me. Far away in the strait the tempest raged. The flame of the fire bent under the blast, and I heard our bark thrashing and straining at her moorings at the foot of the rocks.—Romance.

Another Interesting Letter From Our U. of M. Bicycle Corrrespondent.

OMAHA, NEB., July 15, 1894.

MR. EDITOR:—

In my last letter from Marengo, Ia., I promised a letter from Omaha, Neb., if the weather and my bicycle permitted me to arrive by Saturday night. They both permitted, and I am spending my Sunday at Nebraska's famed city. The Omaha Wheel Club have entertained me very kindly and are a very gentlemanly lot of fellows. After leaving Marengo I continued wending my way over hills which rise and fall with the regularity of the ocean billows. Brooklyn and Grinnell, prosperous country towns, lay upon my route and at last I was approaching Newton whose fame has gone abroad as the home of pretty girls. Some miles out of Newton I stopped at a farm house for a drink of water. The charming damsels are not all in the city of Newton. The climatic or other magic influence which favors the production of pretty girls, has extended to the farms in the vicinity. I became thirsty frequently the remainder of my way into Newton, and continued to see visions of beauty until I arrived there. Noon was only an hour distant so I hunted up a private boarding house where I might dine. Fortune smiled. There were three feminine descendants of the landlady and they had all attained attractive ages. Well, this is enough about girls. I had a modest wish to see Newton's fame verified and I did, but after dinner I passed on to the next city fancy free. Colfax, the Iowa summer resort, was the next town of interest. Mineral waters abound and the hotels are filled with college students who are there for their health. Colfax is ten miles from Newton, but of course the attraction for students is the mineral water. I rode into Des Moines by moonlight. At least it would have been moonlight if clouds had not obscured that orb just when it became dark. As it was, I rode trusting to fate until nearly ten o'clock when I reached a good hotel on the east side of the Des Moines river and rested after a 70 mile ride.

As I saw Des Moines the next morning it is a very attractive city. The capitol building is a very imposing and artistic structure. Most of the business blocks are new and pleasing in appearance. I gladly escaped from the city at an early hour. Large cities are a source of discomfort to me as a tourist. I miss the good natured hospitality of the country. The hills now doubled in height and steepness for about twenty miles while I passed through three mining towns, Boonville, Van Metre, and De Soto. All through Iowa there is a terrible drought, and through this region I was actually refused a drink of water at three farm houses and at several more they preferred to give me a glass of milk, saying that they carried the water for three miles, and regarded it as a very precious article. At one of these little towns I left my wheel standing in a tree and several children were attracted by the black leather pouch-shaped bag which is suspended on the hollow frame of the bicycle. I heard one say after feeling of it "Oh, that don't make no music." The tone was a disappointed one, and I imagined some one had really been through the town with a music box attached to his wheel.

The advice which I receive from solicitous people on the way is very amusing. One old lady told me very solemnly of a relative of hers who put cold water on his head when hot, and she said: "It stopped his brain circulating in his head and he died." Then her eyes rolled ominously. Another spinster told me comforting stories of recent highway robberies in Iowa, and one young bicycle rider who was about my age and looked like me, too, was stopped on the road and his watch and money taken away.

Atlantic was the first city of any size which I passed through after leaving Des Moines. There the wheelmen were enthusiastic over my trip and offered to get up a crowd of fifteen or twenty and ride over to Council Bluffs (60 miles) if I would stay over that day and start on in the morning. I thanked them and refused to wait for I was anxious to get there to-day and rest all day.

My general appearance of a tourist gets me much attention in small towns and villages. If I stop, inquiries are soon rife and when they find out whence I am and whither bound, there seems to be a kind of thought communication among the idlers and store keepers and I am at once surrounded. My Victor and I nearly spoiled an auction at Adair. The crowd deserted the auctioneer and collected about me. Yesterday a cow charged upon me but I nimbly avoided, and as I was near a hill I was soon coasting away at a speed which must have astounded Mrs. Bovine. The dogs don't bother me any more. There is not enough meat on my frame to furnish any inducement to the officious canine. I did feel a little nervous recently when I was followed some distance by a flock of crows. Now that the Missouri river is behind me I feel as if Denver was not very far away. 900 miles (which is the distance by wagon road over which I have traveled) has been passed over and Denver is 500 miles away. The Missouri river was a disappointment. It is a disagreeable stream in every way. Not wide enough to be imposing in volume and the muddy waters not even the poetic yellow of the Tiber. The shores to the north of the bridge are low and swampy and to the south two insignificant bluffs are anything but picturesque. Omaha has something of the daring western spirit about it, but in general is very much like Michigan or Indiana cities. I shall write about Thursday from some place in Nebraska. To-morrow morning I leave Omaha.

C. H. VAN TYNE.

DEATH OF REV. H. G. BLINN.

From a late issue of a Cambridge, N. Y. paper and a letter to Mr. Lucius Lilley we gather a few particulars in regard to the death of Rev. Henry Goodwin Blinn.

The community was startled on Saturday morning by the telegraphic announcement of the death of Rev. H. G. Blinn.

Mr. Blinn had resided in this village for twenty-four years; first as pastor of the Presbyterian church—during which time the present edifice was built—and for the last eleven years as pastor of the Congregational church, which was organized by those who withdrew from the Presbyterian church for this purpose. Recently a very severe illness had laid hold of him, and it was thought for many days that it must issue fatally. This was met by a robust constitution, and Mr. Blinn recovered so as to be upon the streets again. Though not able to occupy the pulpit, he did officiate at a funeral. So buoyant in spirit was he, that forgetting his own age, on Wednesday at one o'clock, he left Cambridge, without company, for an all night ride, his destination being Jamestown, N. Y., where his daughter, Mrs. Henry L. Yates, resides. The train was delayed by an accident, and he did not reach Jamestown until a late hour Thursday, and was much exhausted by the trip. On Friday evening, when he excused himself early, he was asked if he did not feel well, and replied: "As well as I have for thirty years."

Saturday morning he did not appear and his room was entered by some of the family. He lay with his hand under his head looking toward the light of the window, and with a happy smile upon his face, the evidence of his triumphant entrance into life, for he had quietly escaped to mansions not made with hands, while the household were wrapped in sleep. On Monday his remains reached Cambridge, Mrs. Yates and her son, Blinn Yates, of New York, accompanying them. Henry Yates, of West Point, and Mrs. Dr. Blinn, of New York, also came to the home here. The funeral occured on Tuesday.

He was very tenderly loved by his church. He was like a father to us and we shall miss him sadly. He had grown more and more Christlike, and his face was like that of an angel, his beautiful gray hair a crown of glory. He had a great horror of growing old and breaking down, of being useless, and often prayed that he might die "in the harness," and his prayer was answered.

At the funeral the church was draped in black and white, but mostly white. His own hair dressed all in mourning, sang the anthem he loved so well: "Jerusalem, my glorious home," a hymn which had specially tender associations, while their trembling voices showed that their hearts were breaking. We laid him away in a grave lined with flowers where the little children, choking with sobs, threw flowers upon the lowering coffin. A dear precious friend and pastor has left us and we are indeed smitten, some of us having been under his pastorate for twenty-four years.

The deceased was at one time pastor of the Presbyterian church at Tecumseh. He came here from Jamestown, N. Y. in September 1853, upon an invitation to preach for one year. In August 1854 a formal call was extended to him and he was installed as pastor at the expiration of his first years' service. His resignation was accepted Jan. 7, 1861 and the Presbytery dissolved the relation on the following 9th. of April. He was in the prime of life and mental activity during his residence here and filled his charge most acceptably. His pastorate of seven years and seven months was a period of marked prosperity, having received 67 members by letter and 100 on profession, and he formed many personal friendships which have remained steadfast through the intervening years. Many of his old parishioners will learn of his demise with keen regret and will extend to the widow and bereaved family their heartfelt sympathy.

IN MEMORIAM.

Entered into life on June 25, 1894, Mrs. Emma DuBoise Price.

The power of unobtrusive goodness to win the love and respect of all who knew her was beautifully illustrated in the life of our beloved sister. Our Chapter has been moved with profound sorrow by her early death.

Therefore we desire to place on record our testimony of our appreciation of her lovely character. We tender to her husband and children the assurance of our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement and we direct the Secretary of our Chapter to forward to them a copy of this memorial and also to cause the same to be published in our local papers.

OBITUARY.

Franz Robinson was born Sept. 19, 1858, at Cambria, Niagara county, N. Y., and died July 20, 1894. His death was caused by being struck by a locomotive in Buffalo, N. Y., where he was employed by the street car company. He was one of a family of six children, of whom two brothers and one sister are left to mourn. His father was not present, being in Easton, N. Y. The sister was also absent on account of disability. Deceased lived in Cambria until seven years ago when the family removed to Orland, Indiana, where they resided twelve years, when they removed to Michigan, where he resided with his brother Bert up to about three years ago. The funeral services were held at Bert's home on Monday, July 23, 1894, at 1:00 o'clock, conducted by James Wright, of Britton.

It is hoped that Mr. Gould will not feel called upon to apologize and explain that the accident to the Britannia was no fault of his.

No patriotic citizen should vote for a demagogue, no matter what party brand he has on him.

The regular teachers' examination will be held at the court house, Adrian, on Thursday and Friday, Aug. 2 and 3, 1894, beginning at 8:30 a. m. standard time. Candidates will please bring pens, ink and legal cap paper.

Heesen Bros. & Co., are now occupying their brick building which fronts on Pearl street as a business office. It makes very neat quarters for that purpose and is plenty large enough.

Don't fail to attend the social to be given by the Boy's Brigade on the Presbyterian church lawn, Friday July 27. Ice cream, lemon ice, cake and emonade will be served. City Band in attendance.

Henry Stevens went to Jackson Monday to attend the meeting of the Republican Congressional Committee. He put in a strong plea to have the convention held at Tecumseh, but the final vote located it at Adrian.

A hint to corporation tax payers: July will soon end and so will 2 per cent. discount, therefore to save 2 per cent hand them in this month. Marshal Stevens will be at the store of E. F. Kirchgessner on Friday and Saturday.

Frank Snedicor has just added to his barber shop furniture two elegant barber chairs. They are called the Columbia Revolving and Reclining chair, and seem to be the acme of convenience for a tonsorial establishment. It will be a positive treat to get shaved in one of those chairs.

The annual excursion of the Michigan Press Association left Detroit last week Tuesday morning for a ten days trip. The route will be down the St. Lawrence river to Quebec, thence to Mount Washington, Portland and Boston. Editor Blosser and wife of the Manchester Enterprise and Editor Schemerhorn and wife of the Hudson Gazette are among the party.

A project is on foot to set a row of maples on each side of the highway from Clinton to Ed. Smith's section farm, or the four corners near the section school house. Now let the farmers in this direction take hold of the project and extend the double row of maples from those corners to Brownville. This road is being graveled and will soon be an elegant gravel highway. With a row of fine shade trees on each side, the drive from Tecumseh to Clinton would be one of the most beautiful drives in Michigan.

The following taken from the Grand Rapids Sunday Herald explains itself: A pretty double wedding was celebrated at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon in the parlors of Miss Burman on Third street. The Rev. Wm. J. Russell, rector of the Church of Christ, married I. M. Modeland and Miss Mary A. Rosenberg and also C. S. Whittier and Miss Mamie I. Burman. Two little daintily robed flower girls followed the bridal couple carrying the wedding rings on a silver tray. They were Hazel Thurston ane Etta Rosenberg. Miss Vina Thurston played a Mendelssohn wedding march. The house was lavishly trimmed with flowers and foliage vines and leaves, and a wedding supper was served. Those who attended who do not live in the city were Benjamin Thurston and family, of Lisbon, Mr. and Mrs. Moxom, of Ada, Miss Harriet Whittier and W. J. Ingersoll, of Tecumseh.

The picnic season opens briskly this summmer.

The Eastern Star Lodges of Tecumseh, Manchester, Clinton and Dundee will unite in a grand excursion to Devils Lake on Wednesday next, Aug. 1st. A special train will be provided, which will go up earlier and return later than the regular train, giving nearly the whole day at the lake. Round trip tickets from Tecumseh only forty cents.

Tuesday afternoon while the west bound freight was passing Thos Hanley's buildings, sparks set fire to a small stack of hay standing near the barn, and only for the prompt aid of kind neighbors and Willie's help, the buildings would have been in ruins before any possible assistance could have been had. Business had called Mrs. Hanley down town and Tom was at work. During the dry seasons they are in constant fear of fire. They should have the water works in their yard.

The Friends' quarterly meeting will be held at their church in Tecumseh August 4th. and 5th. FOUND GUILTY.

The Famous Macard Murder Case Is Ended.

The Prisoner Tries to Prove an Alibi, But the Jury Finds Him Guilty of the Murder of Mrs. McKendrick at Grand Rapids.

WILL BE SENTENCED FOR LIFE.

GRAND RAPIDS, July 22.—The Macard murder trial went to the jury at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon and in an hour returned with a verdict of murder in the first degree. The courtroom was crowded to its fullest capacity, and though the verdict gave general satisfaction and was expected, there was no demonstration beyond an audible sigh from all parts of the courtroom. Macard took the verdict with the same coolness which has marked his conduct throughout and neither his mother nor relatives showed emotion. He was taken back to jail to await sentence. He will receive a life sentence.

For the defense an effort was made to prove an alibi. Lester P. White, Macard's brother-in-law, was the first witness sworn for the defense. He lives at Morgan Park, Ill., and swore that Macard was at his house January 19. He gave Macard seventy-five dollars later in January and on this money Macard went west. Macard took the stand in his own behalf. He admitted working with Prame, the informer, in Chicago last summer, and that Prame came to this city with him and lived at his home for four weeks, but he absolutely denied all or any connection with or knowledge of the crime. He pronounced all who implicated him as liars, actuated by malice or other sinister motives. He said that Prame was at his home until January 20, and left that night after a quarrel with himself. The murder of Mrs McKendrick was committed the next morning. Macard's entire line of defense was a denial of all guilt and he stuck to his denial without a break through a severe cross-examination. Before Macard went on his mother and brother both testified that Prame left the night before the murder and that Macard was at home all day.

MECCA OF FURNITUREMEN.

Buyers from All Parts of the United States Gather at Grand Rapids.

GRAND RAPIDS, July 23.—The regular semi-annual furniture sale opened at Grand Rapids soon after the Fourth and reached its height during the past week. Representatives of nearly all the large furniture houses in the United States have been here during the past twenty days inspecting the new designs and placing their fall orders. The hotels are still crowded and quite a number of buyers will arrive during the coming week, which will close the season. The attendance of buyers has been larger than ever before, but from the west the number is smaller. The purchases have been more liberal than six or twelve months ago and a fair fall's work for the factories is assured. Carload prices range about 25 per cent. less than a year ago as the result of cheaper labor and material. The cheaper grades are also more in demand.

A HAMLET IN ASHES.

Thirty Houses, Constituting Mosstown, and Worth $10,000, Are Burned.

MANISTEE, July 23.—The little village of Mosstown, a suburb of Manistee, containing thirty houses, was entirely consumed by fire at noon Sunday. The loss is estimated at $10,000, with partial insurance. The fire caught from a barn in which children had been playing while their parents were at church. Nine children were barely saved from a burning building in which they had been locked.

Killed by a Michigan Man.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 21.—William Fletcher and his wife, Mary, living at Edmore, Mich., quarreled and separated. Mrs. Fletcher came to Chicago, bringing with her their 3-year-old daughter. Saturday Fletcher followed and being refused possession of the little girl, took the first opportunity of kidnapping her. While running down the street with the screaming child in his arms, he was met by Alfred Fenzer, who undertook to stop him, when Fletcher, drawing a revolver, shot him dead. The murderer has not yet been captured.

RACING AT DETROIT.

Summary of Several Interesting Events on the Turf.

DETROIT, July 21.—Notwithstanding the intense heat between 8,000 and 9,000 people witnessed the fourth day's races of the Detroit Driving club Thursday. The sport was of a high order, everything being favorable for fast time.

Alix was a hot favorite for the free-for-all trot, but only in one heat was she at all dangerous. There were seven starters—Alix, Lord Clinton, Walter E. Pixley, Nightingale, Belle Vara and Pamlico. In the first heat Lord Clinton lowered the gelding record from 2:09¼ to 2:09 and then proceeded to take the next two heats in a way that shows him to be in rare form just now. Alix was last in the second heat, but in the third managed to finish third and win third money. Azote, the favorite, won the 2:15 trot without exerting himself: best time, 2:09¾. The 2:15 pace was won by Ed Easton; best time, 2:13¾.

DETROIT, July 20.—A hard rain spoiled the sport at the Grosse Point track Friday. In the 2:42 pace but one heat was run owing to the rain. It was taken by John R. Gentry; time, 2:13.

DETROIT, July 22.—Saturday was the closing day of the races at the Grosse Point track. In the 2:42 trot, which was unfinished on Friday, Ryland T., who had won one heat, was distanced in the first mile. The race was won by Ellard; best time, 2:11¼. The 2:42 pace, also unfinished on Friday, was won by John R. Gentry; best time, 2:09¾. The 2:24 trot was won by Cobwebs; best time 2:14¼. In the 4-year-old class, trotting for stakes of $3,655, Alix was the winner; best time, 2:18. The 2:18 trot was won by Alar, whose best time was 2:14½. In the team trotting, for a purse of $2,000, Pansy and Cora defeated Fred Wilkes and St. Elmo. The latter team won the first heat in 2:20—the best time of the race, while the winning team won the second, fourth and fifth heats, their best time being 2:23¼.

AFTER THE FRUIT THIEVES.

The Growers of Berrien Harbor Organize for Protection.

BENTON HARBOR, July 20.—Southern Michigan fruit growers, who have for years been troubled by the fruit-thief nuisance, have at last taken steps toward the prosecution of the thieves. A meeting was held at the Hotel Benton in this city and organized an association to be known as the Lake Shore Anti-Thief society. A suitable reward will be offered by the executive board for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of any person trespassing upon the fruit fields, orchards or gardens of any member of the organization. Each member agrees to see that trespassers on his premises are arrested and to aid in bringing to justice offenders against other members. The membership fee is fixed at fifty cents.

His examination was to take place Saturday afternoon, but when about to be taken into court he was found dying in his cell from the effects of poison. No one seems to know how he secured it.

Fell from Their Bicycles and Drowned.

SAULT STE. MARIE, July 21.—Clifford Piesland, a machinist for Dunbar & Sullivan, contractors on the new locks, went to his work Friday on his bicycle, riding it along the pier by canal. His wheel slipped and Piesland was thrown head first into the canal. He sank at once and was drowned. A curious coincidence is shown when it is remembered that A. A. Carlisle, working for the same company, was thrown into the canal and drowned only a few feet from the spot of Friday's disaster, under exactly the same circumstances, last Wednesday.

DETROIT, July 21.—An 8-inch gas main belonging to the Ontario Natural Gas company exploded near Walkerville Friday morning, and as a result six men who were working upon the pipe were hurt, four of whom are now in the hospital. A large force of men worked on the turnpike west of town Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. They graded the road from Isaac Posts to Jas. Bostedor's then put on one load of clay to two of gravel. It will make a fine road of it, which all will appreciate, it having been very sandy.

John Haase, Sr., died at his residence west of Jackson last Thursday. His family were all present when the dissolution came. He formerly lived north of the village and his remains were brought here Saturday for burial, as he had requested. He was 82 years of age and had been married 50 years and his was the first death in the family. The widow and four children, James, John, Esther and Sarah survive him. The widow will remain here for a time. Truman Farr and wife, of Jackson, and Gussie Wilber of Dowagiac, came down with the family.

Our ball team went to Adrian Saturday and played the second game with the Light Guard team at Lawrence Park. The day was all that could be desired and there was a fine attendance. Our boys demonstrated that they could play good ball and practically won the game in the first two innings. Harris pitched a great game striking out thirteen men. Our boys preferred Southland as umpire but the Adrian boys wanted Mullaly, claiming he was far superior as an umpire, so our boys gave way, but the game had not progressed far before there were calls from the grand stand for Southland. While Mullaly no doubt intended to be impartial he was somewhat rank on balls and strikes and allowed many things contrary to the rules, which needlessly prolonged the game. Adrian was first at the bat. Krueger made a hit, but was thrown out stealing second. Cole made a two-bagger and scored on Hause's wild throw to third. Davis and Reynolds struck out. In next four innings but twelve men were at bat, going out in one, two, three order. In the sixth Sorter reached first on Gillen's dropping the third strike, and second on Harris' wild throw. This rather unnerved Harris and before the side was retired they scored four runs. In the seventh they scored four more hits aided by errors. In the eighth Harris three fanned Harris. In the ninth they scored two more. For Clinton they owe kindly to Cole's delivery and by heavy hitting of Schofield. Hause, Whelan, Keusch and Rice two bases on balls aided by Coles wild throw to first, Sorter and Koehn's error, a wild pitch have passed half they scored nine runs, they coming earned. In the second, by batting aided by errors, they made five runs. Then Cole retired and Tracey, who was a pitcher of an eastern college team, though not in uniform, went into the box and for the next five innings the boys could do nothing with him, only seven men going to the nine striking out. In the eighth they began to find Tracey. Keusch made a rattling hit to left, which C. Krueger muffed, he reaching second. Kennedy followed with a fine single. Rice struck out. Keusch and Kennedy both scored on Gillen's fine single. Schofield got first on Davis's error but he and Gillen were left on bases as Hause and Whelan were struck out at first.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION

A Wonderful Meeting, Both in Attendance and Enthusiasm.

The 13th International Christian Endeavor Convention has just closed its four days session at Cleveland. It was a grand success. The very first gathering of the clans of Thursday morning July 12th, filled to overflowing Saengerfest hall and the great Barnum tent, each of which easily held 10,000, and also two large churches, the Woodland Ave. Presbyterian and the Epworth Memorial Methodist Episcopal. This was remarkable, as the embargo of the strike was still undissolved. The explanation given is that the C. E's had a line of communication of their own: the line of Jacob's Ladder, which the strikes could not touch. The meetings have each been as full as the opening one, and Wilson Ave. between hall and tent has been filled with an almost ceaseless procession, night and day, and has been gay with refreshment booths and tents. Some of the best talent the country affords, has been pressed into the service of this convention, and teachers and preachers of the highest reputation have lent their aid in ministering to the enthusiasm and profit of this annual convention. A young lady on her first tour abroad wrote from Venice to her friends at home, "Last night I was on the grand canal. I took it all in, and I feel pretty full." Such must be the feeling of those who are taking leave to-day, after having 'taken in' these meetings. In rousing enthusiasm this has been like the national conventions that nominate our Presidents. But the saloons have reaped no profit, as when those presidential conventions meet. The utmost good nature has prevailed, even in the strife for the place of the next meeting. There have been state receptions and rallies, but nothing stronger than lemonade has flowed at them, and in place of oaths and wranglings, have been fervent prayers and sweet christian songs expressive of christian unity and love. The most elaborate preparations had been made by the committee of arrangements of Cleveland C. E. Union for the comfort of their guests. It is a huge undertaking even for a city like Cleveland to provide for 20,000 strangers coming all at once. But everything that money could purchase and the wisest forethought could arrange, was made ready. Nothing seemed to be lacking except badges. Those it was hard to secure, though 40,000 had been made ready. One of these was necessary to obtain admission to the meetings, and some of the delegates came near being excluded for lack of them. Saengerfest Hall, trimmed with the convention colors, gold and white, with flags of all nations, and with plants of all zones, filled with its myriad of listeners, its chorus of a 1000, its company of officers, ushers, reporters, etc., was a never to be forgotten scene. When Gov. McKinley was waited upon by the chairman of the committee of arrangements and requested to give Ohio's welcome to the gathering, he was told that it might be that the welcoming address which he was asked to give at the hall would also have to be repeated to an audience of similar proportions in the tent. The governor shook his head and said he was somewhat acquainted with public assemblies and he did not think it possible he would thus be called upon. But he was, and I heard him deliver his second address, and say he had, so they told him, too more to be delivered at overflow meetings before he could take his train and return to Columbus. The crusades of the middle ages were not half so wonderful as this movement in the christian world which took its origin from the endeavor of a christian pastor to provide opportunity for work for the young people of his church. His plan was adopted, until from being local it has become interdenominational and international, and from an annual meeting which numbered hardly 150 delegates, and these all from a small region in New England, there are now 50,000 delegates coming from everyone of the U. S. from Canada and from foreign lands. The question arises, Is such gatherings pay? They are an expense, and are a weariness to the flesh, and some important good should come from them to justify their being held. Many a justifying result for holding them could be mentioned. They educate those who attend them both in christian doctrine and in christian work. They promote patriotism and good citizenship as well as religion. They give broader views of things and so "Canadianism" is swallowed up in christian unity. Some who attend may come merely to have a good time and see what is to be seen. But a large majority are indeed earnest for improvement in christian character when they come and in still more dead earnest when they leave. The enthusiasm they catch here is taken home and communicated to those who did not come, and so the world is the gainer from these great gatherings of young people. But the convention of '94 is ended. It will be talked about for a time, and then the one of '95 will be looked forward to. In riding down town this morning, I found in place of the placards in front of the electric cars "Direct to the C. E. Tent," the new legend, reading, "Direct to Barnum & Bailey's Circus." The crowd were intently gazing at the gilded wagons, the helmeted horsemen, the canopied elephants, and the camels, with their swarthy riders. "Sic transit gloria Mundi." And so ends this hastily penned letter.

AS BIG AS PIGEON EGGS.

Hemorrhoids that Make Life Miserable.

How often you hear people complain of 'only a slight case of piles,' often claiming that the trouble is merely temporary, induced by costiveness, long standing or sedentary habits. It may be very well to console yourself in this way, but it is much better to check the trouble at once. You can't do it too soon. In time these little rectal tumors will grow from the size of grapes until a knot of them are or as large as pigeon's eggs. They become inflamed and exquisitely tender to the touch and are filled with throbbing, burning and stinging sensations. And thus the disease continues growing from bad to worse until finally the victim can only endure it by remaining in a horizontal position. Pyramid Pile Cure is a certain remedy for piles in any of these stages. It goes to the very source of the trouble and drives out all inflammation, causing the tumors to subside and the various distorted membranes to resume their natural places. The disease leads to too many complications to admit of experiment. Pyramid Pile Cure is manufactured by the Pyramid Drug Co. at Albion, Mich., and is sold by all druggists. The remedy is a positive cure for either itching, aching or bleeding piles. It is not an experimental venture, but is a tried and true cure, having been formulated by specialists who are famous in the field of medicine. If you are a sufferer you should not delay. This remedy requires no supplementary treatment. It is perfect and complete in itself. Simply follow directions and a cure is certain to follow.

Hot and dry as ever.

Mrs. E. W. Rappleye visited relatives in Dundee, last week.

Mrs. R. H. Nelson and daughter Mary, of Hudson, visited friends here the past week.

Mrs. Geo. Gifford left for Sarnia, Ont., Thursday for an indefinite stay with relatives.

The Belle Isle excursion will take place about the 25th of Aug,. nothing preventing.

DeWitt Wilkerson, of Dundee, visited at the home of E. W. Rappleye the first of the week.

Mrs. Lewis Priest and children, of Detroit, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fenner Palmer.

Sweet fragrance of orange blossoms floats upon the Sunday evening breeze, from one of our prominent homes with increasing strength.

T. H. Temple left for Grand Rapids Monday, where he will attend the Republican state convention, after which he will spend a few days in Lake county fishing.

A. J. Sutton, having sold half interest in his mercantile business to Bert Gould, the firm will be known as Sutton & Gould, and will be pleased to meet all who are in need of anything in their line.

Saturday our ball team went to Hol way for the return game, only to me disapointment, as the team there we not to be seen; out of sight as it were using for an excuse, they didn't know our team were coming. They must have jumped at conclusions in their article in last weeks issue. Nine to nothing is not a bad record for our team however.

There was a large attendance at the lawn social given by classes No. 4 and 7, on Sutton's and Bannister's lawn, Wednesday evening of last week. After the programme was carried out, Miss Helen Foster, of Toledo, favored the friends with some very fine violin selections. The classes realized nearly $18.00 after paying all expenses. The evening passed off very pleasantly.

Detroit has Jack the ripper; Saginaw, Jack the kisser, and Port Huron, Jack the hugger, but Ridgeway comes to the front with Jack the sneak. During the past week some unknown person has been making it very annoying for several young ladies of the village by calling at their bedroom windows and asking if their mothers were at home, and if they were awake etc. Romeo in some cases used a ladder to carry out his desires, but Juliet was rather stubborn as well as frightened as he put in his appearance at all hours of the night, so his efforts have been fruitless so far. As a suspicion rests quite heavy in a certain direction, we would advise Romeo either to take a skate or leave off his mantle of white and come out like a man and ask the young ladies a little more respectfully if their mothers are willing.

The following is clipped from the Mt. Victory Observer, of Mt. Victory Ohio,

"The fame is quenched that I foresaw."

"The head hath missed an earthly wreath."

For the first time the angel of death has visited our alumni, and bore away the pride of the class of '92. Her short life was a growth of all that is good and noble and true. Nellie G. Chamberlain graduated from the Mt. Victory High School, May 4th '92 and was valedictorian of the class. Her cheerful, happy disposition won for her the love of her class and alumni, while her noble life won the admiration of all. After a long illness, during which time suffering contributed its share to perfecting of this noble character, her sweet life went from us. Whereas, In His divine providence an all wise Father has called to her eternal resting place our beloved sister, Nellie Chamberlain, and Whereas, She was held in universal esteem and admiration for her unfaltering industry and christian character. Resolved, That in her death, the class of '92 has lost one of its most talented members, and the alumni association has lost a faithful and earnest member. Resolved, That we, the members of the alumni association deeply deplore our loss and mourn her early death. Resolved, That we extend our sympathy to the bereaved parents, and commend them to "Him who doeth all things well." Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes, sent to the parents of the departed, and published in the local paper.

Those who had the pleasure of listening to the speech of Miss Emma Bower, the great record keeper of the L. O. T. M. at Devils Lake, last Friday, report it a very instructive and interesting talk.

A newspaper has been started here and is called the Onsted Free Press, edited by B. T. Raikes. We extend a welcome to Mr. Raikes and his business and hope that the citizens of the village and surrounding county will give him their best support as we think that a newspaper adds much in building up a community, and is an agent of education and reform if rightly run.

The sum of $107.33 was taken at the gates at the last matinee held here and people in attendance all seemed to enjoy themselves very much. The races were fairly good, the ball game well played, and the baloon ascension and parachute drop was nicely done, although it was rather late before the balloon could be filled, on account of the strong wind; but to state it from the associations point of view the matinee was an entire success all around.

If the moles dig up your flower beds just treat them to a dose of kerosene emulsion, pouring it on the ground and allowing it to penetrate their runways. It will not hurt the plants, if not too strong, and the moles will leave in disgust.

George Ferguson, Jr. made a flying visit among friends in Pentecost last Friday. He made the run from Coldwater on his wheel, stopping only for dinner, and arriving here in good season for tea. The next day he expected to reach Detroit in good time for the bicycle races.

The ice cream social at J. S. Pentecost's last Wednesday evening netted something over $15:00. The music, furnished gratuitously by Messrs Frank Cooley, Clarence Cole, Albert Eggleston and Miss Fannie Warner, was most excellent, and the thanks of the society are due them for their generous contribution to the evening's pleasure.

At Sand Lake crossing a large party of excursionists were delayed an hour or so last Sunday, waiting for the train which was late owing to the accident on the T. & A. road. Somebody suggested that it would be a good time for these people to learn the fourth commandment while they waited, the keeping of which by the railroads and their patrons would have prevented both the accident and the delay.

THE MICHIGAN FARMER.

Some Reasons Why It Should Be in the Family of Every Farmer in Michigan.

It is the recognized State agricultural organ. It contains matter written by educated successful agriculturists, who are practical farmers, live stock breeders, horticulturists and dairymen of this State. It gives all the agricultural live stock, dairy and horticultural news of this State. It publishes full and reliable markets from all important points where Michigan farmers sell products. It reaches every post-office in the State within twelve hours after it is printed. Its editors and correspondents are Michigan men, thoroughly in earnest in their desire to advance, protect and improve the agricultural interests of this State. It is filled with original paid for matter written expressly for it. It is first-class in every particular, its publishers sparing no expense to make it the equal of any agricultural paper of America. It admits no immoral, unfair or swindling advertisements. It is a weekly of 52 issues a year—64 columns in each issue—and is furnished at the lowest possible price that such a paper can be published at; and last and greatest—Because it is many times more valuable and instructive to the agriculturists of Michigan than any agricultural paper published outside of the State.

TECUMSEH, MICH., AUG. 2, '94.

President Cleveland's letter has had one good effect, at least. It has waked up the sleepy Senate.

When the time comes to foot the bills for damages, Chicago will find that a big railroad strike is an expensive luxury.

The dominical or governing letter this year is G, and it is a singular coincidence that the initial letter of Grover is G.

In fixing the tariff schedules, shall the party rule, or a little cabal of soft shell Senators, who are seeking to sell out their party and the public as well? That is the issue.

Coxey & Debs are both at home taking it easy, with plenty of money apparently enjoying themselves. But their poor deluded followers and victims are having a hard time of it.

The people have voted for tariff reform. They want tariff reform and are bound to have it. If the present Congress cannot or will not grant their popular wish, the people will reach it through some other agency.

The Democratic leaders in Congress ought to be impressed by this time with the absolute necessity of coming to an agreement on the tariff bill. Pass the Wilson bill, gentlemen; pass it now and then go home and rest.

The bills for the admission of New Mexico and Arizona now only await an opportunity to be voted upon favorably, as they have been favorably reported to the Senate, and Democratic Cleveland's promises [illegible]

[illegible] Cleveland's letter [illegible] Wilson will [illegible] three times over for its [illegible] courage. It is [illegible] backbone of [illegible] that now [illegible]

Senator Vilas' speech in defense of President Cleveland was a masterly effort. He is developing into one of the ablest debaters in the Senate. [illegible] crushed the rabid compound [illegible] hair of beard a person [illegible] Senators since.

If Senator Gorman and his associates would be half as loyal in fulfilling their promises to the democratic party as they are in carrying out their agreements with the sugar trust, the cause of tariff reform would win a speedy victory.

Senator David B. Hill's attack on President Cleveland was a manly act and a very shrewd one too. He struck from the shoulder and gave some telling blows to the soft shell cabal that are trying to throttle tariff reform. His speech will atone for a good many of his shortcomings in the past.

Representative Tucker, of Virginia, whose resolution for a Constitutional amendment providing for the election of U. S. Senators by the people passed the House the other day, is firm in the belief that the Senate will also pass the resolution. Mr. Tucker will have no inside information as to what the Senate will do, but most other men who are familiar with the peculiar methods of "Senatorial Courtesy" have little faith that the Senate will pass such a resolution.

The inside history of the [illegible] as given during the past week by [illegible] who have controlled its [illegible] creditable to anybody. It [illegible] in addition to being, as [illegible] Hancock said when he was a free trade candidate, a local [illegible] tariff is also a personal [illegible] Senators are ready to vote [illegible] schedule which will put money into their own pockets, utterly regardless of the wishes of their constituents or the public welfare.

Every true Democrat and every sincere tariff reformer knows that the bill in its present form, and as it will be submitted to the conference, falls far short of the consummation for which we have long labored, for which we have suffered defeat, without discouragement which, in its anticipation gave us a rallying cry in our day of triumph, and which in its promise of accomplishment is so interwoven with Democratic pledges and Democratic successes that our abandonment of the cause or the principles upon which it rests means party perfidy and party dishonor.—Cleveland's Letter to Wilson.

THE GREAT ISSUE.

President Cleveland's letter to Congressman Wilson created a sensation second only to that caused by his famous tariff message of December, 1887. The Democratic press is almost a unit in commending his action and in denouncing Senator Gorman for his vicious attack upon the President. The few extracts below reveal the trend of popular sentiment:

If the sugar trust wants to force the fighting, why not give it all it wants, and more?—New York Times.

Gorman and his co-conspirators think to defeat tariff reform. They have only given it a greater impulse and a more decided spirit.—St. Paul Globe.

The country is with the president and against the Senate. The vast majority of Democrats regard the Senate bill as a monstrosity.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The president is not injured in the least by the "exposure." On the contrary, he is strengthened, for he has forced Gorman to come out in the open.—Buffalo Enquirer.

The president is in the right, and the exhibition of malignity, by baffled and exposed conspirators in the Senate, will only deepen the odium they have already incurred—Rochester Herald.

It seems to be a case of the United States Senate on one side and the vast majority of the people on the other. Under such conditions the outcome can not be distant or doubtful.—Boston Herald.

When Mr. Gorman talks about "the work of reconciliation" he refers to what he has done in trying to induce tariff reformers to be satisfied with licking the plate after he and his conservatives have taken the pie.—New York World.

It remains to be seen whether the earnest and manly appeal of the President will stir into life the tariff reformers in the House to make a determined stand for the revision of this bill such as will make it a Democratic measure and a fulfillment of Democratic promises.—Minneapolis Times.

There was not a word in Gorman's speech to show that the plants, fees and a position of dishonor and perfidy which he denounces are not fully developed. It merely demonstrated that he and his band of masked protectionists are scheming under merited rebuke.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The letter calls the Democrats in Congress back to their allegiance to their pledges with a trumpet blast. The House has responded to President Cleveland's appeal. Now will the Senate listen to the voice of the Democratic President which is also the voice of the overwhelming people of this United States.—Boston Post.

The House has to deal [illegible] with the Senate and its assistant Republicans [illegible] a finish. Let the fight be [illegible] to serve. The House should [illegible] and if the Senate [illegible] to the people to [illegible] the responsibility for [illegible] Herald.

[illegible] of such a letter as this, [illegible] to be given to the [illegible] as one of those courageous and [illegible] with which Grover [illegible] sometimes astonishes the country. He lays down Democratic duty so that the people understand it, and he calls on all honorable Senators [illegible] Democracy will [illegible] the storm of "amen."—Pittsburg Post.

[illegible] a fine [illegible] to [illegible] Senator [illegible] the good faith of President Cleveland and the cause he has taken regarding tariff legislation, will [illegible] for the cause of senatorial [illegible] among the people [illegible] for him in regard of the sands of Democrats not only in his own state but [illegible] the country.—Boston Globe.

The letter from President Cleveland [illegible] to recreancy in the Democratic party standing [illegible] its pledges and principles. Those Populists and [illegible] who have been so busy in charging the possession of [illegible] and corporations [illegible] with [illegible] Democratic party, [illegible] Better still, the Senate [illegible] from its position [illegible] There is no room in the Democratic party for the Gorman "conservative" element.—Richmond State.

[illegible] that President Cleveland's [illegible] would have been received before the passage of the bill in the Senate rather than in the conference committee, but having refrained from taking any part there, it was much better to [illegible] himself to the conference [illegible] to make two amendments, and permit the passage of an indemocratic bill. [illegible] believed that to be probable. The House and Senate will both make concessions, and we believe the tariff [illegible] to the President early [illegible] A good [illegible] Senators Walsh [illegible]

[illegible] only the President [illegible] United States, but is the [illegible] party which gave [illegible] majorities. He is not only [illegible] elected upon the principles [illegible] and maintaining are imperiled [illegible] board. The President [illegible] crisis is a good [illegible] thing especially at this time; [illegible] the people will forgive the postponement a good deal more readily than they will [illegible] cowardice of principle [illegible] securing a present [illegible] and the false standard of reform.—Detroit Free Press.

There are those who are disposed to criticise the President for what they deem the needless interference with the legislative branch of the government, but in view of the urgent nature of the situation confronting his party and the country, the President must be considered somewhat stinted. The House should stand firm to the end. The McKinley law, bad as it may be, is better than the Senate bill, because it is a consistent Republican measure, while the Senate bill is nothing more than a dishonest and imbecile composition which finds support nowhere outside of the trusts and monopolies.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The President and the People.

This is not the first time that Cleveland has dared to exert his great gifts of leadership at critical points in the fortunes of his party. He led it to victory in 1892 along the same strong lines to which he has adhered ever since and, to which he is adhering to-day. He saved it by standing like a rock amid the breakers of faction last summer and insisting that the party's pledges to repeal the Sherman law should be carried out. He is doing all he can now to hold it up to the full performance of its promises of tariff reform. The Democracy went into the contest of 1892 with the promise of free raw materials and lower duties on manufactured goods blazoned on all its banners. It came out of that contest triumphant. The presidency, the Senate and the House were all given to it on that promise. In that sign it conquered, and in that sign it must go on conquering or fall as the penalty of its own unfaithfulness.

The House has done its duty. The president is ready to do his. And, like an honest and unswerving servant of the people who elected him, he has not hesitated to tell the coterie of hucksters who block the way to the fulfillment of the party's promises that they must bow to the national will or take the consequences. His hands are clear now of all share in the fearful responsibility on their own shoulders. They cannot escape it if they persist in defeating the Wilson bill. They know Mr. Cleveland too well to dream for a moment that he can be induced to sanction the tariff sold by them at private auction to the trusts. They can stand by their bargains if they must, but they can never deliver the goods. The veto power bars the way against the perpetration of that iniquity, and behind the veto power there are the honest, uncorrupted, unpurchased and unpurchasable ballots of the Democratic masses.—Baltimore Sun.

It is hoped that the western politicianesses will hereafter refrain from anything that could be construed as ungentlemanly.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health. Live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Low rate excursions every month over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. E. E. Posey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile, Ala.

You may not be handsome, but you will pass muster if you will look as well as your photograph.

La Grippe.

During the prevalance of the Grippe the past season it was a noticeable fact that those who depended upon Dr. King's New Discovery, not only had a speedy recovery, but escaped all the troublesome after effects of the malady. This remedy seems to have a peculiar power in effecting rapid cures not only in cases of La Grippe, but in all diseases of Throat, Chest and Lungs, and has cured cases of Asthma and Hay Fever of long standing. Try it and be convinced. It won't disappoint. Free trial bottles at Orr & Temple's Drug Store. 4

Farmers' Home Reading Club.

Two letters were received last week by the Farm and Dairy editor, asking for particulars regarding the F. H. R. C. This is a home course of reading in agriculture, horticulture, dairying, etc., on the Chautauqua plan. It is a grand thing for our farmers, their wives, sons, daughters and the the "hired man." Write Prof. F. B. Mumford, Sec'y., Agricultural College, Mich. We are reading this course and could not be hired to drop it. We expect to keep at it (in spite of the tariff, or the exit of silver) until we "graduate." Too much cannot be said in favor of this course for our young farmers who have had no opportunity to pursue a course of study at the Agricultural College. In these days it is almost criminal to live in ignorance. The well-informed, educated, practical, hard working business farmer is the one who ought to make the most money, and he generally does. He who wills may win.—Michigan Farmer.

Permanent Good

Long and Discouraging Illness With Symptoms of Consumption

All Medicines Fail Except Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen:—Ten years ago, my wife's health began to fail. I consulted a physician, and for one year she remained under his care and took all the medicine prescribed, but still grew worse. We then consulted other physicians, and she doctored off and on for four years without any improvement. As her mother died of consumption, and I expected my wife would go the same way. However, feeble as my wife was and though by the physician, I could not give up hope, and she still clung to life. Then we began to try different medicines. We found that of all the preparations taken, a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla had seemed to do her the most good, so she determined to take that medicine again. I bought six bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and while taking this lot she seemed to get better. This was so encouraging, after so that she continued with Hood's Sarsaparilla. Her health has improved and she has ceased to complain. She is still taking the medicine, and feels so much better and stronger than we believe her to be in perfect health. Altogether,

HE'S COMING TOMORROW.

He's coming to see me tomorrow.
What do you suppose he will say?
I fancied he looked at me strangely
When he bid me goodby yesterday.

I'm awfully nervous and shaky.
And there's not the least reason why.
It's a shame to be quite such a baby
When one is so aged as I.

He says he is coming tomorrow.
There's nothing at all strange in that,
For many's the time he has been here,
And we've had a jolly good chat.

He's coming to see me tomorrow.
What of it? I'd like him to tell.
I'm sure he can come when he pleases,
Or never—'twould suit me as well.

Tomorrow he's coming, tomorrow,
And he was here one day ago.
I never did see such a fellow.
What ails him is more than I know.

I'm sure I cannot imagine
What 'tis he's so anxious to say,
But he's coming to see me tomorrow—
I wish he were coming today!

—Persis E. Darrow in Housekeeper.

BOUND BY AN OATH.

Mrs. St. Evremond, 3 Pandora Road, Shepherd's Bush, to Arthur Prius, Esq., Barrister at Law, Middle Temple, July 1, 1889:

Dear Mr. Prius—My dear child has acquainted me with your very flattering proposal, and I am grieved to the heart that I cannot say to you, "Take her and be happy." Had I foreseen the danger of your valued friendship for her ripening into love I should have told you earlier what it becomes my melancholy duty to say to you now—your career is an insuperable objection to the marriage. She can never become the wife of a barrister.

Of course I am aware that it is exceptional for an actress' mother to refuse her blessing on grounds like these—I know that it is my little Nellie's profession and not your own which is more usually esteemed an obstacle—but when you have heard my explanation you will admit its force and exonerate me, I am sure, from any suspicion of coldness or indifference.

I am bound by a deathbed oath!

When I married my late husband, he, like yourself, was at the bar. I was an unsophisticated girl at the time—in appearance much what my Nellie is today—but while she, as a popular ingenue, is in receipt of a substantial income, I was penniless and dependent on his support.

He had no influence; his struggles were pitiful.

I will not weary you with the tale of the misery we endured. His talent, given no chance to display itself, was, I have often thought, a misfortune rather than a boon. He, who should have taken silk at five and thirty and risen to the bench 10 years later, was forced to toil far into the night in order to earn a guinea fee. Conscious of his ability and oppressed by the sight of the wretchedness he had inflicted on the wife he loved and the daughter who had sprung from the union, he lost spirit and health. Morose and disappointed, his last illness came almost as a release, but before he died he made me take a solemn vow. It was that his child should never be given to a member of the legal profession.

You may reply that you are succeeding; that your means are sufficient for a young couple's simple wants—that does not free me from my sacred undertaking. Mr. Prius, it can never be. And I trust to you, I appeal to your good feeling and your honor, to abstain from seeing my little Nellie any more. With kind regards and sincere regrets, I remain very truly yours,

Matilda St. Evremond.

Mrs. St. Evremond, 3 Pandora Road, Shepherd's Bush, to Captain Maurice Fairbrain, 11[illegible], Jermyn Street, W., May 19, 1890:

Dear Captain Fairbrain—I have just learned from my child of the honor of your proposal, and let me say at once that I know no man to whom I would more gladly confide the happiness of her life. I am the more anxious that you should believe this assurance because I am compelled to tell you she can never be your wife, and I wish you to understand that I am helpless in the matter.

I am bound by a deathbed oath.

Let me explain: When I married my late husband, he, like you, was in the army. A young man and a young, unsophisticated girl, we fell in love at a country ball and wedded without a thought of consequences. He was handsome, popular and practically penniless, and it was not long before I discovered also that he was deeply in debt.

His father, who idolized him, freed him from his embarrassment, for the second time, I heard, but with his last effort the old man's powers of assistance came to an end, and in a year there were embarrassments again.

I will not detail the history of my poor husband's difficulties—the history of a young fellow placed in an expensive regiment and tempted to extravagance by the example of bosom friends, whose position made their companionship a curse. I will only say that in his last years, disgraced and broken hearted, it was to his mistaken choice of a profession that he always attributed his ruin, and before he died he called me to him and bound me by formal vow. It was that when his child was marriageable she should never be given to a military man. I shall always keep that sacred pledge I gave in the chamber of death—I feel that nothing can absolve me from it—and it is my painful duty to beg you not to approach my little Nellie again. Sympathize with me in my distress, Captain Fairbrain, and believe me sorrowfully yours,

Matilda St. Evremond.

Mrs. St. Evremond, 3 Pandora Road, Shepherd's Bush, to Harley Haresfoot, Esq., Corinthian Theater, Piccadilly, Sept. 7, 1891:

Dear Mr. Haresfoot—My child informs me that you proposed to her in the omnibus last night, and that you are anxious to marry each other without delay. I am compelled to tell you that your vocation makes it impossible. She can never be the wife of an actor.

I am bound by a deathbed oath.

Since my little Nellie is in the profession, too, this may astonish you, but I am speaking in accordance with her poor father's wish.

When I married my late husband, he, like yourself, was on the stage. Ours was not a happy union, I confess it frankly, yet we loved each other at the beginning dearly enough.

Dependent upon a precarious profession, we were forced to take what offers we could get—to accept separate engagements, to live apart, one in the north when the other was in the south, one wandering east when the other was traveling west. If we encountered each other at a railway station occasionally, we were fortunate. In that way we learned to do without each other, and coldness began.

Before he died we were reconciled, but we had both learned from experience a bitter lesson. On the morning of his death he signed me to approach and made me swear to protect my Nellie from my own unhappiness. I swore it in his own words. They were that she should never marry an actor.

You will see that, bound by a deathbed oath, I have no alternative but refuse my consent to your suit. But, with sincere regards, I am always your friend,

Matilda St. Evremond.

Charles Copthall, Esq., 999 Throgmorton Street, to Miss Nellie St. Evremond, Folly Theater, Strand, July 1, 1892:

My Darling Nell—I see your misgiving had foundation, for this morning's post brought me a polite note from your worthy parent signifying that she can never consent to our marriage.

Now, my sweetest girl, this seems to me awfully hard lines! The fact that your poor father was a broker and went smash is, so far as I can see, no earthly reason why you should not make me happy or why I should not make you a good husband. Moreover, from what you say, your mother appears to have objected to every offer you have ever had. I can't say I am sorry she did so—if she hadn't, you wouldn't be free—but the fact remains that she refuses you to every one, and the inference is as clear as the noonday sun—out of London.

You draw $8 a week, and you admit [illegible]. Yet she treats you like a child, pockets your salary and allows you out of it a beggarly 10 shillings for chiffons and bus fares. How long will you permit such a rascally state of things to continue? You say you are sure she will never give you to me. I dare say not. She finds you much too valuable to part with! Be courageous and defy her! I love you with my whole heart, and I will not see your life wasted in this fashion. If you wear the accompanying flowers in the second act tonight, I shall understand that Mrs. St. Evremond is not coming to fetch you, and I shall be at the stage door when you leave. Ever your devoted Charlie.

Miss Lydia Copthall, 49a Pembridge Square, W., to Miss Augusta Gusher, 2 The Grove, Kensington. July 18, 1892:

My Dearest Gussie—I am writing to you in despair. It will be the veriest line, but I should hate for you to learn the awful intelligence from any one but me. Charley is married. You know what I have always hoped—my brother and my bosom friend! But the dream is over. Indeed he has shown that he was never worthy of you.

He has married Nellie St. Evremond, the actress. Mamma is distracted, and I—well, you may picture me! He ran away with her (not mamma, the actress) and now has actually the effrontery to say he is happy.

Do come and have tea tomorrow and let us mingle our tears. Yours, quite brokenly,

Lydia.

P. S.—The character of the bride may be imagined from the fact that her own mother cuts her in the street.—Black and White.

Rapid Lamp Lighting.

Passengers on the bridge cars in the early evening have noticed the tall, lanky individual who fills and lights the oil lamps in the cars. He stands about 6 feet 2 inches high and is very thin. His height is valuable to him in his present occupation in reaching for the lamps. This he does with the aid of a small box, while a shorter man would need a ladder.

The swiftness with which he works is marvelous. He says it comes of long practice. He will board a train coming in at the Brooklyn station before the last passenger has left the cars and will then busy himself with his oil can and box.

In each bridge car there are at least eight lamps, while some carry ten. This makes at least 32 lamps in a train of four cars. The lamplighter must fill every lamp in each car in the short time it takes to switch the train from one track to the other. He does not even have time to extinguish the light, but must pour the oil in while the lamp is burning.

This lightninglike work must be continued until every car is illuminated. He no sooner gets through with one train than another demands his attention, but he gets them all lighted without the least trouble.—New York Herald.

Too Smart.

Richard—By the way, how do you and Miss Smart get along?

William—Oh, that affair is all over!

Richard—You don't mean it?

William—You see, I'd made up my mind about a week ago to bring matters to a crisis. So I began by saying that I had a question I wanted to ask her.

Richard—Yes.

William—She tossed her head and said any fool could ask questions.

Richard—And you?

William—I merely told her perhaps it would be just as well, then, to let some fool ask my question.—Exchange.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. SPEEDING THROUGH NEBRASKA.

Our Bicycle Correspondent Spinning Over the Prairies West of the Missouri River.

EDITOR HERALD:—My last letter was written in Omaha at the Omaha Wheel Club rooms on Sunday. Monday morning at ten o'clock after receiving the good wishes of many of the club members I set out on the last stage of my journey to Denver. After a few hills or bluffs which are characteristic of land bordering the Missouri River, I was let down into the Platte valley, and have ridden over 300 miles on a perfectly level surface. The first day I rode 95 miles into Nebraska to Columbus and tarried there to slumber, for life in this state is a new experience to me in many ways. As I ride my trusty Victor over the level plains I see far to the south a long low range of hills omnipresent in the distance. To the north as far as I can see are prairie lands without even a wave on the surface. These level expanses at times are vast fields of stiff prairie grass, but generally great fields of corn and cereals of various kinds. The great Nebraska desert as it was once called has been irrigated and returns very good harvests in favorable seasons. This season is very dry and the people are despondent over their prospects. A favorite topic now is the Chinch bug, which destroys the corn, and is in turn being destroyed by a novel process. From the Lincoln University they are sending out diseased bugs which are placed by the farmer in the infested fields and they soon communicate the disease to their kind and all perish in a few days time. A most noticeable peculiarity of the soil is the alkali which in many places lies white on the surface and the water in these localities is impregnated with it. Of course I have seen the cowboy, but he is a first class fellow and only inclined to be excessively cordial and to extend his hospitality beyond bounds. During my first day's ride in Nebraska toward evening I met a hilarious gang of six cowboys. They had been drinking hard and had just stopped to imbibe more. They hailed me and as they blocked the road I dismounted. "Have a drink with the boys" said the leader, leering at the others, and extending the beverage which exhilarates. "No" I said, "I am in training as it were and liquor wont do for me." Then he wanted to know where I was from, and I got the respect, yes reverence of that gang at once when they found out I had ridden a bicycle from Michigan. "Well, you tell the boys that Long Johnny said you was all right" said the leader. Then they all shook hands with me, wished me luck in their way and we parted. I am preserving "Long Johnny's" recommend as a talisman in case I am held up with a whiskey bottle again. Since leaving Fremont I have not lost sight of the Union Pacific R. R. My road at times is only two continuous ruts with prairie grass waving its long blades together from both sides of the rut in which I am riding. When the road gets sandy, as it does at times, I take to the railroad which is so neatly graded up that I can ride at the side of the rails. This expedient helps me to cross many irrigation ditches which otherwise I would have to ford. I might as well use the track. No one else does to any extent. Only five trains have passed me for two days and a half which I have spent riding by the track.

There is a great migrating movement toward the East. While I was in Iowa and since I have been in Nebraska, hardly five miles have gone by without I have met an immigrant wagon. The people in the wagons all wear a dogged careworn expression and it is pleasing to see the faces light up when I address some commonplace to them in passing. Tuesday I rode 90 miles, and had dinner in Central City, which was formerly known as "Lone Tree" because of the solitary representative of its kind which stood there. Now there are many trees in the City and in fact the farmers all through Nebraska have planted groves of trees about their houses. At times I can see no house in any direction. Then I am lonesome, and the next time there is a farm house anywhere near my road I leave my wheel and go to the house just to see a human face. They are glad to see me also, and reward me with a glass of milk or a piece of cake offered freely. The small boys in the villages object to my wearing my sweater outside of my pants. They don't think it modest, and if the opposition continues I shall be obliged to consign the offending "shirt tails," as they call them, to their normal receptacle. There is a commendable fact about Nebraska roads which I must mention. When they approach a town they don't enter with innumerable crooks and corners, nor like Iowa roadways that go around the town three times as if a magician had made them to perplex the evo, but they go cross lots and back yards into the center of the town or city. That is a characteristic western straight ahead and business like brevity. To-day I rode 53 miles before dinner and passed through Kearney, which is a very attractive city with a most favorable location. There are many manufacturing industries there and the city had a bright wide awake appearance. I shall reach Denver now in about five days and shall write you from there.

The Eastern Star Excursion.

The Eastern Star Excursion to Devils Lake yesterday was well patronized. When the train pulled out from the Tecumseh depot, eight passenger coaches were well filled, and it received accessions at Tipton, Sand Lake and Onsted. About twenty-five came from Dundee, Britton furnished nearly as many, while Clinton and Manchester were both well represented. Tecumseh furnished the balance of the company which numbered nearly 500 altogether, and a more jolly, congenial crowd it has seldom been our pleasure to see. Old and young, parents and children participated and all seemed to enjoy themselves equally well. Upon arriving at Manitou Beach the crowd scattered, a portion of them taking the steamer City of Hudson and going over to Beardsell's, and a part taking possession of the Beach grove at the south west corner of the lake. Promptly at noon the lunches were spread and they were as promptly disposed of and the afternoon was spent in boat riding and strolling about the groves on the south side, trying to keep cool. Most of the company took a trip across the lake in some of the steamers, all of which were running during the afternoon. The lunch rooms at Manitou received their share of attention, and hammocks were in great demand.

At six o'clock the train backed down to the station and half an hour later it was steaming towards the junction. A delightful car ride of forty-five minutes ended at Tecumseh where the bulk of the company alighted. Not an accident occurred to mar the festivities, and all who went were delighted with their day's outing. The committee in charge of the affair are entitled to much credit for the completeness of their arrangements. Barring the fact that Beardsell caused the boys some trouble and disappointment the day was one of unalloyed pleasure, and those who failed to go missed a good time.

A CORRECTION.

Columbus, Ohio, July 23d, 1894

TO TECUMSEH MEETING OF FRIENDS, TECUMSEH, MICH.

My dear Brethren:

Word has been wafted here that calls for a rebuttal. It is rumored that my departure from Tecumseh was occasioned by the meagre support the Friends gave me as their Pastor.

Now in order to free myself from the imposed guilt I incurred, in taking an active part to secure a successor as Pastor for the meeting, and to exonerate those whose liberality is called in question by this charge I wish to emphatically say that the statement is absolutely without foundation.

I left Tecumseh, as has ever been alleged, to engage in the Evangelistic work, and have ever since refused to bind myself as Pastor of any congregation. This being the sole reason for leaving those for whom I felt the strongest attachment, and whose liberality in supporting the work of the Lord has ever challenged my grateful appreciation, it is not a little surprising that such an untruth be fabricated. And if the statement has gained currency in your midst, I wish this line from me to be its effectual refutation.

Trusting that God' blessing will ever continue to rest upon your efforts in doing good, I remain in the love of Christ and souls,

Very truly yours.

OBITUARY.

The deceased, Emma Price, who peacefully folded her arms and closed her eyes in death Monday evening, June 25, 1894, at 9 o'clock, to rest, as we believe, in hope of immortality and eternal life, as she expressed to a dear friend that morning, "I will soon be better off than you." Sister Emma was in the 39th year of her age and a native of Ridgeway, Michigan. She was the fourth child and third daughter of the late John DuBois. Her mother died when Emma was but a child. This young mother became united in marriage with Ebenezer Price on March 26, 1878, and made a public profession of the christian religion in 1877 and united at once with the First Christian Church of Ridgeway, retaining a steadfast hope and faith in Christ until death. She leaves a companion and a son and daughter with their father to mourn a mother's loss. She leaves a daughter, Lydia, aged 13 years, and a son, George, aged 11 years; also three brothers and two sisters to mourn over one who has gone to be with Jesus. She leaves a large circle of friends who sympathize with the bereaved ones. The funeral services were held on Wednesday, June 27th, conducted by the Eastern Star Lodge and the remains interred in the Tecumseh cemetery.

Scribner's Magazine for August is a Fiction Number, as has been the custom for seven years. It contains six complete short stories, by H. C. Bunner, T. R. Sullivan, William H. Shelton, W. Grafly Hewitt, Octave Uzanne, and Harrison Robertson, the author of one of the most famous stories ever published in Scribner's, "How the Derby was Won." One more victory for the High School Boys. This time it was won over the celebrated Ypsilanti team which has most appropriately named itself "Atlantis." The game opened with Atlantis at bat. They fanned the air three times and went to the field. The first ball thrown by their pitcher was made a two bagger of, and the innings closed with 4 scores to Tecumseh's credit. Then Ypsilanti changed pitchers, hopeing to fool our boys by frequent changes and 3 scores rolled in this time. Again they changed pitchers but it was no use. They might have put every player they had in the box and the result would have been the same, or perhaps a little better for our team. Score stood at the end 16 to 5, and the world famed "Atlantis" were worsted. Ra, Ra, Sis boom ba, Tecumseh High School Ha, ha, ha.

Died in this village July 21st., Harriet E. Carpenter, aged 69 years. The deceased was born in Goshen, Orange Co., N. Y., Oct. 27th., 1824, where she resided until 1876. In that year, in company with her sister, Mary, she came to Tecumseh to make her home with her sister, Mrs. H. C. Conkling, with whom she resided until her death. The funeral obsequies were held on Tuesday, the 24th., at three o'clock p. m., at the residence of Henry C. Conkling, in this village, Rev. C. M. Brown officiating, where a large concourse of old friends gathered to pay their last tribute of respect to the departed.

The T. H. S. club went to Blissfield last Thursday and were defeated by the latter club by a score of 19 to 20. The principal feature of the game was the batting which was extraordinarily heavy on both sides. Harris, the T. H. S. pitcher, played a listless game and undoubtedly saved his arm for last Saturday's game at Clinton. The following is some of the heavy batting: Wilson, 2 two baggers; Whelan, 3 single and 1 two bagger; Spalding, 3 two baggers; Owens, 4 single and a two bagger. Twice the score was a tie and once the T. H. S. boys were 7 scores in the lead. There were some errors made in fielding the ball but this did not necessitate the losing of the game. Had Harris taken an interest in the game and done one-half as well as he might the Blissfields would not have been in it. Only three men fanned out and the T. H. S. club never did better at batting and base stealing. Another game will undoubtedly be arranged between these clubs soon.

The Committee, who had charge of the Eastern Star Excursion, say that the treatment they received from Beardsell was anything but gentlemanly, that he misrepresented things and acted like a crank, and that they hope in the future that pic nic parties will patronize Manitou Beach, which is conducted by gentlemen like J. H. Graham and A. B. Farmer, who did every thing in their power for the enjoyment of the Stars' guests yesterday.

The residence of John A. Heck on West Chicago street was the scene of a pleasant social event on Tuesday evening, in which Mr. William Cutting and Miss Bertha Best were the parties chiefly interested. A company of about thirty-five guests, mostly relatives and intimate friends, assembled to witness the marriage of the young couple and offer their good wishes. The nuptial knot was tied at eight o'clock by Rev. Chas. M. Brown in a few words fitly chosen. A wedding supper followed and the remainder of the evening was happily passed in social chat and gaiety. The couple received a fine array of wedding gifts, both useful and ornamental in character. The bride, who is a niece of Mrs. Heck, has made her home here for the past four years. The groom was brought up in Clinton and always lived there until within the past year or two. Both have lots of friends who will extend their warmest congratulations. The happy pair left here Wednesday morning for Cleveland, Ohio, where they expect to make their future home.

GIVEN UP.

Michigan's Around the World Expedition Abandoned.

The Tourists Decide to Return to South Haven with the Schooner Wrenn—Dr. Ransom, Their Leader, Has Mysteriously Disappeared.

FOUL PLAY SUSPECTED.

SOUTH HAVEN, July 29.—The mystery of the disappearance of Dr. W. C. Ransom, after many days' search, is as great as ever, and it is now proposed to offer $500 reward for him, dead or alive. The Around the World company on board the schooner George L. Wrenn, now in Detroit, held a meeting and elected L. W. Loomis, one of the company from Ohio, as director of navigation in the place of Dr.

DR. W. C. RANSOM.

Ransom and will shortly bring the boat back to South Haven for consultation with others of the company here and to await further developments for future action.

No trace of the doctor has been found since he cashed the $500 check at a Chicago bank three weeks ago, and they believe he has been murdered and robbed. When the Wrenn returns to South Haven the directors will decide what to do. The trip will be abandoned for the present, at least.

"The fact that Dr. Ransom had $500 of the company's money," said Mr. Loomis, "signifies nothing in connection with his disappearance. He is perfectly honorable and responsible and this trip has been his hobby for years. Nothing short of death or mental derangement could have dissuaded him from making the voyage. He is 65 years of age and his disappearance is a serious drawback to the expedition, inasmuch as he was the head and leading spirit and has made a similar voyage before, possessing the experience which would be of incalculable value to the company."

BAD FOR FRUIT.

The Long Dry Spell Has a Damaging Effect on Apples.

GRAND RAPIDS, July 28.—Kent county farmers say that the apple crop is being seriously affected by the continued dry weather. They report the fruit, especially the fall varieties, as dropping badly, and as there was none too much of it on the trees every apple that drops now is a loss. Two weeks ago the orchards were reported as in fine condition. The fall fruit promised to be of excellent quality and the yield nearly up to an average crop. Now in the southern and eastern part of the county and also in Allegan and Ionia counties not more than half a crop is expected, and in some orchards it will be no better than last year unless we have heavy rains soon. While the fall apples suffer most from the drought, winter varieties are also affected and the harvest apples are being prematurely ripened. The eastern and northern parts of the lower peninsula have had frequent rains in the past two weeks and crops of all kinds are in better condition than in the southwestern section.

Death of Chauncey W. Wisner.

SAGINAW, July 28.—Chauncey W. Wisner, one of the most prominent democrats in Michigan, and probably the best stump speaker the state has produced in a quarter of a century, died Friday morning, aged 60 years, of diabetis. Mr. Wisner was three times state senator, had been a democratic candidate for congress and was at present a member of the lower house of the legislature. He was also mayor of East Saginaw two terms.

Struck a Coal Mine.

SAGINAW, July 28.—J. W. Howry, the well-known lumberman, struck a vein of coal on his farm 5 miles east of the city, at a depth of 120 feet, while sinking a well. Mr. Howry has not yet decided as to the developing of the vein, but the coal indications about Saginaw convince experts that mines can be put in operation that will not only bring a return to the proprietors, but be the means of bringing a great many manufacturing institutions to the city.

Steamer Madagascar Launched.

BAY CITY, July 29.—The steamer Madagascar, the sixty-fourth vessel built by Capt. James Davidson, was launched Saturday afternoon. This closes all the work Capt. Davidson now has on hand, although he may build one or two boats during the winter. The Madagascar is 257 feet long, 37 feet beam and 14 feet depth of hold, and will cost about $100,000. She is built primarily for the lumber trade and will carry 1,300,000 feet.

BOATING AT DETROIT.

Races at the Annual Regatta of the N. A. R. A.

DETROIT, July 28.—The twenty-sixth annual regatta of the Northwestern Amateur Rowing association was commenced with the junior events on the Detroit boat club's course off the north shore of Belle Isle Friday afternoon, the weather was ideal. The course is straight, three-quarters of a mile and return.

In the junior four-oar only the Ecorse club, of Ecorse, and the Mutual, of Detroit, participated. The Ecorse club led to the turn, rowing forty-four to the minute, their opponents two strokes slower. Encorse won by a length. Time, 9:27.

C. E. A. Goldman, Argonaut club, Toronto; C. S. Isham, Jr., Detroit club; C. H. Gould, Detroit club, participated in the single canoe race. Goldman won in 4:44, with Gould second in 4:56. Isham did not finish.

In the junior double sculls the Grand Rapids and Toronto clubs started off evenly, Toronto with a seventeen stroke which was increased to eighteen and a half at the half mile. Toronto won by four lengths in 11:04, Grand Rapids crossing the line twenty-three seconds later.

The junior pair event was contested by the Grand Rapids club and the Mutuals, of Detroit. After making the turn the sheils, which were almost abreast, fouled, and the crews stopped to row for about half a minute. When they straightened away again Grand Rapids took the lead, winning by eight lengths in 11:44 2-5. A claim of foul was not allowed.

Charles L. Van Damme, Nautilus club, Detroit; W. D. West, Mutuals, Detroit; and P. J. Mulqueen, of the Tofontos, were the starters in the junior single sculls. Van Damme came over the line about 10 lengths ahead of West in 10:51¾.

The Delawares of Chicago, Detroit crews No. 1 and No. 2, and the Ecorse crew were in the four-oar gig race. The crews were placed as follows: Detroit No. 2, Detroit No. 1, Ecorse and Delaware. The latter had the outside of the course, Delaware and Detroit got off almost together, Ecorse and No. 2 losing a couple of strokes. Delaware held its own and gained about half a length at the turn, but lost it and another one by No. 1 making the turn more quickly. The crews then let themselves out and came down the course in fine style, Delaware making only a slight gain. No. 1 crossed the line a scant length ahead of Delaware in 9:37. Delaware's time was 9:39. No. 2 was third, about ten lengths behind Delaware, and five lengths ahead of Ecorse.

The summaries in Saturday's races were as follows:

Senior double sculls—Argonaut of Toronto won; time, 10:22; Toronto No. 1 second.

Tandem canoes—Detroit, C. H. Gould and W. C. Noack, won; time, 5:32 3-5. Toronto, Paine and Goldman, second.

Senior pair oared shells—Argonaut, E. A. Thompson, bow, W. E. F. Paine, stroke, won; time 12:01 3-5. Grand Rapids, second.

Senior four-oared shells—Detroit, F. D. Standish, bow, E. E. Harvey, 2; E. E. Clark, 3; F. A. Lyon, stroke, won; time, 9:56 2-5. Toronto, second.

Senior single sculls—E. A. Thompson, Argonaut of Toronto, won; time, 11:13:25. Charles Van Damme, Nautilus, Detroit, second.

The association reelected President Charles Catlin, of Chicago; vice president, W. A. Littlejohn, of Toronto, and secretary and treasurer, William C. Jupp, of Detroit. The executive board was reelected.

1000 Meals for Five Cents

Each person eats on the average over 1,000 meals per year. To properly flavor these would require say 17 cents worth of Diamond Crystal Salt. This is a trifle greater outlay than if the other kinds were used, but 5 cents would more than cover the difference, and pay for the luxury of having instead of the other kinds. But the important thing about it is the finer flavor your food will have and the greater protection your health will receive when you use the salt that's all salt. Ask your Grocer for DIAMOND CRYSTAL. If he has not got it, write to us. The Maccabees will hold a picnic at Wampler's Lake on Saturday, August 11th. All surrounding tents have been invited and they will doubtless turn out a good crowd.

A. F. Kishpaugh returned from a trip to Washington last Tuesday. He has got his commission and is liable to receive orders any day to take possession of the postoffice.

The Maccabees are fitting up the front room over Lancaster's clothing store, with a new carpet, chairs, etc., and design using it in connection with their lodge quarters as a reception room.

The Clinton team crossed bats with the Jackson boys last Saturday afternoon on the home grounds. The game was not very interesting as it was too one-sided, the score standing 20 to 9 in Clinton's favor.

C. D. Keyes has been at Frank Rector's the past week, assisting in the care of Mr. Rector, who is gradually failing. Charley is an excellent attendant upon the sick and his services are in frequent demand.

One of the best roads over one of the worst roadbeds in the county was made last week Tuesday and Wednesday between Post's and Bostedor's on the turnpike. There were 22 teams and 40 men at work at one time on Tuesday.

Clinton people have become much interested in Misses Louie Davison and Birdie Vosburg, of Detroit, nieces of Mrs. Rose. These young ladies have formed a club with Miss Minnie Welz, a fine contralto, which is called "The Artist's Trio" and they intend giving public concerts during the coming season. It will make a fine musical troupe and we bespeak for them success.

The failure of C. S. Burroughs to return home last week was quite a disappointment to his family, but Uncle Sam's orders must be obeyed. A private letter received since states the reason in full: "Leave of absence was not granted by the department, and this board has been transferred to Blackburn, Okla. Blackburn is 16 miles east of Pawnee, the county seat, is beautifully located on the Arkansas river, on the opposite side of which is the Osage country. We will be 50 miles from a railroad, and in a country unsurpassed for hunting and fishing."

M. A. C. Examination.

An examination of candidates for admission to the Michigan Agricultural College will be held in connection with the teachers' examination, August 2d, at Adrian. The subjects embraced in the examination are Arithmetic, Geography, Grammar, U. S. History, Reading, Writing and Spelling.

The authorities at the Colleges have arranged this examination as an accommodation to the candidate, in order to save him the expense of a trip to the College, in case he could not pass. A fee of one dollar will be charged those taking the examination.

OUR COMBINATION SCHEME.

We take pleasure in presenting to our patrons this week a new combination coupon scheme, which we believe will be of interest to all classes of readers. Under this arrangement we have something for both the older and younger members of the family, something for both father and mother and children.

THE WORLD'S FAIR PORTFOLIO.

This series, already begun and which has now reached No. 15, will be continued each week until its completion. People who are taking it have no cause to regret it, for it has no superior at the price asked, when both illustrations and descriptive matter are considered. No. 16 will be ready for distribution to-morrow.

THE MIDWAY WORLD.

This will be confined wholly to views of the Midway. It will be issued in twelve parts, containing 20 illustrations each, making 240 in all, and each part will be furnished for Ten Cents when accompanied by a coupon. It is one of the best souvenirs of the great exposition yet published, and will doubtless have an immense sale. No other publishing house has such a novel collection. The plates are genuine half-tones, printed on fine enamelled paper. Each plate is accompanied with a brief description. People who are taking any series of World's Fair pictures should supplement them with the Midway World. No 2 is now ready for distribution.

DEMOREST'S PATTERNS.

Here is something for the ladies. Demorest's cut paper patterns are acknowledged to be the best made. They are sold at 20 to 50 cents each, averaging about 40 cents. Any lady sending us Ten Cents, to simply pay the expense of mailing and handling, with one coupon, will receive one of these patterns free. Any othea pattern that has been or may be published will be sent if requested.

COIN'S HAND BOOK.

This is a pamphlet of fifty pages containing statistics on gold and silver and a treatise on the elementary principles of money. It should be read by every person who wishes to post himself on the money question. One coupon and Ten Cents will buy a copy of this pamphlet. Hand in your dimes and coupons and take your choice from this list.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Phillip Streng is able to be out again.

Just step into Lee's and take a guess on those beans.

Nearly all our citizens attended the camp meeting last Sunday.

Miss Ellen Osterhout, of Tecumseh, is at home sick with the mumps.

Several of our citizens left yesterday for a few days outing at Wampler's Lake.

M. D. Britton has returned home from Crocker, Ind., where he has been employed by the Wabash R. R. as agent.

The joint Sunday school picnic held in Lowe's woods was a perfect success in every respect, and all present enjoyed a good time.

The ice cream social held at the home of Mr. James Haight last Thursday night was not very well attended, the weather being so cold. The receipts were about $8.00.

John Beasley's horse got tired playing with Ethel, the other day, and started for Britton's corn field, running over Ethel and breaking the buggy. After a hard chase Benny succeeded in getting the rig back.

While Wm. Britton was moving some household goods for M. D. Britton last Monday, from a car, the horses became frightened and concluded not to stay; so after cavorting around the stores a few times and throwing the goods out, they were caught. The damages were quite heavy as nearly everything was broken.

The Adrian Light Guard ball team was here last Saturday, played six innings and retired from the field, saying they had to catch the train for home. The score stood 9 to 6 in favor of Adrian, but their leaving the grounds the umpire gave the game to Britton, 9 to 0. They are all a set of "bluffers" and by bluffs is the only way they can win a game. Our grounds are fifteen rods from the depot and they took one hour and ten minutes to get there. Mr. Browne, their manager, was heard to say: "We are ahead now and had better go, for we don't want to get beaten by a town of this size." Below is the score by innings:

Britton,	3	1	1	0	0	1	—6

Batteries—Lowe and Easlick; Yaik and Wilson. Struck out—by Easlick, 5; by Wilson, 4. Umpire—Muldany.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

Miss Bernice Shugars, of Onsted, is the guest of Miss Winnie Peters.

The Misses Morden, of Adrian, are spending a few days with Miss Bertha Fisk.

Miss Maggie Merrill, of Jackson, is paying a visit to her aunt, Mrs. Lilly Pentecost.

Tramps have been utilizing the sidetracked cars at Sand Lake crossing lately, for lack of a better lodging.

Miss Fannie Warner goes to Adrian for a few weeks' stay with a friend. She will be greatly missed in church and Sunday-school work as well as in society.

While Miss Ida Buck was out driving recently her horse took fright at a passing bicycle and ran into the ditch and came near capsizing the carriage. The harness was broken but no other ill effects except a severe fright to the young lady resulted from the accident.

On Tuesday evening, August 14th., there will be a social at Pentecost Hall for the purpose of raising money to pay Mr. Elijah Buck for the use of his hall for religious and social purposes. Tea and coffee will be served by the ladies, so come everybody and bring well filled baskets to help provide the feast and give Mr. Buck a rousing benefit. Good music in attendance. Supper served from 6 to 9 p. m. Bill 10 cents.

As a steam thresher drove onto the premises of Mr. Ed. Fisk last Saturday, a team which Mr. Fisk was driving were frightened at the engine, became unmanagable and ran away, finally colliding with a fence and throwing out the driver; they then broke loose from the wagon and ran till the harness was nearly torn off them. Mr. Fisk sustained severe but not dangerous injuries, and the team were not injured by their escapade.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Ogden, who have been making a visit to Mr. Ogden's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Daniels, received by telegraph, Monday night, the shocking news that their home in Chicago burned, with a portion of its contents, early Monday morning. The young couple have the hearty sympathy of hosts of friends in their misfortune. They started at once for Chicago, taking the evening train west.

Where Wamplers' crystal wavelets break
With cool refreshing sound,
Within an ample spider's web
This legend queer was found:

"Come walk into my parlor, said the spider to the fly
'Tis the prettiest little parlor that you ever did espy."
The way into my parlor is by dusty, sun-baked roads,
But I want you silly flies to come in big and thirsty loads.
A colored man, to please you, in his big balloon shall fly,
And, if his parachute don't work, may break his neck and die.
But the sight won't cost a cent you know, so come both maid and man,
And eat and drink and smoke and stare as busy as you can.
Although a wise Creator bade us keep his holy day,
The spider does not care a fig if he only makes it pay.

Holloway was well represented at the Star picnic at Devils Lake, Aug. 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyons, of Traverse City, were here over Sunday, visiting their daughter, Mrs. Joe Hartman.

The ice cream social held by the Y. P. S. C. E. on Macham's lawn last Thursday evening netted them about $9.25.

A large percentage of the Holloway people have attended the camp meeting. The boys owning bicycles in this vicinity all went on their wheels Sunday.

A week ago Wednesday, while trying to repair a tambourine, Miss Blanche Macham ran the blade of the knife she was using into the center of the palm of her hand, cutting through and all but puncturing the skin on the back of her hand. The wound is healing nicely.

Last Thursday Guern Kelley received a painful wound on the little finger of the right hand, while engaged in feeding the seperator, threshing at Geo. Lester's; the band cutter drew the knife across the middle joint of his finger, cutting it to the bone. Dr. Nixon dressed the wound and the patient will be able to play ball again soon.

Last Monday while en route to the Free Methodist camp meeting, the horse driven by Mrs. Joe Bagley became frightened at a man cultivating corn near the roadside in the vicinity of the camp ground, and jumped, throwing the occupants of the rig, Mrs. Bagley, Mrs. Wm. Ball and Charlie Atwell, into the ditch. How much damage was done we are unable to learn.

Abner Underwood, a former resident of Adrian, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Abraham Whitbeck, on Tuesday, July 31st. Mr. Underwood was born in Saratoga county, N. Y., in 1819. He moved to Petersburg in 1840, to Adrian in 1850 and to Chicago in 1876. He was a railroad bridge builder and followed this business until within five or six years, when his health failed; he came here to his daughter's about six weeks ago. The funeral was held at the Friends church at Raisin Center, Thursday, Aug. 2nd., at 10 a. m. The body was interred at Oakwood cemetery.

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia; land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

A DAY IN MACON.

We took a business trip a couple of half days recently through the northern part of Clinton township and into Macon, going across the line into Bridgewater.

The route along the "old Saline road" from Tecumseh to Pennington's Corners leads by many fine farms, some of the most productive ones in this section of the county. We noticed a disposition to "clean up" the premises and keep the highway in good condition opposite most farms, which is a great improvement over the prevailing tendency a few years ago. The whole country however is suffering just now from the excessive drought, and everything presents a dusty and dried up appearance. The farmers are beginning to thresh their wheat, and it is turning a very good yield, of good quality, much above the average on many farms. If wheat brought a decent price the farmers would feel very good natured now.

Macon village is developing into quite a business center. Milan Sage's tile works are running with a full set of hands, notwithstanding the dull times, and he is working up an immense trade in that direction. The new postmaster, Mr. Harrington, is settling into his chair very nicely, which seems to fit him exactly. He keeps a small stock of groceries also. W. P. Cotton still holds forth at the old stand and his trade is so well established that he feels no uneasiness about the future. He is doing quite a business at manufacturing cigars.

B. S. Scudder's establishment deserves more than a passing mention. The new addition to his store almost doubles its capacity and gives him plenty of room to branch out. In the new store he keeps his stock of dry goods and furnishings, shoes, and hats and caps. The second floor of this part is used for crockery, boots and oil cloth. The old store is used for groceries, hardware, drugs and general merchandise, such as flour, salt, oils etc, which the farmers need. In the second story of the old part is located his cigar factory No. 293, which is growing into a large and paying industry. The whole store is kept in a neat and tidy condition so that ladies can feel at home when they go there to trade. Mr. Scudder is evidently meeting with success and he deserves it too.

We happened around at Robert McHenney's place just as the family were sitting down for supper, and the number at the table was increased by one. Mr. Mc Henney, or Justice Mc Henney, as he is generally called, has a splendid farm, one of the best in Bridgewater, containing 255 acres, and he also owns eighty acres across the line in Clinton. He has a fine suite of barns, with excellent water accomodations and he carries a large amount of stock. He has an orchard of pears, plums and peaches which is just coming into bearing, and also quite a vineyard which will turn a good crop this fall. Our short stay there was very agreeably spent, and the ride home in the "cool of the evening" was a pleasant sequel to a profitable day's trip.

TO CLEANSE THE SYSTEM

Effectually yet gently, when costive or bilious, or when the blood is impure or sluggish, to permanently cure habitual constipation, to awaken the kidneys and liver to a healthy activity, without irritating or weakening them, to dispel headaches, colds or fevers, use Syrup of Figs.

THE MICHIGAN FARMER.

Some Reasons Why It Should Be in the Family of Every Farmer in Michigan.

It is the recognized State agricultural organ. It contains matter written by educated successful agriculturists, who are practical farmers, live stock breeders, horticulturists and dairymen of this State. It gives all the agricultural live stock, dairy and horticultural news of this State. It publishes full and reliable markets from all important points where Michigan farmers sell products. It reaches every post-office in the State within twelve hours after it is printed. Its editors and correspondents are Michigan men, thoroughly in earnest in their desire to advance, protect and improve the agricultural interests of this State. It is filled with original paid for matter written expressly for it. It is first-class in every particular, its publishers sparing no expense to make it the equal of any agricultural paper of America. It admits no immoral, snide or swindling advertisements. It is a weekly of 52 issues a year—64 columns in each issue—and is furnished at the lowest possible price that such a paper can be published at; and last and greatest—Because it is many times more valuable and instructive to the agriculturists of Michigan than any agricultural paper published outside of the State.

TECUMSEH, MICH., AUG. 9, 1894.

Thinking men are becoming more and more convinced that the only sure and practicable method of reforming the U. S. Senate is to abolish it.

The sunny south is winning new friends every day, and chief among the agencies in that good missionary work is the Georgia watermelon.

The Wilson tariff bill was pretty roughly handled in the Senate, but present indications are that it will come out of the scrimmage all right yet.

The new President of France wears a turn down collar. The present office holders are quaking in their boots for fear he may apply the same principle to them.

In the contest now raging between "Senatorial courtesy" and Presidential honesty, the people are arraying themselves in a solid phalanx on the President's side.

President Cleveland suppresses the big strike by a bold move at the right time. Now, if he could only find some way to suppress Congress, he could be doing the public a great service.

At the political barbecue held last week at Webberville, Spencer O. Fisher made a ten strike. He has a frank, free and easy style of address that takes with the people. The manner of his election are decidedly encouraging.

Among the many good lines which Spencer O. Fisher made in his Webberville speech was this one: "Vote for Fisher and free silver; vote for Fisher and tariff reform; vote for Fisher and an income tax." This is a good enough platform for any man to stand on.

The Webberville barbecue last week ought to be adopted as a precedent in future political meetings during the campaign. We confess that we have always admired the Southern plans of joint political meetings, in which opposing candidates address the people from the same platform.

A unique political meeting was held at Webberville one day last week. An immense barbecue was gotten up and speeches were made by prominent men of all parties, among them being Spencer O. Fisher and Dr. A. W. Nichols, Democrat and Populist candidates for Governor, and Mayor Pingree, of Detroit.

The whole business of the country is waiting for Congress to dispose of the tariff question. There will be no diffusion of capital in our industrial enterprises until the tariff policy of the government shall have been settled by Congress; and there can be no revival of industry, commerce or trade until the new tariff bill shall have become a law. This is the situation, gentlemen. Then hurry up the tariff bill.

'Dr. Nichols spoke of the income tax. I am frank to say I am in favor of it. I insisted at Grand Rapids that it be made a part of our platform. Some of the men in our party, the newspapers and corporations, wanted to know what in the world this man Fisher was thinking about. I'll tell you what I was thinking about. I wanted the corporate wealth of the nation to pay its share of taxation.—Spencer O. Fisher in his Webberville speech.

Here is another spicy bit from Spencer O. Fisher's Webberville speech. Dr. Nichols spoke of the days of slavery. Black slavery is gone, but now we have a worse kind through legislation in the interests of the corporations. Because Pingree would not bow the yoke of those corporations he was turned down in the Republican convention. There can be little doubt that if he promised to bow to the corporations, he would have been given the nomination."

The Democrats of the House claim to have positive information that President Cleveland is more determined than ever to insist on free raw materials, particularly coal and iron. He has heard from municipalities, county conventions, congressional conventions and business men throughout the country, by mail and by wire, and over ninety-five per cent. of the communications which have reached the White House are commendatory of the position taken and the course pursued by him in his famous letter to Chairman Wilson.

The Democratic organizations in nearly every county in Maryland have publicly denounced Senator Gorman for his action on the tariff bill. But he smiles grimly and pursues the even tenor of his way. He seems determined to fulfill his obligations to the sugar trust and let the future take care of itself.

In a late interview with a reporter of the Brooklyn Eagle, Don M. Dickinson indulged in this emphatic language: "The time has now come for plain talk on the tariff situation." We have been fighting under the flag of the democracy in the United States Senate, men who are worse than traitors; they are highway robbers. But if they think the faithful Democrats of the House are going to yield to them and sacrifice their rights and convictions, they are mistaken."

The Free Press makes this good point: "It seems to shock some of our esteemed contemporaries that President Cleveland had no precedent for his letter to Congressman Wilson. But if they will overhaul their histories they will find that John Hancock and his associates had no precedent for the Declaration of Independence or Abraham Lincoln for the Emancipation Proclamation. Notwithstanding that drawback both these documents have been mighty approved by the civilized world."

The death of Austin Blair, the venerable war governor of Michigan, removes from this earthly sphere one of the heroic figures of the stormy civil war epoch. His service of four years as governor of Michigan during the period of the rebellion reflected the highest credit upon his ability and integrity, and his name will pass into history as one of Michigan's noblest sons. He was one of the founders of the Republican party and a prominent leader during its earlier and better days. The old war characters are rapidly passing away.

The Chicago Herald states the issue rather emphatically but very truthfully in these words: "Gentlemen,' says Senator Gorman to the House conferees on the tariff bill, 'there are two tariff measures—the McKinley law and the Senate bill. You can take your choice.' Could the national Democratic party submit any deeper humiliation than this? With an almost unprecedented majority in the nation, with the House overwhelmingly in favor of tariff reform, with the Senate Democratic except for traitors, the party is defied, the people are flouted, the country is held up by a cheap jack Baltimore politician with the mental capacity of a Berkshire hog and the moral instincts of a crow. Degradation could not be more complete."

At the fag end of the session the "jobs" always begin to show up, as the confusion attending the closing days is favorable to their slipping through. The Mahone "job" for the purchase of an unsuitable site for a new government printing office at an exorbitant price is old enough to have died long ago, and has been exposed so often that everybody in Washington knows its character. Still, it succeeded in getting through the Senate last week as an amendment to the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, and if the House will be as accommodating Gen. Mahone will soon be a goodly sum ahead of Uncle Sam, unless President Cleveland should exercise the veto power, which isn't probable owing to the number and importance of the other appropriations carried by the bill.

The U. S. strike commission, which met in Washington this week and decided to begin its investigation at Chicago on the 15th inst., has been sharply criticised for the tone of the preamble and resolution it adopted and gave to the press. It is charged that the resolution indicates that the members of the commission expect to see down in the government building at Chicago and have all the facts concerning the strikes brought in to them. Perhaps it will be best to wait and see what the commission does before beginning to criticize it. Because it has asked for information, either in the shape of written or oral evidence, is not a certain indication that it intends to neglect its opportunity to hunt up evidence and facts that for any cause may not be volunteered.

You can guess as well as I the good it may do in a day, a week, a month, or it may continue to the end of the Fifty-third Congress. No man is in a position to predict with any degree of certainty what will be done." Such was the answer of a Democratic member of the conference committee to an inquiry for information as to what was the probable outcome of the second conference on the tariff bill. Every day brings its fresh batch of rumors, which are mostly started for the purpose of trying to influence the result. This is particularly true of the publications in the local and New York dailies which are widely read in Congress. The editors of the New York papers have become notorious by reason of their using the Washington dispatches to their papers to influence legislation, regardless of foundation for statements made therein, and it is equally notorious that they sometimes succeed.

CALL THE ROLL.

The Senatorial highwaymen are hearing from the people in a way that must trouble them. It is no easy task to play a confidence game such as that the "conservative combine have undertaken without raising a whirlwind.

Even in the home of Mr Gorman the storm of disapproval is swelling fast to the fury of a cyclone. Maryland Democrats as a rule are of a sturdy, old-fashioned type and entertain strong convictions regarding the great foundation principles of their party. Democrats of this kind do not barter their democracy to secure protection for a few tariff barons and trust lords. Hence Maryland's senior Senator and his pliant colleague are not going to have the chance of assisting in such a betrayal of trust without paying the price of their treachery.

So in Ohio also. Mr. Brice is not beyond the reach of the people. The Democracy of Ohio may for a time be balked and hindered in the effort to voice its condemnation, but the day of reckoning cannot be put off forever. In the fullness of time there will come such a declaration from the Democrats of Ohio as will make it plain enough to the world that there, as in every other state of the union, democratic opinion holds with President Cleveland that the Senate amendments to the Wilson bill mean nothing less than party perfidy and party dishonor.

The endeavor to make it seem otherwise has happily failed. This encourages the Democrats of the House to stand firm in their determination to defeat the Senatorial conspiracy. The country is with them, for on this issue many Republicans are good Democrats, and there is universal hope that the little cabal of Senators who have forced the Democratic majority of the Senate into so embarrassing a position may yet be compelled to come into the open and let their votes go on record upon every undemocratic amendment. Surely there is no obligation of honor which can force such Democrats as Senators Vest and Jones, who are known everywhere as earnest and devoted friends of tariff reform to shield the "conservatives" from public view. The compromises by which the bill was got out of the Senate were wise and proper, because they were the necessities of the situation. Now that the bill has gone through the Senate it is in a different situation. Let there be an open vote on sugar, and coal, and iron, if there is a way to get it. Good Democrats want to know absolutely where every Senator stands, and nothing can give that knowledge authoritatively except a vote in open session of the Senate. Call the roll.—St. Louis Republic.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 95 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Farmers' Home Reading Club.

Two letters were received last week by the Farm and Dairy editor, asking for particulars regarding the F. H. R. C. This is a home course of reading in agriculture, horticulture, dairying, etc., on the Chautauqua plan. It is a grand thing for our farmers, their wives, sons, daughters and the "hired man." Write Prof. F. B. Mumford, Sec'y., Agricultural College, Mich. We are reading this course and could not be hired to drop it. We expect to keep at it (in spite of the tariff, or the exit of silver) until we "graduate." Too much cannot be said in favor of this course for our young farmers who have had no opportunity to pursue a course of study at the Agricultural College. In these days it is almost criminal to live in ignorance. The well-informed, educated, practical, hard working business farmer is the one who ought to make the most money, and he generally does. He who wills may win.—Michigan Farmer.

AS USUAL.

You shouldn't have stood in the doorway, dear,
Looking, lingering so,
With a whisper I wasn't intended to hear
Of how you hated to go.
If you really hated to hasten away,
Why didn't you stay?

You shouldn't have taken my eyes in your eyes,
Thrilling me through and through,
Nor should you have shaken my soul with surprise
Unless you wanted me too!
Your eyes of blue lies, my longing believed,
Dear, was I deceived?

MAGGIE'S GHOST.

The late Creed Haymond, chief counsel of the Southern Pacific, could hardly be called a dabbler in the occult or a believer in things supernatural, and yet, as his intimate friends will remember, he did believe, implicitly that he had seen one ghost.

The story—for there was a romance, and a tragic one, connected with this ghost—was not one that the lawyer cared to tell, except to those who enjoyed his personal confidence. He did not like to be charged with superstitious fancies, nor did he appreciate attempts to ridicule him out of his faith in the evidence of his own keen eyes. To his death he maintained firmly that it had been his fortune to meet face to face the spirit of one who had passed from life.

It was early in the fifties when Haymond, then a stranger in California, became an express rider. He used to make regular trips into the mountains, visiting the camps at stated intervals, carrying in his big saddlebags letters, papers and such small articles as could be transported in this way.

On one of his first trips away up in the Sierra he came to an almost deserted camp, where a rich strike had been made and the pocket quickly exhausted. Only one family had remained—that of a man named Rodden. In a small, comfortable house close against the wall of rock which rose behind the camp a light was burning as Haymond rode into the deserted place. A knock at the door brought forth the occupant. To Haymond's request for lodgings the man growled a surly response and reluctantly let him in.

The express rider was surprised to see sitting beside the little table, on which stood the lamp, a young and pretty woman. He was surprised to recognize in her a schoolmate whom he had supposed to be still safe in her eastern home. After their greetings had been said Haymond explained to the ungracious husband how he had known Mrs. Rodden back east. Rodden grunted some response, but Haymond and the woman were too busy asking and answering questions to heed his manner. The man seemed relieved by Haymond's departure the next day. He told the express rider to call whenever he was passing over the trail, and the woman urged him to come again and stop for the night, that they might talk about people and things at home.

It was more than a month before he again came to the deserted camp, and this time, reaching it at an earlier hour, he found the woman alone, her husband having not yet returned from his work. Haymond learned from her that she had married Rodden against the wishes of her family and had come to the mines with him without letting her parents know where she had gone. She said little about her life in the mountains, but that little showed that it had not been a happy one. They had come to the camp with a number of others, but some quarrel had arisen between her husband and the rest of the miners, so when they moved on he had remained behind, and by hard work was making fairly good pay in the deserted diggings. She dreaded the loneliness of the place; but, with a patient sigh, said she hoped before another winter her husband might be willing to move on to some camp where they would have company.

Haymond made two trips more, calling each time at the cabin where his schoolmate lived. When leaving the second time, he told them that one trip more would be all he could make before the snow blocked the trail. Two or three times Haymond had suggested to Rodden that he take his wife to some settlement before winter shut them in, but had received no answer. He did not feel at liberty to say more, so with the promise to visit them on his return in a few weeks he mounted his horse and rode down the narrow trail.

A few steps took him out of sight of the cabin. He heard a faint call, and looking back saw Mrs. Rodden running down the trail after him. She waved her hand for him to return, and he rode back.

"Will you do an errand for me while you are in the city?" he said.

Of course he consented, and she gave him her commission, and with a few parting words she ran up the trail, while he turned his horse again to descend. He looked back after his friend, and, to his surprise, saw Rodden rise from behind a bush near the trail. He thought the man had been hidden, watching his wife, but a reflection made the idea seem absurd—probably it was a mere coincidence. Even if Rodden had heard every word of the conversation it could only have spoiled Mrs. Rodden's little plot, which was nothing worse than a Christmas surprise for her husband.

Haymond was detained a week longer than he had expected, and when he started for the mountains again his friends told him he would never get through, but he persisted, and finally, after a long battle with the snowdrifts, he reached the last camp on his route, having lost a week on the way.

It was almost night and snow and wind were in riotous possession of the mountains when he found himself riding down the trail a mile or two above the camp where he was to pass the night with the Roddens.

Dusk came while he was still more than a mile from the cabin. He pressed on as fast as he dared, when suddenly his horse stopped short with a snort and stood quivering. Haymond could see nothing, and soothing the animal with hand and voice urged him on. There was still light sufficient to see around clearly enough to distinguish objects near the trail. Haymond thought as he started again that he saw something move across the trail a little way ahead. The horse went slowly forward, but with great reluctance, and when they reached an open spot where the light was sufficient to show objects for some distance he again stopped, trembling, and Haymond for a moment could not persuade him to start. At last the horse started forward with a bound, and as he did so Haymond saw Maggie Rodden on the trail, her hair hanging around her pale face, her hands stretched pleadingly toward him and an expression of mute agony upon her white face.

Reining up as quickly as possible, Haymond turned to speak to her, but she had vanished. He rode back and called her name, but there was no answer. He dismounted and looked for tracks at the spot where she must have left the trail, but found none.

Puzzled and annoyed, he mounted and rode as rapidly as possible to the Rodden cabin.

Hurriedly dismounting, Haymond called Rodden out and asked if he knew that his wife was wandering alone through the snow away up the mountain trail. Rodden was too much unnerved for a moment to reply. Then he managed to say that the express rider must have dreamed he saw her, as she had gone home, gone back east, more than a month before. Haymond stuck to his story, but at last he was obliged to conclude that his imagination had played him a trick. He couldn't help wondering, though, what had frightened the horse.

There was nothing to be done or said, for if Mrs. Rodden had gone home a month before certainly she could not have been roaming around in the snow, and as there was no other woman within miles of the camp he must have been mistaken. Rodden, though not at all hospitable in manner, got supper and allowed the express rider to stop for the night.

After supper Haymond opened his saddlebags, saying:

"Well, as Maggie is not here to take her package, and as it was intended for you, anyway, I suppose I'd better give it to you, and you can write her that her Christmas present got here a little ahead of time."

He tossed the package across to the man, who stared at it as if petrified. He stretched out his hand slowly and opened it with shaking fingers. The package contained a pair of thick, warm gloves, nothing more.

"When did Maggie send for these?" he asked.

"The last time I was here. You came near not getting them at all, for she had no chance to tell me to buy them while I was here and had to run after me to give the order."

"Was that all she ran after you for?"

"That was all."

Rodden settled back into his chair, with a groan, and hid his face in his hands.

Haymond sat silent for awhile, then, finding that the man did not intend to speak, he concluded that the best thing he could do was to go to bed. He was soon sleeping and knew nothing more until the morning light, shining through the uncurtained window, awoke him.

He dressed hurriedly and went out into the room where he had left his host. It was silent and deserted. A glance into the side room showed that the bed was unoccupied, and Haymond went out to look after his horse as well as to see if he could see any signs of his host. The horse had been stabled in a deserted cabin, and Haymond pushed open the door and then sprang back into the open air. Swinging by a halter from the rafters was Rodden's dead body.

Haymond cut the body down and laid it carefully in the bunk. He could do nothing for it, as the snow covered the frozen earth, so that one man could not hope to dig a grave. Hastily saddling his horse, he drove away, after searching the cabin in the faint hope that he might find some note of explanation, but in vain. Not a line of writing, new or old, could be found.

Haymond stopped at the first settlement and gave notice of the suicide at the deserted camp, but the snow was again falling, and no party could reach the place for weeks, if before spring.

When he reached the city, he wrote a letter to his parents asking them to break the sad news to the widowed Mrs. Rodden. Weeks passed before he received any answer, and then he was astounded to learn that Maggie had never returned home—in fact, had never even written since she left for California.

By this time spring had come, and he was about to make his first trip to the mountain. He reached the town where he had given notice of the suicide in time to learn what had been discovered at the lonely cabin.

A thorough search had been made, but nothing had been found to explain the suicide. Hidden away in one of the distant cabins they found Mrs. Rodden's clothing, her ornaments, even her workbasket, and, in fact, so far as they could judge, every article that had belonged to her.

Haymond told the men of the events of that last night and his interpretation of them, but he said nothing of his meeting with the wronged woman in the storm.

They argued that Rodden, jealous because his wife had gone down the trail after Haymond, in his anger had killed her. Filled with remorse when he learned how causeless the deed had been, he decided to die in the same way, as if the world knew of his crime.

That was Creed Haymond's one ghost story. Years passed before he could speak at all of that meeting in storm and darkness, but till the day of his death he believed that the spirit of murdered Mrs. Rodden had appeared to him on the trail.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. DEATH OF AUSTIN BLAIR.

E-xGov. Blair died at his residence in Jackson at an early hour Monday morning. Governor Blair was one of the ablest men this state has ever produced, and no man except perhaps Gen. Lewis Cass has done the state greater service. The funeral services were held yesterday afternoon and many prominent men throughout the state were in attendance. The following tribute to his memory is from the pen of Hon. Chas. S. May, who was Lieut-Governor during the war and was thereafter a very warm personal friend of Governor Blair's:

My personal acquaintance with Gov. Blair extends over a period of 36 years. I had seen him before, and heard him speak—the first time under the oaks at Jackson in that memorable convention where the Republican party was born and in which he took an active and prominent part. In the campaign of that year, and in the Fremont campaign that followed, he was one of the leading and most effective orators for the new cause, and in this way first attracted my attention and admiration. Two years later, when I first made his personal acquaintance, he was one of the recognized leaders of the new party and already talked of for governor. As I have said, I admired the man and readily attached myself to his political fortunes. The difference in our years—I was 28 and he was 41—made him my natural leader, and I was afterwards his follower, as much as it was my nature to be the follower of any man. These close political relations were deepened by personal friendship, and for 20 years, all through that active political period covering the war and reconstruction times, I was his political and personal friend and loyal supporter. With him I supported Greeley and Tilden, and only parted company with him in 1880, when he returned to the old party and supported Garfield while I supported Hancock, preferring to maintain my political independence. But this political separation did not disturb at all our personal relations, though in these later years I have seen less and less of him, as we have both been in large measure retired from public affairs. I mention these things to show my knowledge of the man and my opportunities to judge of his character.

It will not be expected of me to go into any biographical details in this article. Gov. Blair's history has long been written, and the press will now spread the facts of his life before the public. In a large sense he was fortunate in his political career, especially in its beginning. His public life opened in active, stirring times, when abilities such as he possessed were easily exchanged for public honors. With a college education and a good legal training, taking an early interest in politics, he came from the old and expiring whig party at a time when the country was all afame with excitement over the new and startling aggressions of the slave power. Joining his fortune with the new party of freedom, and throwing himself into the contest with all the ardor of his young manhood and his exceptional ability of speech, he found himself governor of Michigan at 40, at the opening of that stupendous conflict in which he was thus brought to the front and given the very rarest and highest opportunity for a great and public service and a lasting personal renown. When the great stress was passed and the splendid honor won, he sat in Congress for six years in that interesting and historic reconstruction period.

But it was as Michigan's war governor that he did his great work. During this period it was my fortune to be near him and to enjoy the fullest opportunity to observe him and witness his tireless activities. It is difficult for men, even the best business and executive men, who have come on the stage since the war, to comprehend the immense requirements and exactions of that exciting and momentous period. But when it is remembered that, in addition to all the ordinary and usual executive requirements of a great state, Michigan organized and put into the field an army of nearly 100,000 men—an army larger than that of Napoleon or Wellington at Waterloo—it will be seen that the labor devolved upon the governor as the state commander-in-chief in the inception, organization, officering and provisioning of all these regiments and batteries was something herculean and immense. Yes, and it was more than all this, for these were volunteer soldiers and the appeal had all the time to be made to the people to raise them. Gov. Blair was an orator, a popular leader, as well as a public official, and a large portion of his time was given to these popular appeals and efforts to stimulate the patriotism of the people. And then when the regiments were raised and organized and equipped came those last reviews, and those memorable and touching occasions when in the presence of sympathising crowds of citizens the governor would make those stirring and patriotic speeches, in which he was so happy, and give to the gallant boys his last fervent and patriotic godsends and good wishes as they departed for the field. Nor did he stop there in these extra and arduous duties. Time after time he visited the Michigan regiments at the front, cheering them with his words and looking to all the details of their personal comfort.

Gov. Blair was a good lawyer and especially a good advocate before a jury. He was well read in his profession, quick and ready of speech here as upon the stump, and with a little more of the aggressive, the tenacious and the combative in his nature, he would have been a most formidable antagonist for any man at the bar. I think that here his natural amiability stood somewhat in his way. He did not push positions and hold on to points before the court as strongly as I have seen great advocates do, but before the jury he was able and effective.

As a man, as I knew him in private, he was most admirable and as simple, as unostentatious and approachable as Abraham Lincoln. He was, indeed, even too modest and unpretentious for a man in his position. Once when he was governor some Michigan men found him stowed away, uncomplainingly, in the attic of a Kentucky hotel, where the clerk had put him, in ignorance of his public character, which he would never have found out from the governor. He probably had not come up to the hotel in a carriage or bus, but, according to his wont, from the sidewalk, carrying his grip and umbrella. In dress and habits and private intercourse with his fellow man, he was simplicity itself. He put on no false or ponderous dignity. He was in those years a frequent guest at my house, but his presence brought no oppressive sense of public importance with it, and he was always a favorite with my children.

Iced tea may be palatable, but it is certainly not wholesome, says an exchange. The better way to make it is to fill the glass partly full of cracked ice, then, make the tea double strength and pour it boiling hot over the ice; then, if you like, add your lemon and sugar. You get less tannic acid in this way than when the tea is allowed to stand and cool before using.

I will deliver the Detroit Sunday News; Tribune or Free Press at any residence in Tecumseh the same day they are printed hereafter at five cents per copy, $2.00 a year. A postal card to my address, giving location of residence, not later than Wednesday, will receive my attention the following Sunday. Business called us to Battle Creek last week and during our stay there we made our old friend Joe Wooden a short visit. He is nicely situated and has a good position in the Nichols [illegible] Co's factory. Will Wooden is also prospering, as he is now secretary of the some firm, at a lucrative salary. His wife is now rusticating at Traverse City, during the hay fever season, but Will was at home and we had a pleasant chat with him. Mr. Frank Kellogg, brother of Prof. L. M. Kellogg, was also at home, where we passed a few hours very agreeably.

The next meeting of the Woodstock Farmer's club will be held at Truax Landing, Devil's Lake, Saturday, Aug. 11th, beginning at 10 o'clock. The opening address will be made by editor A. J. Kempton, of the Addison Courier, who will expound the relations of Agriculture to Printer's pi, and explain the best methods of making butter from milk weed. Horace Wilcox is listed for a paper, and will probably read a Press editorial on exterminating bed ticks, or the value of bull beef as a free raw material in the dead beat industry. There will be vocal and instrumental music, recitations and probably a foot race between Loss Parsons and Hope Welch, may be arranged if Uncle Tom Alderdyce, of Cambridge, don't go up there and go to telling fish stories.—Adrian Press.

The committee of the W. R. C. appointed to attend to the raising of flags at the school houses were kindly given an opportunity to appear before the Teachers' Normal, by Professor Kellogg. Remarks were made by Mrs. A. S. Hanley of the originator of the salute and several items of interest were read from the National Tribune of the work over the land, from the Pine Tree state to the Golden Gate, from Alaska to the blue gulf's shore. Mrs. A. B. Smith read the form of salute as given by Col. Geo. T. Balch. This committee desires every teacher in Lenawee county to have a flag raised at their school as soon as convenient, and to all who teach in Franklin, Clinton, Macon, Raisin and Tecumseh, please address us as to any information how to proceed. We propose to assist you to teach patriotism to the rising generation, from whence comes our lawmakers, our farmers, our merchants, our mechanics and last, but not least, our ministers, who claim protection while they preach the unsearchable riches of Christ.

AUSTIN BLAIR DEAD.

Michigan's Famous War Governor Expires at Jackson.

A Victim to Uremic Poisoning—He Was One of the Founders of the Republican Party—His Career in the Service of His State.

PASSED AWAY.

JACKSON, Aug. 6.—Ex-Gov. Blair died at his home at 1:30 o'clock Monday morning. He was surrounded by the members of his family. Death was caused by uremic poisoning. He had been ill for several weeks, and his death had been expected. He was unconscious for the past three days. At his bedside were his venerable wife and four sons, George, Charles, Frederick and Austin, who have been unremitting in their care of him. Those who knew him in former years would be pained to see the grievous effects which the emaciation, caused by his long sickness, had wrought of late in his features. He bequeaths to his family only an honorable name, priceless, however, in its value.

With, the exception of Gov. Felch, who still survives, Gov. Blair was the oldest governor living. Of his successors Gov. Jerome, Gov. Begole, Gov. Alger and Gov. Luce are living, while Gov. Wiman died a month ago.

Gov. Blair retained his faculties to the last, and for four or five years past has been engaged in writing so much of the history of Michigan as he helped to make. Ill health prevented rapid progress, and exactly how the work stands [illegible] known until his papers [illegible] over. He was so intimately associated with the anti-slavery movement and with the organization and early triumph of the republican party, and played so important a part in the war history of the state that his contribution to historical literature cannot but be most interesting and important. It will deal with a portion of Michigan history never yet written, and his story will doubtless reveal much that few, if any, knew besides himself.

His Career.

Austin Blair was of Scotch descent and was born in Caroline, Tompkins county, N. Y., February 8, 1818. His early tuition in the common schools was supplemented by a preparation for college at the Cazenovia academy, whence he went to Hamilton, and in his junior year to Union college, graduating from the latter in 1839. The next two years were spent in his law studies in the office of Sweet & Davis at Oswego, N. Y.

In 1841 he came to Michigan to practice his profession as a lawyer, locating first at Jackson and later at Eaton Rapids. He returned to Jackson in 1844, and as a whig earnestly supported Henry Clay for president. In 1846 he was elected to the legislature, and as a member of the judiciary committee aided in the revision of the laws. He was early an advocate of the abolition of slavery, and in the legislature reported in favor of doing away with the color distinction as related to the elective franchise. He was in advance of his time and suffered defeat for re-election. In 1848 the whig national convention tabled all anti-slavery resolutions and Mr. Blair joined the free-soil movement and was a member of the convention which nominated Van Buren and Adams at Buffalo.

He was heart and soul in the movement and when in 1854 the anti-slavery agitation took form he was among the chafter members of the republican party. He attended the famous "under the oaks" convention at Jackson and was a member of the committee on resolutions, of which the late Senator Jacob M. Howard was chairman. The free soilers, the free democrats and all others who believed that slavery should be abolished were invited to join this movement and the convention gave the new party its name and nominated a ticket with Kingsley S. Bingham as the candidate for governor.

In 1855 Mr. Blair was elected prosecuting attorney of Jackson and two years later was sent to the state senate on the first republican ticket. He took a foremost part in the deliberations of the senate and until 1860 was a leader of the republican party. He stumped the state for the party and anti-slavery and it was as much due to his efforts as to those of any other man in Michigan that the republican sentiment grew as it did. He helped to reelect Gov. Bingham in 1856 and stumped for Gen. Wisner, and in 1860 headed the Michigan delegation to the national convention which nominated Lincoln and cast the Michigan vote in accordance with instructions for Seward.

Mr. Blair was nominated for governor in 1860 and elected and in 1862 was reelected. His term embraced the four years from January 1, 1861 to January 1, 1865, almost the entire period of the war. His labors during these years were such as much can follow. He was confident of the success of the union cause, never lost heart and kept up the spirits of the people at home and of the 90,000 soldiers which Michigan sent to the front. He was unresting in his labors and with voice pen and example showed the people the way. The merely nominal salary of his high office furnished no equivalent for the burdensome expenses which he incurred in the discharge of his patriotic duty and he retired from office impoverished and worn out.

In 1867 he was elected to congress and was twice reelected the only Michigan governor who has ever followed his term in the executive office with a congressional career. In congress he supported the impeachment of President Johnson during his last term he became somewhat antagonized toward the administration and in 1872 took the stump for Horace Greeley. He was the democratic candidate for governor in 1874, but was defeated and a few years later returned to the party which he helped to organize. In 1883 he was elected on the republican ticket as regent of the state university. From 1885 to 1887 he was prosecuting attorney of Jackson county and was nominated for justice of the supreme court but suffered defeat.

COST TWO LIVES.

Tragic Result of Fire in a Detroit Lumber Yard.

A Fireman Killed and Several Hurt by a Falling Wall—The Charred Remains of an Employe Found in the Ruins.

PROPERTY WORTH $60,000 DESTROYED.

At 4 o'clock two squads of pipemen were playing streams at the southeast corner of the mill, when a portion of the wall gave way and a half dozen firemen were caught by the falling brick and the following were killed and injured:

Eugene McCarthy, unmarried, pipeman of No. 19 company, body frightfully mangled, killed instantly; Henry Trapp, pipeman No. 6, severely injured, body crushed, head cut, burned; George W. Lyons, pipeman No. 6, hip broken, body bruised; Lieut. Louis R. Tate, No. 6, back injured, leg crushed; Thomas Schiebel, pipeman No. 19, leg broken and burned; Charles Boeberitz, pipeman No. 19, body bruised.

Shortly before 4 o'clock this morning, while the members of engine company No. 7 were working about the east end of the lumber yard and about 15 feet from the west wall of the mill, they came upon a charred body, which rested on the ground and was nearly hidden from view by the lumber which had fallen over it. The body was removed from the debris, but it was so badly burned as to be beyond recognition. Little remained besides the head and trunk, and these were blackened and burned to a crisp. The clothing was entirely burned, but a few trinkets were found near where the body lay. About 7 o'clock in the morning Edward Beyer's brother arrived at the scene and he reported that his brother was missing. On being shown the trinkets he identified them as belonging to his brother and on seeing the body he also identified it by the teeth. It is supposed that the unfortunate man went to sleep in the lumber shed and was overcome by the intense heat before he could make his escape.

The Richards planing mill was owned by A. Hunton, of the firm of Hunton, Myles & Weeks, and was leased to S. J. M. Gates, of Bay City, who also owned the lumber in that portion of the yard. The plant was operated by Richards & Co. for Gates. The property of Hunton, Myles & Weeks which was consumed consisted of lumber and small buildings. Their loss is about $20,000. The loss on the Richards mill and yards is estimated at $35,000. Hunton, Myles & Weeks are quite fully insured. The Richards mill is insured for $12,300.

As some very brilliant playing may be expected, the audience are requested not to be too demonstrative, nor to prolong their cheers for more than fifteen minutes at any one time.

The Tecumseh Browns played the Manchester Farmers last Tuesday and defeated them by a score of 18-19. The boys had not expected to play a set of toughs, but after staying there a short time discovered that they were billed for such. The Manchester team treated them in a most ungentlemanly manner, refusing to pay any of their expences as they had agreed to do.

The ball game Wednesday between Gurnee and Tipton nines, resulted in a victory for the home team. Batteries: Burton and Baker: Derby and Whelan. Umpire? Williams.

An Exciting Runaway.

Little Willie Hoch, the 8-year-old son of the postmaster, had one of those thrilling experiences Saturday, which come to all boys in some form or other in life and which will grow in magnitude as the years roll on until by the time he recites it in his declining days it will just a little outrank anything that ever happened before to any other boy in the world. The family horse needed the services of the shoemaker, and Willie had been promised a ride to the blacksmith shop—a bare-back ride with only a halter to guide the "flaming steed." Of course it was not expected that the old hoss would cut up any circus tricks, or do anything but take a quiet walk as he has done so many times before. But it takes a family horse to do the unexpected. He had scarcely got around the corner and out of sight of the home when—away he went. It was a race for your life. Billy had only the halter rope and it was his first experience. He tried to find a resting place on every part of the horse from the ears to the tail, but it was no use. It was up and down and all around. The trip down Broad street was a 2:04 gait and the turn on Toledo would discount the scene at a circus hurdle. It was once around the block, and a full stop at the barn door. But Billy was there—still clinging to the halter rope and the horse's mane. Was he frightened? Oh, no. But he was tired. Papa better take the horse to the blacksmith shop. Billy would walk. And so they all walked. Billy, papa and the horse.—Evening Telegram.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

The fall term of this institution will begin on Monday, Sept. 4th, and the indications all point to a very successful school year. The school is now firmly established. Prof. White is giving excellent satisfaction as Principal and the attendance is increasing every year. A few words in regard to the general character of the school may be of interest to those who may contemplate attending.

Here are the special advantages of this institution:

Healthful, attractive and strictly moral community.

An efficent and experienced faculty.

Thorough courses of study, and modern methods of instruction.

Expenses unusually low.

Equipments good—physical and chemical laboratoy; geological collection; two libraries; reading room and literary society; microscope and telescope.

Students not expecting to graduate can select their own studies.

Graduates admitted without examination to University of Michigan, State Agricultural College, State Normal School, Earlham College and Hillsdale College.

There are four full courses of study, of four years each:

1. The Scientific Course is arranged to prepare for admission to the B. L. Course at the University of Michigan, to which graduates from this and the English and Latin Courses are admitted without examination.

2. The Latin and Science Course contains nearly all the Natural Science of the Scientific, and requires two full years in both Latin and German. Graduates from this course are admitted to the B. S. Course at the University without examination.

3. The Latin Course offers three full years in Latin, which occupies the place of German and Science in the Scientific Course.

4. The English Course is arranged for those who wish to finish a full course without the study of the foreign languages.

In any of the four courses, for those studies not especially required in the University Courses, the student will be allowed to substitute such other work as the Principal shall approve.

Suitable diplomas are conferred upon those who satisfactorily complete any of the full courses.

A sufficient amount of Mathematics is given, both to afford sound mental discipline and to be of practical utility in life. The course consists of Arithmetic, Algebra and Geometry.

The course in History and Political Science is very complete. Beginning in the first year with twenty-four weeks in U. S. History, there are in the Academic courses sixteen weeks in the Civil Government, and twelve weeks in the Political History of the U. S. Twelve weeks are given to the History and Civil Government of Michigan. Students in the second year study General History twenty-eight weeks, using Myer's Outlines as a text book, and follow this with a twelve weeks' course in English History. One year is spent in the study of masterpieces in English and American literature in the Scientific and Latin Courses.

In Natural Science an effort is made to familiarize the student with those experiments from which the most important deductions result. The classes in Botany and Geology are required to classify a large number of plants and minerals in the neighborhood.

In Physiology, the teacher dissects many important organs in the presence of the class, thus giving the students an opportunity to see as well as to read and hear. Full instruction is given upon the subjects—Alcohol and Narcotics. A fine compound microscope is used in giving students clear ideas concerning cell structure, blood globules and minute crystals, together with many other objects of interest.

In Natural Philosophy much time is given to the illustration of laws and principles, by means of apparatus provided by the institution and constructed by the teacher and pupils. Careful work is done in both Organic and Inorganic Chemistry, and many experiments are performed.

By the munificence of the late Moses Sutton an astronomical observatory has been erected and furnished with a telescope of six inches aperture, made by the celebrated opticians, A. Clark & Sons, Cambridge, Mass. Care is taken to familiarize the class in Astronomy with the use of this instrument. Much time is spent in the observatory and individual work is required of each member.

Students wishing to prepare for college will do well to consider the advantages offered by the Seminary. Arrangements have been made with the three leading State Institutions, and with a prominent college in an adjoining State, by which graduates from this school are allowed to enter without examination, and, in three cases, are in the same way given advanced standing.

Catalogues will be sent free to all who apply for them. For further information address the Principal of Raisin Valley Seminary, Adrian, Michigan.

THE PIONEER PICNIC.

JOINT MEETING OF THE LENAWEE COUNTY AND FOUR-TOWN ORGANIZATIONS.

The Regular Annual Gathering in Rufus Baker's Grove Near Fairfield, on Friday, August 10, 1894.

The pioneer picnic usually held by the towns of Fairfield, Ogden, Madison and Palmyra, at Rufus Baker's elegant grove near Fairfield village, is an event looked forward to with great interest from year to year. This year the importance of the event was augmented by the union of the Lenawee County Pioneer Society with the four-town organization last Friday in a celebration that exceeded any yet held.

The platform was tastefully decorated with red, white and blue bunting and flags. A motto of white letters, "God bless our old folks," was conspicuous over the heads of the speakers at the rear of the platform. Under this on a blue banner, was the words, "Our Pioneers," which stood out in silver.

One incident would indicate that some of the old pioneer farmers are not suffering any these days. C. Quick, president of the four-town society, who presided, asked Rufus Baker, for a program, and he reached in his pocket for one and handed out a check of the denomination of $300. Those around had the laugh on Uncle Rufus for a moment, but he explained that he was simply out after bunko men.

Rev. John Bettis, pastor of the Fairfield Methodist church, offered an eloquent prayer, after a pleasing selection by the Adrian city band.

Hon. M. T. Cole, of Palmyra, delivered the address of welcome. Coming up he was reminded by the heavy sand that it was almost as bad traveling as in years gone by, over the old corduroy road. Glad to welcome people here, especially the old pioneers who marked out the way, made the roads, cut down the forests, cleared up the farms and made it possible for us to enjoy the blessings we now have. And these pioneer mothers, who stood side by side with our fathers—the old pioneers. He extended a warm welcome to everybody even those statesmen who are looking for office, but who in a few days at the conventions will be wounded by the wayside. He extended a welcome to the various towns, and to all the people of the county.

The response was to have been given by George W. Moore, of Medina, but as he was not present this was omitted. The Adrian city band gave a selection, which was finely rendered. The band rendered good service throughout the day's exercises, and added much to the interest of the program.

Miss Mary Allis then rendered very touchingly the story of the "Volunteer Organist."

Mrs. N. J. Strong, secretary of the four-town association, read the report of the last meeting followed by a selection from the Fairfield village choir.

The following nominating committees were named:

For the four towns—Fairfield, Rufus Baker; Ogden, Fred Bay; Palmyra, Hon. M. T. Cole; Madison, Lucius Porter.

County Society—Madison, Norman Bradish; Ogden, Benj. Hicks; Adrian, D. D. Sinclair.

Then followed a very beautifully rendered duet by Misses Mary Cole and Fannie Mitchell, of Palmyra.

The reports from the memorial committee were then in order. N. J. Strong gave the following report for Madison:

Mrs. Rebecca Van Ostrand, died December 8, 1893, aged 91. She had lived in Michigan about 42 years.

Benjamin Carpenter and wife died in February, the husband on Tuesday and the wife on Wednesday, and both were buried in one day. They had lived in Madison 43 years, and together for 65. Mr. Carpenter was 87, and his wife about the same age.

Charles Greene died suddenly in February, aged 72. One of the first settlers of the town.

Mrs. Sophronia Baker died on March 30th, in Butler county, Iowa, where she had recently moved. She was 61 years old, and had lived most of her life in Madison.

Mrs. Hannah Crane, wife of Wm. Crane, died in Madison July 15. She was nearly 61 years of age.

John Harvey, aged 59, was another pioneer, who had lived all his years in Madison.

Mrs. Alena Earyes died August 2, 1892, and her death was not reported at last meeting. She was 76 years old, and lived over 50 years in Michigan.

Hon. M. T. Cole reported for Palmyra. Six old pioneers died the year before, but only two were called away the past year.

Nathaniel Gleason died May 22d, aged 81. Lived in Palmyra 63 years on the farm he took up from the government.

Ralph J. Clark died May 20th, aged 54, and always lived in Palmyra.

J. H. Cole reported for Fairfield:

Judson Hoag died September 8, 1893, aged 52. Lived 46 years in Fairfield.

Eleanor L. Miller died October 3, 1893, aged 77 years, and was for 46 years a resident of Michigan.

Rebecca Swick died December 20, 1893, aged 78 years. Lived 38 years in Fairfield.

Rachael G. Porter died January 29th, aged 76 years, 58 of which were spent in Fairfield.

Philander Savage died January 18th, aged 78, and had resided 47 years in Fairfield.

Samuel Hinkley settled in Fairfield early in 30's; died last year, aged 91, making over 60 years of residence in the town.

Mrs. Alena Dunn died February 11th, 55 years of age, and lived all her life in Fairfield and Madison.

John M. Swick died July 29th, aged 73 years; lived 40 years in Fairfield.

Ogden must have been an unusually healthy town last year, as no report was forthcoming from that town.

Then came music by "Ye Old Tyme Band." Fred Curtis, 78 years old, and Darius Cross, aged over 80, constituted the band. Cross managed both snare and bass drums, the latter with his foot, and Curtis acted as fifer. Their music captured the crowd completely and they were called back three or four times. It was the greatest hit of the day's program.

Dinner was then announced and the crowd scattered throughout the grove to partake of refreshments. Warm meals were furnished to all who desired, under a large awning, and scores of family groups and neighborhood parties were scattered through the woods, some on the ground, some at tables, and many in carriages, partaking of a bountiful repast. Provisions were plenty and the noon hour was doubtless enjoyed by all.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Exercises were opened by the Adrian city band and the immense crowd again gathered around the stand. The Sand Creek glee club sang two very good songs after which the nominating committees reported as follows:

For the four-town society:

President—C. Quick.

Secretary—Mrs. N. J. Strong.

Vice Presidents—Fairfield, A. K. Porter; Ogden, J. H. Hodges; Palmyra, R. W. Telfer; Madison, C. R. Porter.

J. H. Cole, G. P. Robertson, M. T. Cole and N. J. Strong are memorial committee for townships in the order named above.

For the County Society

President—Thos. F. Moore.

Vice-President—Rufus Baker.

Secretary—S. C. Stacy.

Treasurer—John I. Knapp.

Music by "Ye Old Tyme Band."

Thos. F. Moore then gave a short historical sketch of the Lenawee County Pioneer Society. It was organized in 1872 in connection with the state society. Dr. Underwood, of Adrian, was the first president, and after him Francis Dewey held the office 18 years. The first settlement in Lenawee county was in 1824. There was not a white man in the county previous to that time. He compared the appearance of the country at that time with the present and extolled the energy and power exerted by those who wrought such great changes. He said we were here to-day to erect a monument to the worthy pioneers and to rejoice over the history of the past. Lenawee county to-day stands first in the United States. We are suffering from drouth but we have enough to carry us through the winter and we ought to be thankful to God for that.

Miss Mary Allis again favored the audience with two very fine recitations after which followed a few short addresses by old pioneers.

Rev. Jacob Baker, of Raisin, was expected to deliver an address but was detained to attend the funeral of one of the old pioneers of Raisin, Peleg Haviland.

The Weston Choir gave another song, which brought forth an encore and Miss Bertha Hall gave a recitation entitled "A Fashionable School Girl," which elicited much praise.

Miss Clara Earys recited "Mary's Midnight Ride" in a beautiful manner.

B. I. Lang gave an interesting pioneer talk, recounting some of his own experience in years gone by, and he was followed by Deacon Porter and Rufus Baker in similar talks.

"Ye Old Tyme Band" was then brought on the platform and favored the audience with a few rattling selections which terminated the formal exercises of the day.

After the formal dismissal the Adrian city band took possession of the platform and held the crowd for an hour or more with some excellent music.

It was the largest gathering and most successful meeting yet held by the four-town society. A fair estimate would place the total number present at 5,000. The grove was full and the crowd ran over into the pasture lots on the north and south, the fences of two large fields being utilized for hitching teams. The weather was all that could be expected on an August day, being cloudy and quite cool and pleasant in the grove. The devotees of base ball had their share of amusement also, as two good games were played in the afternoon between local clubs. Taken altogether it is difficult to see how the meeting could have been improved upon, and it was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

ATTITUDE OF THE SENATE.

A good deal of blustering talk has been heard in the Senate about usurpation of power by the House and the President, but Senators would do better to examine their own unconstitutional position in withstanding the House on a revenue bill. Our constitutional provision on the control of the House over money bills was confessedly drawn from English practice, and what that practice is was pretty conclusively shown the other day in the action of the House of Lords on the budget. Some of the features were extremely distasteful to the Tory peers, and Lord Salisbury made an elaborate argument to show that the House of Lords had a constitutional right to amend a revenue bill. Lord Roseberry replied briefly and rather contemptuously that the only thing the House of Lords had to do with a money bill was to take it as it came from the House of Commons, and this the noble lords proceeded to do meekly enough, despite all their wry faces. That essentially this absolute control of the power of the purse was intended to be given to the House by the framers of the constitution is beyond question.—New York Evening Post.

WHAT MR. FISHER SAID.

It would be a waste of time and space to undertake to put the Republican organs right on what Hon. S. O. Fisher said in his Webberville speech, because they do not want to know the truth. They prefer to publish a falsehood. Mr. Fisher did not say "Republican legislation alone had made his comfortable position possible." He would have made a very foolish statement if he had. Because if it were the legislation alone that gave Mr. Fisher a competency it should have produced like results in the cases of all others. Mr. Fisher said he was not rich, but comfortably well off, and if he had enjoyed superior advantages which had made him better off than those whom he was addressing—the farmers of Webberville—Republican legislation had given him that advantage. They saw the point clearly enough and clinched it with their applause. They knew that for years Mr. Fisher had been allowed to ask $2 more per thousand feet for his lumber on account of the tariff. This $2 the farmers have been paying, while they received no protection on their products and no recompense in any direction—the price of their products going down while the price of Mr. Fisher's had gone up. The organs will have this point set forth by Mr. Fisher more often than they will find comfortable, and it will cost their campaign committee nothing. They will get it often, right in the neck.—Bay City Times.

The people have waited so long for a settlement of the tariff question that they now want it settled right and for a long time to come.

Farmers' Home Reading Club.

Two letters were received last week by the Farm and Dairy editor, asking for particulars regarding the F. H. R. C. This is a home course of reading in agriculture, horticulture, dairying, etc., on the Chautauqua plan. It is a grand thing for our farmers, their wives, sons, daughters and the the "hired man." Write Prof. F. B. Mumford, Sec'y., Agricultural College, Mich. We are reading this course and could not be hired to drop it. We expect to keep at it (in spite of the tariff, or the exit of silver) until we "graduate." Too much cannot be said in favor of this course for our young farmers who have had no opportunity to pursue a course of study at the Agricultural College. In these days it is almost criminal to live in ignorance. The well-informed, educated, practical, hard working business farmer is the one who ought to make the most money, and—he generally does. He who wills may win.—Michigan Farmer.

SHE'LL MARRY ME.

Ah, life looks very bright to me
Since I have heard her say
With sweet becoming modesty,
She'll marry me some day.

If I will give up smoking;
If I will go to church;
If I cut the club and leave
My best friends in the lurch;
If I will never stay out late,
But hasten home at 9;
If I will let her have her way—
She's promised to be mine!

If I will move to Kensington
And never touch a card;
If I will buckle down to work
And labor long and hard
To buy her stylish bonnets
And gowns and lots of gloves,
Then I may be that happy man,
The lucky man she loves.

If I'll be always pleasant
And never, never scold,
And never make her nurse me
And not grow cross and old,
And always stay good looking—
She can't stand ugly men—
If I come up to her ideal,
Why, we'll be married then!

That's why I am so happy
And why I often seem
Unconscious and abstracted—
I'm living in a dream!
She is so sweet and pretty,
And so unselfish too!
I wonder how I won her love—
I can't believe it's true!

MY FIANCEE.

I had been telegraphic operator at "B station" some six or eight months and had held communication of a purely business character only with the operator at "D" when there came a change. Death silently removed the old man who had been in charge there for so long, and a new operator was installed.

A message spun along the line one February morning in this wise: "Good morning, B." I responded:

"Good morning, D." Then came the information, "The old man died last night, and I have taken his place."

"What is your name?" I asked.

"Nellie Merton. What is yours?" A spirit of deviltry prompted my reply:

"Ned Clayborn."

"Thank you," was the concise response. Then a message in real earnest came along the lines, and we were obliged to attend to business. Every day I bade my unseen acquaintance "Good morning" and never closed up at night without a farewell message. A twinge of conscience racked me at times, and a "still, small voice" whispered its warning, but the temptation was too great, and it was not long before I was sending sly messages, containing a good deal "atween the lines," to the unseen Nellie. The replies to these messages were guarded, but hopeful, and I grew bolder. It was no end of fun.

She told me her history. She had run away from home because her parents insisted upon marrying her to a man she detested (and the last word came clicking viciously from my end of the line). She would never marry him—never. I advised her not to and hinted at an affection deeper and truer than any the presuming "detested fellow" could offer.

Well, the outcome of it was that I asked the unseen Nellie to be my wife and even described the little home that was lonesomely awaiting her coming. I was floundering in deep water and could but trust to a kind Providence to pull me out. My "fun" was becoming dead earnest. How I wished the wires stretching between us were telephonic, instead of telegraphic, that I could perchance hear some exclamation or gain some token of how my message was received. But this was not to be, and I had to possess my soul in patience. That virtue was almost exhausted when the well known call fell upon my ears. I flew to the instrument. It was concise and not very complimentary, "Rather than marry that brute I will risk it."

I was in for it now and must perforce flounder still deeper by sending rapturous messages over the wires. I, Delia Brown, was engaged to be married to a young lady I had never seen. This was forcing the question of woman's rights.

I carried the "fun" on for over three months, and every day it grew decidedly less "funny," until I began to brood over the predicament into which I had giddily led my feet. The time was rapidly approaching when I would have to claim the bride I had won in this novel and romantic manner, and my blood ran cold at the thought of how easy it would be for her to learn of my perfidy, and from all I had seen of her temper I felt sure she would not deal lightly with any one who would dare to play tricks upon her.

At last I could bear it no longer, and one day, just three weeks before I was to travel to "D" and claim my bride, I boarded the train with altogether another motive. It was to "kiss and make up" after I had begged her with tears to forgive me, etc.

I found a little house, with a little sign in blue and white swinging in the breeze, similar to the little house and the little sign at "B." It was occupied at the time by a young man reading a paper. I looked at him without speaking, and he returned the compliment in kind.

"I wish to see Miss Nellie Merton," I said, and as he did not speak I went on to explain. "I am the operator at 'B' and have an important message, which must be delivered to her at once. A moment's delay means"— I paused for a word, and he spoke for the first time.

"So you are the operator at 'B' and desire to see Miss Merton? I am sorry to disappoint you; but, you see, Miss Merton is at home at the present time while I take her place. The fact is she is going to be married and is preparing for the great event. She cannot be seen personally, but if you will intrust the message to me I will deliver it immediately if you will be kind enough to take my place while I run around to her house."

His coolness nearly distracted me.

"I must see her!" I exclaimed excitedly.

"But you cannot," he said coolly. "I have strict orders not to let any one know her whereabouts for a day or two until these extensive preparations are well under way."

I was on the verge of tears, and with a choke in my voice I cried out, sinking into a chair and holding up my hands deprecatingly:

"Don't say another word. You will set me wild. If you will not tell me where to find Nellie," I went on in desperation, "will you please tell her this—I have been a bad, wicked girl, and—and—and—there is no such person as Ned Clayborn? It started in fun, and—and—and—please let me go to her. She will understand me so much better than you can explain it."

"No such person as Ned Clayborn! My dear young lady, I must beg leave to differ with you. That is the name of the young man who in three short weeks is to marry Miss Merton. Surely he is not dead?" he added in consternation.

"Oh, will you not understand? It was all a joke at first. I thought it would be great fun, and so I—well, I am Ned Clayborn, and after a time we became engaged—all in fun, too." Here I laughed hysterically. "I tried to stop, but I was so wicked I could not, and now poor Nellie will break her heart, and—and—and"— And I broke down and began to cry in a miserable way.

Unlike most men, my companion was not in the least disconcerted at sight of my tears, but simply laughed, loud and long.

Presently the laughter ceased. Then I heard uneasy movements in the chair occupied by my companion. Then he got up and paced about restlessly. Pretty soon a light touch fell upon my arm, and his voice, very gentle and kind, said, "Nellie is here to receive your confession and forgiveness." I dried my eyes and looked up, but saw no one but the tall young man, who was looking at me very earnestly.

"Where is she?" I asked, ready to cry again.

"Here," he said, holding out his hand. Instinctively I put mine into it, and it closed over it firmly.

"I also have a confession to make," he said earnestly. "I thought you were another young fellow like myself, and wishing to relieve the tedium of these long monotonous days struck up a flirtation. I intended some day to meet the young man and have it out with him, when you came with your strange confession. In short," he ended abruptly, "I am Nellie Merton. And you are Ned Clayborn? Come, dry your eyes, Ned. Your Nellie is not heartbroken at the turn about of affairs."

After staring at him in silent amazement for the space of five seconds the truth of the whole matter began to dawn upon my confused brain. My face grew hot with indignation. I snatched my hand from his and sprang to my feet.

"You are a contemptible fellow!" I cried. He did not reply, but stood looking down at me from his superior height.

"It was a hundred times meaner in you because your object was a woman. I will never forgive you if I live to be a thousand."

"Isn't that rather paradoxical, considering the fact that you thought I was a woman and you were enacting the role of the sterner sex?" he asked.

"You might have known," I answered severely.

"But I did not," he replied.

"Here is my train," I said shortly.

"Goodby," he replied, assisting me on to the train despite my independence and lifting his hat as it pulled out.

I traveled back to "B" a sadder but wiser woman.

"You are a fool," said I to my reflection in the little mirror as I removed my hat.

A year rolled by. I had entirely recovered from my chagrin, and buried in the darkest chamber of my memory was every thought of the tall young operator at "D station."

One morning I was arranging and copying some night messages when a long shadow fell across my papers. A glance upward told who it was. The door of that secret and darkened chamber of my memory flew open, and I knew that the tall young man at "D station" was not as yet quite consigned to oblivion. Standing with hat in hand and without any preface of any kind he said:

"Over a year ago you asked me to marry you, and I consented. I have come to ask: Will you come? Or shall I enter suit for breach of promise?"

What could I do? And, after all, perhaps he would not have made me a better husband had I met him in the old conventional way and waited for him to propose to me.—Ella Terre in Short Stories.

Steam Gauges.

A writer in Machinery points out the fact, as ascertained by examination, that but very few steam gauges are correct throughout the whole range of the scale and remarks that in testing a gauge it is desirable to make the pressure at which steam is usually carried the most important point to be determined. A gauge may be correct at low pressure and not so at higher pressures, and the reverse may also be found, especially with gauges that have been in use some time. By many it is not considered advisable to use a gauge for recording pressures as high as that shown on the dial, as few springs will stand such an extension without becoming permanently set, to a certain extent, this being especially the case with the cheaper gauges. It is, according to this writer, not a difficult matter to devise means for comparing with a test gauge any kind of force pump serving the purpose, or the boiler feed pump may be utilized. Again, gauges can be tested by fitting them to a piece of lead pipe, a gauge at either end, the pipe being bent to bring the gauges vertically.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. Our Wheelman Gives His Experience on His last Day's Journey.

DENVER, Col., July 24th, 1894.

DEAR MR. EDITOR:—From Lexington, (the place where my last letter was written) I resumed my wheeling after supper with a strong wind at my back. The speed which I attained was terrific. There was little to do but coast, for the roads were perfection. The first twenty miles was actually covered in a few minutes over an hour. Then the sky which had been overcast began to blacken and then to inspire terror with its threatening appearance. Gothenburg, my objective point was only four miles away, and I was almost flying. One of the sod houses which are very frequent in Nebraska was not far off. Suddenly the wind reversed with a shock that nearly threw me from my wheel, and I was riding against a terrific blast. Soon I was compelled to dismount. Raindrops fell and I fled back to the sod house which I had passed. The people were very hospitable, and took in the storm conquered Victor and myself. It did not rain any more and I went out to see the grand spectacle which the storm presented. The black clouds hung above in such a manner that around the horizon was an almost complete strip of open sky. To the west the setting sun was blazing away and leveling its rays against the edge of the storm cloud. This gave a dull red color to all the western border. The great glaring eye, the red lining, and the inky blackness which was above were all awe-inspiring. Regular rivers of lightning poured across the sky. All at once this changed. The sun dropped out of sight. In the distance there were streaks of rain falling from the clouds. Where they were not too dense to let the light through they were streaks of blood or had an orange hue. The changing lines of light hung like a curtain across the west where the great sun had made his exit. Then darkness came on with a rush, and I knew that I must walk to town with my wheel or stay all night in that sod house. This turf habitation was very comfortable inside and as the dwellers offered me a bed I decided to stay. As I had about 608 companions who held a carnival in the bed, and danced till broad daylight, I slept very little that night. At an early hour I hastened on to Gothenburg. The rain had made the roads muddy and slippery but after breakfast I started out and crossed the Platte river to a road south of it and plodded on, hoping to make North Platte before night. Showers stopped me frequently, and I would retreat to a ranch until the rain had passed. At noon I stopped at a small hut, and was ushered in by a solemn looking middle aged Irishman. He at once invited me to dine with him, before I expressed my desires, and a very eatable repast it was which he set before me. He introduced himself as Lonely Mike, the cow-boy and he had lived there alone for twenty years. With nerve characteristic of a bike tourist I asked why he did not take to himself a wife. He shook his head sorrowfully and muttered something about "living alone being bad enough." He became very sociable before I left and I decided that he was a very pleasant fellow, if he was a hermit. He could make buscuits that would be food for the ambrosia-eating gods. After bidding my hermit good bye I went on, and watched closely for paririe dogs which an old man a day or so before had told me I should see. The old man I had met at a private boarding house, and he said such an excessively long blessing at dinner that I was sure he told only the truth. He said they would be so thick that I would have to avoid riding into the holes which they made right in the road. Great vigilance on my part however failed to discover a prairie dog before I reached North Platte. But I did see the hills which border the Platte Valley, and which I had previously been too far from to examine. They are minature mountains with canyons, passes, and peaks. Often steep clifts and low green valleys may be seen. All they lack are snow clad peaks to be fitting models of the great Rockies.

At North Platte I got supper and rode on to O'Fallons to pass the night. There the hotel had been recently burned and a grocer had rented an old rookery which he had fitted with beds. In this feeble and dilapidated structure I must sleep. There were two beds in the room which I had, and a very respectable traveling man had the other. We could not lock the door and during the night a drunken cowboy came in about once an hour, lit a match, waved it unsteadily over my face and asked "Is this Willie?" I would say no and then he would stagger over to the other bed, screw himself into the attitude of an interrogation point, and demand if that was Willie. My friend would snore and the cowboy would retire grumbling about "Willie." Perhaps he was a guardian angel, or the genious of the place. He had a pretty strong breath for a ghost but it may be that a Nebraska spirit has his strength in his breath. Gladly I arose and kicked the dust of O'Fallons from my pneumatic tires. Soon the beauty of the prairie drove away memories of the night. Even those dreary wastes of land into which I was coming had their attraction. A flower precisely like the morning glory in appearance adorns the ground in all directions. Along the edge of the road for miles there is a thick growth of dwarf sunflowers. On the hills to my right there was a range of hills, steep up from the valley, and lined with the crags of white chalky appearance. While passing through the small town of Paxton I stopped for a drink. The usual crowd assembled and some noticed and remarked upon the red tires of the wheel. A son of Erin in the crowd asked me how far I had come from. I answered 1300 miles. "By the holy Patrick, no wonder the tires be red" exclaimed the man from the Emerald Isle. I am in Denver now safely after an experience in Colorado which I will relate in my next letter, for I have not room in this epistle.

The Trotting Matinee.

The driving matinee held last Saturday afternoon, at Bills' park, was a successful meeting of its kind. There were eleven starters in the trotting races and nine in the bicycle race. Each event was vigorously contested and sometimes perhaps with more vigor than discretion. The 2:50 trot or pace was the prettiest race of the day, every heat being fast, and the last one in 1:10. The bicyle race was close and interesting. Davidson, the Tecumseh favorite, led in both heats to the last quarter and from there home it was a game race between him and H. C. Ackley of Adrian, with Ackley a winner by a short distance in each heat. The management should try and arrange matters in the future so the program may be finished by 6 o'clock, as the crowd gets very weary about that hour. A large number were present to enjoy the sport and seemed to do so. Another matinee was announced for Friday, August 31st. Following is a summary of the races:

The August crop report has these observations about the weather: The bright sunshine, high temperature, and dry weather that has prevailed throughout the State since the first of July, is telling severely on all crops. There were very few cloudy days during July, and the weather much of the time was intensely warm. At Lansing the average temperature of the month was 1 58 degrees above the normal of fifteen years. The average rainfall in the State in June was only about two-thirds the normal, and in the southern and central counties little more than half the normal. There was no general-soaking rain during July, nor has there been to this date in August. A rain extending over seme considerable area occurred July 26, but it was insufficient to afford more than temporary relief.

'Tis a fad to have a fad or hobby; so if you do not wish to be considered a "no account sort of person" you must straightway adopt one. Of course, ordinary people cannot afford to indulge in hobbies that cost money, like Rembrandts, and horses, and yachting, but you may have a hobby for walking, and that costs only shoe-leather and time; or for collecting wild flowers, which is quite as inexpensive; indeed, there are a thousand-and-one things that are pleasant to do, and can easily be developed into very presentable hobbies. In the September number of Demorest's Magazine, Henry O. Havemeyer, Theodore A. Havemeyer, Frances Willard, Hamilton W. Mabie, Edward E. Rice and Senator W. A. Peffer talk entertainingly about their hobbies, and it is very interesting reading, the interest being heightened by the accompanying portraits.

A few years ago the lovers of trotting horses were obliged to journey to Detroit or Saginaw, but now Lansing is the Mecca of all turfites. The coming meeting at Lansing, Aug. 20th-24th inclusive, promises to be a "corker." There are three hundred horses named in the stakes and the class races are filled to unusual proportions and will, if anything, be too large for comfort. The quality of the horses entered is something astonishing. In the free-for-all-trot such world renowned performers as Lord Clinton, Hello Vara, Pamlico, Jack, Lee's Pilot and others will take the word. While this astonishing field would seem to be sufficient to draw to Lansing every race worshiper, the slower classes are equally attractive and every race must be a contest too good to be missed. There is only one safe rule of action regarding Lansing races this year. Be there at the opening and remain until the result of the last heat is announced.

It has been reported that I was going out of the insurance business, but that is a mistake. I have only given up one company, the Phoenix of Hartford, that I thought did not use me right, and was trying to play hog. I have still seventeen Companies, either one of them as good as the one I gave up, and some of them with nearly double the assets. I wish to say to my friends that I am here to stay and will take care of your insurance when it expires. About the first of Oct. I expect to move into the James block, under the Masonic Temple.

MURDER SUSPECTED.

Mystery Surrounds the Death of Calvin Blood in Detroit.

Found in the Home of His Mistress with a Bullet in His Head—Her Son Under Arrest—Inquest Reveals Nothing.

TRAGEDY IN DETROIT.

DETROIT, Aug. 11.—It now appears that Hon. Calvin A. Blood, who was found dead Wednesday at 874 Fifteenth street with a bullet in his body, died in the house of his mistress. Mrs. Melissa Black had been Blood's mistress for years, both in Detroit and in Marine City. It was upon one of his periodic visits to Detroit to meet her that he met his death. It is thought to be a case of murder, as Blood would not be likely to advertise the secret of his life by killing himself in the house of his mistress. David Black, her son, is under arrest. An inquest was begun Friday afternoon and nothing new was developed. David Black, who is under arrest on suspicion, told how he went to the house into which the Black family were moving to measure a bed and saw the old man lying on the floor. He went back to the old house and told his mother that the old man looked queer. The mother went to No. 874 alone and came back screaming that Blood was dead. He knew nothing of the bullet wound until informed by the undertakers. Mrs. Black's testimony corroborated that of her son in every particular. She says on entering the room she called twice to Blood, thinking he was asleep. Not getting any answer she knelt beside the body and found that Blood was dead. She did not notice the bullet wound. After the testimony of Dr. Farnum, who conducted the postmortem examination, the invest was adjourned for a few days. The case is as much of a mystery as ever.

AFTER MANY YEARS.

Jennie Finch, Who Was Stolen by Gypsies, Meets Her Brother and Sister.

Owosso, Mich., Aug. 13.—Eighteen years ago Jennie Finch, 10 years old, was stolen from her home in Grand Rapids by a band of gypsies, and after a fruitless search she was mourned as dead. Her mother died and the family scattered, her brother and sister moving here. She discovered her relatives here Saturday and related her thrilling experiences. The leader of the gypsies who stole her was Bartley Gorman, who was afterward hanged for killing his wife. While she was in a critical condition from injuries caused by Gorman, who kicked her, the gypsy applied the lash. Her screams were heard by an officer, who liberated her. She was taken to the hospital at Quincy, Ill., thence to New York and Cincinnati, but she has never entirely recovered from the injury. Seven years ago she left the hospital and afterward married a mason named D'Klos. They now live in Cincinnati. Last week she visited Grand Rapids in search of her relatives, whom she feared were all dead. She found her brother and sister.

SUNK AT ST. JOSEPH.

A Ferryboat Cut in Two by a Big Steamer—No Lives Lost.

ST. JOSEPH, Aug. 13.—The excursion steamer Puritan crashed into the ferryboat Richmond at 4 o'clock Sunday morning, cutting her completely in two. Fortunately there were no passengers on the ferryboat at the time, but the crew of three had a narrow escape from drowning, after a close call from being crushed by the big steamer. The collision took place in the gray light of morning, when small objects were barely distinguishable on the river. The Puritan was in command of Capt. McGuiggan, and, contrary to all laws of navigation, was coming up the river at nearly full speed.

Railroads to Pay Less Taxes.

LANSING, Aug. 11.—The effect of the business depression of the past year is shown in the decrease in the amount of taxes which will be paid this year by the railroad companies operating in Michigan, the taxes of these companies being computed on the basis of their gross earnings in Michigan for the previous calendar year. In the case of Bard vs. Kriedler, Justice Smith rendered a decision of no cause of action.

H. S. Lee, of Boston, was here Monday and Tuesday sacking a lot of wool which he had bought of Tate, VanTuyle & Co.

Geo. Freese started Tuesday afternoon for New York on a trip for both business and pleasure. He will be absent about two weeks.

The Tecumseh delegation to the Epworth League convention numbered fifteen on Tuesday and on Wednesday the number was largely increased.

B. D. Ames arrived here last Sunday on his wheel, visited his sister, Mrs. Ham Niblack until Monday and then went on to Sand Lake where he will rusticate for a couple of weeks.

Mrs. Ed. A. Clark and Miss Eva Shimman have purchased Mrs. C. B. McMaster's millinery stock and will take possession September 1st. We wish them success in their new venture.

Charles L. Silvers has rented his mother's farm, bought his brother Will's herd of Jerseys, and will try his hand at dairy farming. We believe he has the perseverance and tact to enable him to succeed. It is no simple trick to become a good butter maker.

David Goodrich, the youngest son of Geo. Goodrich, who has been seriously ill with a spinal difficulty for several months, is hovering between life and death. While there is life there is hope, but an unfavorable turn is likely to take place at any time.

H. A. Welch and Wesley B. Keyser have purchased the meat and produce business of James Hogan and will conduct the same under the firm name of the Clinton Provision Company. They took possession last Monday. We welcome the new firm to the circle of Clinton's business men and wish them the best of success in their new venture.

Saturday's Ball Game.

The base ball game last Saturday between the Clinton team and the Y. M. C. A., of Adrian, was a very close and finely played game and resulted in a victory for the home team. The report in the Telegram is a very fair one and gives the result in a concise and truthful manner, a portion of which is appended:

The visitors had Harris in the box, and he was so swift that scarcely any of our old batters could touch his twists. Grassman was not playing his position in center, but Clapp held down the field with honor, making the only real meritorious play of the afternoon, a hard running catch of a long fly, on which he fell down. But he froze to the ball, and doubled it to first for a play that made Clinton's head swim. Umpire Southland jostled the game along handily and the nine innings were played in one hour and forty-five minutes, the quickest time on record for the grounds.

The first two innings resulted in a goose egg for both teams, but the third opened with two baggers for Gillen, LaDaceur and Wade scoring two runs. The home team couldn't get their feet on the home plate. The fourth was a little closer for the home team on errors for the visitors, Tracey securing third base for the second time, but he stayed there, as did Clapp at second. Carlton, Clapp and Armstrong retired the side with two runs in sight.

In the fifth is where Clapp made his double play, after LaDaceur had flied to Tracey and saved two runs for the visitors. The home team couldn't score a run, however.

The sixth was a goose egg for Clinton but when the home team secured the bat Tracey drove out a two bagger, and Carlton singled. Goff had flied out and Clapp fanned the wind. Armstrong hit the ball for the first time, but was a sure out at first. Sutfin, however, failed to have his foot on the bag, and the umpire noticed it. He called Armstrong safe, but the visitors did not hear him, and supposing they had retired the side walked in towards home. While they were sleeping on the way Tracey and Carlton scored, and there was a general laugh all around. The grand stand thought it rather a thin decision by the umpire, but decided not to kick very much.

In the seventh the home team scored two more on a series of wild throws for Clinton.

The eighth jumped the Clinton score up two more, and the ninth was a goose egg for both sides.

Below is the score:

Y.M.C.A.	0	0	0	0	0	2	2	0	0	—4

Respects to the Memory of Austin Blair.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted at a regular meeting of Beers Post, Aug. 6:

RESOLVED, That the soldiers of Beers Post, 140, Dept. of Michigan, G. A. R. irrespective of that state from which they were mustered into the armies of the Union, bow in sadness and with reverent humility before the open grave of Ex-Governor Blair.

They remember with affection and gratitude his constant fidelity to the interests of the "Boys in Blue." They remember with admiration his courage, fortitude, and ability in administering the cares of state, during the most trying times in our national history. They remember with love the kindliness he ever manifested and exercised toward those whom Abraham Lincoln termed the "plain people." And above all they revere the rugged honesty and integrity with which he resisted all temptation and which kept him ever the noblest work of God, AN HONEST MAN.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Low rate excursions every month over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. E. E. Posey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile, Ala.

A Pleasant Family Reunion.

The fourth annual reunion of the Densmore and Kelley families occurred at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Wilson, on Wednesday, August 15, '94. The day began stormy, but before noon all was clear. Many and hearty were the hand shakes and words of greeting, for nearly 100 relatives from Raisin, Hanover, Hudson, Tipton, Battle Creek, Holloway, Pewamo and Chicago were present. The greater part of the day was spent in reviewing old times and past scenes and forming new acquaintances. At 1:30 p. m. tables were arranged upon the lawn and indoors sufficient to accomodate fifty-eight persons at one sitting. These were nearly filled the second time. At four p. m. the following program was called: Music, "Auld Lang Syne," in which all united. Prayer, by Rev. Cansfield; followed be the seretary's report, read by Mrs. Caleb Satterthwaite; then came a poem of welcome, well written and delivered by Miss Ethel Ryan, of Hanover. A duet was next announced, from Leon Kelley and May Kopkie; the little ones rendered this very nicely. Mrs E. A. Wilson then pleasingly gave a recitation, entitled: "The Witch's Daughter," after which Master Bert Kopkie admirably entertained his audience with a fine recitation. Following this came the solo, "Not Ashamed of Jesus." Rev. Stead, of Raisin, was present, and at this point in the program made some very appropriate remarks, which were well received. Mrs. Ida Ryan, of Hanover, then feelingly sang, "The Merit of the Man of Galilee." Rev. Cansfield, of Ridgeway, next very forcibly addressed those present, impressing all with his earnest manner. After an instrumental duet, a letter was read from Mrs. Judith Kelley, who could not be present. Remarks were made by Moses Densmore and Benj. Kelley. Then all joined in singing "God be with you till we meet again." Officers for the ensuing year were elected. That the next reunion shall be held in Hanover, at the residence of Mr. Chas. Densmore, was voted upon and carried. Then, after partaking of ice cream and cake and lemonade, the farewells were spoken and the members of the reunion departed for their homes, unanimously pronouncing the occasion a most enjoyable one.

He has reached the venerable age, (for a dog) of ten years, and is getting quite gray, but, although his name is "Sniff," he is, by no means to be sniffed at.

Is it not disgusting hypocricy to put upon a U. S. coin the motto, "In God we trust," and then use that same coin to promote such a scheme as last Sunday's excursion to the State encampment, where the troops engaged in a sham battle, etc., to call out a rabble, and descrate the holy Sabbath in many other ways?

THE TECUMSEH HIGH SCHOOL.

In our last weeks issue we gave an outline of the work in the Raisin Valley Seminary, and as the opening season of schools is near at hand, we have thought it might be of interest to the HERALD reade to make known the advantages of the Tecumseh Public Schools. The Seminary and our High School are by no means competitors, as each has a mission of its own in the educational field. The corps of teachers in our schools will be the same this year as last, with the exception of two: Miss Fannie Elder, a graduate of Albion College, who taught very successfully in Utica, Mich., last year, will have the department of history and literature in the high school, in place of Miss Ingersoll, and Miss Maude M. Howell, of Macon, will fill a vacancy in the East Branch, caused by a transfer.

The departmental plan, which was so successful in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades last year, will be continued during the coming year. The work in grammar and music being under the direction of Miss Wimple; that of geography and physiology under Miss Kyle; and of arithmetic and reading by Miss Wiley. That teachers can give better instruction in two or three branches instead of attempting a wider range of subjects, is no longer a matter of doubt, and this has proven true in the grammar grades, as well as in the high school.

Our High School has again been placed on the University list of preparatory schools, and students can now enter the freshman class in that institution or any other college in the state, as well as most colleges in other states, without the trying ordeal of an entrance examination. Three courses of study are offered: A Latin course, preparatory to the Ph. B. course in the University; a Scientific course, preparatory to the B. S. course, and an English course preparatory to the B. L. course. The Latin course embraces four years of Latin, two of German, three of mathmetics, including arithmetic, algebra and geometry; one and one half years in science, including botany and physics; one and one half years in history, including United States history and general history; one half year of English grammar; one year of English composition and rhetoric, and two and one half years in masterpiece studies in English. The scientific course offers two full years in Latin; two of German; three of mathmetics, embracing the same course as in the Latin course; one and one half years in history; three years in science, including botany, physiology, physics, chemistry and political economy, and three years in English masterpieces. The English course embraces the same work in mathematics as the other courses; two full years in history, including United States, English and general history; three and one half years of science, including physiology, botany, physical geography, physics, chemistry and political economy; one half year of book-keeping; four full years in English masterpiece study; one year in English and American literature, and one half year in civil government. A two years course of vocal music, under the direction of Miss Dora Grayson, is provided; it includes two, three and four part singing and sight reading. All music books and codas for supplementary work are furnished by the school. Thus it will be seen that the courses of study are equal to those of any other High School in the State. The aim has been to make the courses complete enough for practical and preparatory work, and at the same time not attempt too wide a range of subjects at the expense of thoroughness.

Supt. Kellogg will teach the sciences and civil government as heretofore; Miss Hartbeck, German and mathematics, and Miss Gray, Latin and English. Additions will be made to the chemical and physical apparatus at the opening of the fall term. While all students will be urged, as far as practical, to pursue a systematic course of study, opportunity will be given to those who wish to pursue a partial course to select such branches as can be studied to advantage and profit.

The Tecumseh High School ranks as high today, as at any other time in its history, and the attendance last year was larger, both of resident and non-resident students, than for many years previous, and with its present corps of instructors, we predict for it a prosperous year, which will begin Sept. 3d.

Catalogues will be mailed to all who may apply for them or further information obtained upon application to Dr. North, Secretary of the school board, or to Prof. L. M. Kellogg, Superintendent.

TECUMSEH, MICH., AUG. 23, 1894.

President Cleveland has until next Monday, Aug. 27th, to sign the tariff bill or veto it.

One thing the people have reason to be thankful for, at least Congress will very soon adjourn.

Half a loaf is better than no bread. That is the view the House took of the tariff situation, and it was evidently a wise one.

John J. Ingalls thinks the country is going to the dogs and it will never get on the right track until he is returned to the Senate.

They have peculiar ways of doing everything down South. The other day a Birmingham man hanged himself with a trace chain.

As the tariff and money questions are now settled for some time to come, let us all buckle down to work and boom business for the next few months.

Santa Anna's saddle was sold the other day down in Texas. Here is a job for our harness makers. Legitimate trade is dull now. Why not go into a rebel business?

The free coal bill passed the House by a vote of 130 to 104, being substantially a party vote. The lumber bill received almost exactly the same vote, 203 to 102.

The President has gone to Gray Gables for a needed rest and taken the tariff and river and harbor bills with him. The general impression is that he will sign both of them.

The tariff bill as passed, although not what it should have been, is a great improvement on the McKinley law. It cuts the duty all along the line, and reduces the average rate from 50 to 38 per cent.

On the bill for free barbed wire, that passed the House last week, several Republican members kicked over the traces and voted with the Democrats, the vote standing 187 in favor to 84 against.

Here is something for the oldest inhabitant to scratch his head over and seek to explain. Shelled corn is a cent more in this market today than wheat. Wheat is now quoted at fifty cents a bushel and corn at sixty cents.

If the price of corn is going as it now seems likely, it will necessarily affect most other staple commodities. For corn has at least as much to do with domestic prices as iron, whether the economists have found it out or not.

The bill for free sugar passed the House last week by a vote of 270 to 11, both parties being practically a unit in its favor. This is said to be the largest affirmative yea and nay vote ever recorded in the House of Representatives.

The "pop-gun bills, as they were dubbed by the newspapers, all passed the House under whip and spur. There is no likelihood that the Senate will pass any of them, but the House acted wisely in putting itself on record upon these bills.

The Canarder steamship Campania has again broken the record. She made her last Western trip 2 hours and 55 minutes quicker than the best time hitherto, which is the biggest slice sheared off the record in many years. The present record is 5 days, 7 hours and 27 minutes.

The Supreme Court of Indiana says that it is quite as much the farmer's business to keep his cows off the railway track as it is the business of the railway company to keep its locomotives out of the farmer's past re field. The farmer must pay damage to the locomotive, and the company pays nothing for the cow.

Honest tariff reformers cannot commend directly the tariff bill as finally adopted, and yet all things considered, it is probably the best action that could be taken. It was a "condition and not a theory that confronted" the House, and the latter cut the Gordian knot by accepting a bill that takes a long stride in the right direction.

Speaking of Cameron, a Maryland politician made the prediction last week that the republican national convention would adopt a plank for the free coinage of silver and would nominate Cameron, and that his democratic opponent would be Adlai Stevenson. There's no tariff on predictions; everybody is free to indulge in the luxury of making them.

The conference of the American Bimetallic League, which began last week, is fairly well attended and its members seem to think that the outlook for silver has greatly improved since their last Washington meeting. While no official action has been or will be taken there are reasons for believing that friends of Senator Cameron in the League have been quietly sounding other members to ascertain how the candidacy of Mr. Cameron for the Presidency would be received by the silver people in their States. The principal business of the conference is secret and relates to the Congressional campaign.

The St. Paul Globe sizes up the Michigan Republican platform in this wise: The Michigan Republicans know how to dodge a brickbat. They don't intend to lose any votes on account of the silver question if slick words will butter parsnips. They "recognize the so-called silver question as one of the paramount issues of the day," which is a neat way of saying that they know a hawk from a handsaw, and "we believe that the people of this state and country can look to the Republican party, the party of ability and progress, as the only party that can give a wise and adequate solution of this question." Now if this isn't "silliin' enough to satisfy anybody then anybody is too infernally particular to belong to "a party of ability and progress," and should betake himself to Greenland or Corea.

The New York Evening Post says: We have no censure for those members of the house who finally decided to accept the senate amendments. We should have preferred to fight on till the people could pronounce their verdict upon certain Bitter South and Camden, but we acknowledge the force of Chairman Wilson's speech, in which he said that he had done everything in his power, and that he could do no more—he could not even hold his own supporters together any longer. We cannot ask the impossibilities of any man. Therefore, while we should have voted with Mr. Gorman and Mr. Watterson, if we had had a vote to give, we have nothing but praise for Mr. Wilson, who has proved himself a just and able and brave man throughout this long contest, and has actually sacrificed his health in his eagerness to do his duty.

No one who is familiar with the scandalous lobbying that has been done at this session of Congress was surprised when Senator Allen this week introduced a bill to prevent professional lobbying, the penalty provided for violation of the proposed law being a fine of from $1,000 to $5,000 and imprisonment from one to five years. The bill defines a lobbyist to be a person who habitually attempts to influence the legislative acts of Congress by soliciting members to support or oppose a measure. Such a law would doubtless prevent many future Congressional scandals, but it has not one chance out of a possible hundred to get enacted. If congressmen didn't encourage the lobbyists there would be no lobbyists. They live and thrive on the friendship of Congressmen. Therefore Mr. Allen's bill will not become a law.

If the President would follow the wishes of nine people out of every ten there would be no doubt of his action. He would sign the bill, let Congress adjourn, and give the people a chance to see how much of a factor in the "hard times" the tariff really is. There is one serious thing about this tariff bill. The Democrats publicly defend it as a good one, and privately swear at it as a bad one, while the republicans just reverse it by publicly abusing the bill and privately congratulating each other on getting so good a measure. Meanwhile the sugar trust is working to prevent the Senate passing the bill for free sugar, the only one of the House bills passed as a conscience-easer that could possibly pass the Senate. Secretary Carlisle has written a letter to Senator Harris which, while not saying so in so many words, is against those bills, notwithstanding the supposition that Mr. Carlisle wants free coal and iron.

Jos. Fraser of New York takes a very sensible and business like view of the income tax question. In a recent interview he said: "The majority of the Democratic Party opposed to the income tax comes more from the Eastern States than from the South or West, because our incomes are larger. We must remember that $100,000,000 is collected for pensions for our Northern soldiers who engaged in the rebellion. Second that the Treasury must have a surplus of at least sufficient money to meet expenses, or this constant unrest and fear that the Government cannot redeem its indebtedness in gold will not be quieted. Without present revenue we are 70,000,000 short each year, and this constant drain of gold from our Treasury will continue. "If by taxing our incomes for five years, as is provided by the Senate bill, it will alleviate that evil, it would be worth all it cost to all the men who have an income of $4,000 or more in the stability it will give to the business and currency of the nation."

The House Recedes.

The determination of the loyal democrats of the house to recede from their position and accept the senate bill was the only thing they could do, unless they wanted the McKinley bill to remain in operation.

It was discovered last Friday that Caffery, Blanchard, Allen and Kyle, known as the sugar senators, had signed an agreement to not vote for any bill that did not provide for a bounty for sugar grown this year.

When this fact became known the democrats of the house at once saw through the desperate scheme of Gorman and Brice. These two worthies learned of the sugar agreement before Wilson and Crisp did, and then proposed free sugar to the house conferees through the senate conferees, evidently with the expectation that the house would jump at free sugar and then all tariff legislation would be defeated in the senate.

This was a sly scheme, as it would permit Gorman and Brice to vote for the bill and pretend to be good democrats, knowing all the while that Caffery, Blanchard, Allen, Kyle, Hill and Irby would vote with republicans and kill the bill.

We did not expect the senate could be forced into concessions at the time Cleveland's letter to Wilson was made public, but one great thing was accomplished by it—Gorman, Brice and Smith have been shown up as the real obstacles in the way of tariff reform. And the president and the house have shown their honest intentions to redeem party pledges. Now there is no doubt the senate bill will become a law.

By making a fight on the senate bill the house democrats had everything to gain and nothing to lose. The senate had passed a bill and the house could make it a law at any time provided no concessions could be forced from the senate. It has become plain that no concessions will be allowed by Gorman, Brice and their fellow traitors and conspirators. Therefore the only thing left for the house is to do what was to-day decided upon in democratic caucus by an overwhelming majority.

Now let the bill become a law and we can deal with the traitors afterwards.—Toledo Bee.

Farmers' Home Reading Club.

Two letters were received last week by the Farm and Dairy editor, asking for particulars regarding the F. H. R. C. This is a home course of reading in agriculture, horticulture, dairying, etc., on the Chautauqua plan. It is a grand thing for our farmers, their wives, sons, daughters and the the "hired man." Write Prof. F. B. Mumford, Sec'y., Agricultural College, Mich. We are reading this course and could not be hired to drop it. We expect to keep at it (in spite of the tariff, or the exit of silver) until we "graduate." Too much cannot be said in favor of this course for our young farmers who have had no opportunity to pursue a course of study at the Agricultural College. In these days it is almost criminal to live in ignorance. The well-informed, educated, practical, hard working business farmer is the one who ought to make the most money, and—he generally does. He who wills may win.—Michigan Farmer.

All Hope Gone

Eight Years of Suffering—Death Would Have been Relief

But Hood's Sarsaparilla Effected a Perfect Cure.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"For about eight years I have patiently suffered from a discouraging and weakening failure of the liver, kidneys and bladder. During this long time I suffered everything but death. Different medicines were taken but without any avail. It was on the fifth of August, 1891, that the doctor told my mother that he

of the recovery of her child. For eight weeks I lived on nothing but brandy and beef-tea. I could not even keep milk on my stomach. In May I was just able to be taken to a hospital, where I remained until January, 1893. The physician declared my case incurable. All hope was gone, but I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. From the day I began to take the medicine I began to feel better. I have taken several bottles and have been able to assist my mother in light household duties. I surely owe my life to that great medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla.

the condition I was in before I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. It can only be realized by experience and few live to pass through and get better from such a complication of diseases." MISS ORTENCIA E. ALLEN, Salem, Michigan.

IF LOVE COULD RULE THE WORLD.

If love could rule the universe,
How changed would all things be!
He would remove in language terse
All bars in his decree.
No rank could ever intervene
To stay affection's course.
'Twould bow its head with lowly mien
Before his gentle force.
The earth would be so bright,
The radiant sun
Would shed its warmth and light
For every one.

A king might then a peasant wed,
An empress love her page,
A seamstress with a princess bred
Might throw her winsome gage.
Sweet sentiment would rule the earth,
With banner high unfurled,
And happiness no more a dearth,
Could love but rule the world.
How happy all would be,
An Eden vale
Again the earth would see,
Could love prevail.

TOWNLEY'S HEIR.

There are a few Philadelphians living who still remember the "Fourteen Chimneys," a noted city landmark dating back to the Revolution. They were recognized in the old directories thus: "Sam. May, oysterman, No. 5 Fourteen Chimneys." They stood on the west side of Fifth street, above Race, and extended from the southwest corner of Mulberry alley south to the present No. 222, now an ink factory. In fact, the back part of this establishment is the only portion of the building left, and this was a part of the Ettris mansion, belonging to a curious family who owned much of the land thereabouts and noted for eccentricities in dress and opinions. There were in all eight houses, and they had been built to fit the chimneys, as these were much higher than the two story dwellings. These stood back from the street and had gardens in front from which the neighbors were supplied with vegetables.

The principal industry here in early times must have been butchering, as layers of bones, cattle horns and heads are turned up when the street has been opened. In 1818 one of the most respected residents of the "Fourteen Chimneys" was a Miss Rachel Barron, a bright mulatto who had been left a small fortune by a member of the Biddle family, whose servant she had been for 20 years.

Miss Barron was very charitable and did much good in aiding the poor, who were plenty enough in the numerous courts and alleys of that vicinity, and it is in this connection that our story begins.

In 1806 a man named Richard Vane Townley was living in Philadelphia. He was an Englishman, handsome in appearance, with polished manners and pleasing address. He had many friends, as it was reported that he came from an excellent family at home, but there was a mystery about his means of living. He always had plenty of money, dressed and lived extensively, so it was supposed that he had an income from property in England, but all this was dissipated by the report that he had been principal in a duel at Saratoga Springs; that the alleged cause was a quarrel at the card table, and that the courteous, stately Englishman was in effect a professional gambler.

When this was known, it affected Mr. Townley's position in society adversely, but card playing was a recognized industry in those times and carried no popular odium with it, and that gentleman still seemed to prosper.

When he came to Philadelphia, his companion was a boy about 15, who was his only child, the mother being dead. James was a delicate lad, but gentle, and he was put in a private school and much liked by his associates, but his father, mindful of the vicissitudes of his profession, bound James to Benjamin Jones, at the southeast corner of Second and Chestnut streets, to learn engraving, and this he did, becoming a good workman. His father, however, supplied him with too much money, and he ceased to work, became unsteady and finally dissipated. When left without resources by the death of the elder Townley, he was forced to go to work at his trade.

Richard Townley left nothing to his son, but before dying he confided to a well known member of the old bar certain papers and told that gentleman the story of his wasted life.

In the latter part of the eighteenth century Apley Park, in Shropshire, now one of the show places of England, was owned by Sir Edmund Foster. It had once belonged to the Lucys of Charlicote and came to the Fosters by marriage. Sir Edmund had two sisters. One married a Devonshire rector named Childs, the other Philip Miley Townley of Shrewsbury. Both Mr. and Mrs. Townley died early, leaving an only son —Richard Vane Townley.

Richard was adopted by his bachelor uncle, Sir Edmund, and was sure to enter on an inheritance of £12,000 per annum, but he was wild and reckless and was sent away from Oxford in disgrace, and for a time forbidden to appear at Apley Park. Sir Edmund was getting quite infirm and much controlled and influenced by his housekeeper, Mrs. Darby, who had been in the family from girlhood. She interceded for Richard, and he was finally restored to favor and came back to the park, only to get into a fresh scrape. Mrs Darby had a niece staying with her, a very beautiful and good girl, and with her Richard fell madly in love, and failing to get her on less honorable terms persuaded her to elope and get married.

The aunt had been away on a visit and returned to find her niece gone. Suspecting the worst, she at once informed Sir Edmund of his nephew's new delinquency and had him send for his lawyer. A new will was made and no mention therein of Richard Townley.

Shortly afterward Mrs. Darby learned the truth and found that she had succeeded in disinheriting her son-in-law, but was too shrewd to let the master know the real facts, as he was intensely proud and would regard the misalliance as more flagitious than the supposed seduction.

Mr. Scrope of Shrewsbury was the family solicitor, an upright gentleman, who had known Townley's father, and he persuaded the baronet to make his will as follows: Mrs. Childs, his niece, had the property for life; then her children by seniority inherited, and then heirs male, and failing them or issue the son of Richard Townley to inherit in fee. As there were nine of the Childs children, James Townley's chance of gaining the inheritance his father had forfeited seemed very remote.

Sir Edmund died, leaving a large personal estate in addition to Apley Park, and the Childs entered into possession.

James Townley had no force of character and was, moreover, improvident and careless, and he added to his responsibilities by marrying a very pretty young woman, named Cray, who was a seamstress in one of those one storied shops on Eighth street, below Sansom. Each did their best to make a living, but the husband's health failed, and then poverty came. Mrs. Townley was delicate and could do little to support the household, now increased by the birth of a sickly boy.

Rachel Barron had known the elder Townley and nursed his son when ill with a fever, and she came forward, took the stricken family to her own home at the "Fourteen Chimneys" and cared for them. The husband was then dying from quick consumption and the wife failing in health, and both were in effect paupers.

In the month of March, 1827, a small, thin man, evidently English and looking very much like a ferret, came to see James Townley. He was, he said, a friend of his father's and had but recently heard of the son's affliction. He talked sympathetically, left several dollars and promised to call again, and this he did several times, always giving Mrs. Townley money.

Rachel watched him closely and became very distrustful. Mrs. Townley had told her something of her husband's history, and after many injunctions to do nothing until she returned the resolute Rachel paid a visit to the late Richard McCall.

He heard her story indifferently, but advised that Mrs. Townley should sign no papers without letting him know of it. The woman hurried home, and entering the house heard some one talking up stairs. She went at once to the Townley's room and peeped in. Two men were at the bedside. James, propped up by pillows, had before him on a piece of board a paper, and his wife had just placed a pen in his feeble hand. On the table was a pile of notes and gold.

With a rush the mulatto grabbed the paper, almost upsetting both men, who turned on her fiercely.

"Be careful what you're doing, woman. That is a legal document that Mr. Townley has received money to execute, and I'll hold you responsible for damages."

"All right! This yer is my house. You get out and take yer money with you. We ain't signing anything today."

And the men were resolutely hustled down stairs. In an hour after Mr. McCall and his clerk came walking in and heard the story.

"Let me see the paper. Ah, yes, a shrewd scheme to get Townley to convey his right to a magnificent estate for $250. We are just in time, it seems."

Townley was almost unconscious, but he lived long enough to know that he was the owner of Apley Park. This freak of fortune came about in this manner.

Mrs. Childs' husband died before the baronet, and she was the head of the family. Shortly after coming to Apley Park the eldest son broke his neck in the hunting field and was brought home dead. His elder sister was in Germany, and her mother received a letter telling of her sudden illness, and with several children, a maid and a man attendant started at once to cross the channel, posted through France and got safely to Germany, and with two carriages was driving along the Rhine, when the bank gave way and all were precipitated into the river, and the maid and postilion alone escaped. Thus the Childs family was extinguished.

The attorney for the heir lost no time in communicating with Mr. McCall, apprising him that one of their clerks had sailed for America, and that his errand was to make some arrangement for his own benefit with the new heir and to warn that gentleman at once.

Thanks to Rachel Barron, no warning was needed. James Townley died two months after hearing of his good fortune, and his wife, attended by Rachel, started for England. Inside of two years both the widow and son died. Rachel married a very respectable white man in the neighborhood, moved to Brighton and kept a hotel there, much frequented by Shropshire people. Her property here was looked after by Richard Vaux, who was also a patron of her hotel at Brighton. She died in 1855, quite wealthy.

The Foster family again came into ownership of Apley Park, and it is now one of the most beautiful places in England.—Philadelphia Times.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. A WHEELMAN'S TROUBLES.

Some Thrilling Experience Among the Sand Hills of Colorado.

DENVER, COL., July 26th, '94.

DEAR EDITOR:—My last letter describing my bicycle tour to the time of entering Colorado. Leaving Ogallala I continued along the Union Pacific Ry. as far as Bevier, where I again crossed the Platte river to avoid sand hills. Here the ranches were very rare and the roads very many. I rode under one of those happy stars, which being only metaphorical stars, shine by day. Good fortune and a little good judgment guided me among the many roads, and I reached Julesburg after a hot ride. Now I must tell you of a chase, which I had continued for three days. At Kearney, Neb. I heard of a young man who had started for Denver from there a day and a half before I arrived. If I could overtake him I might have a companion through a desolate sandy region in Col., so I had striven to that end, and at Julesburg I learned that he had left there only three hours before me. Supper was soon disposed of and I started in hot pursuit, hoping to overtake him at Sterling, Col. (65 miles away). There were two miles of loose sand just out of Julesberg and in my haste instead of walking I pushed my wheel desperately through it and was soon out on good roads. But my knee commenced to stiffen and soon I could only rest it on the coaster and pumped away with one leg. I had strained a muscle in my knee. It was growing dark rapidly. The huge sun went out of sight over the hills to the west. There was no ranch in sight and I rode on getting more desperate each moment. I was getting exhausted and mental strain with bodily fatigue was overcoming me. Then far in the distance I heard barking, and upon a rising piece of ground I saw a spark of light. On I plunged toward this light and was almost delirious in my flight, for I did not look at anything but the light, and suddenly I heard a girlish voice cry out "lookout for the barb-wire." I leaped from my wheel just in time to avoid lacerating myself on that barbarous fence. Then I crawled under, dragging my wheel, and began to almost beg for a night's lodging. You do not need to beg for hospitality in the west. The girl turned to her mother who was near and simply said "he can stay can't he?" "Of course" was the answer most welcome to me. A young man put my wheel in the house, and I was ushered in limping, but happy in spirits. The house was large and I was given a nice room, evidently the company chamber. They brought me liniments of all kinds, including Kendall's Spavin Cure. Even a glass of lemonade was brought up, and I soon was sleeping peacefully. I arose at five to take up my journey. On the table in the dining room where my wheel was, I found a generous lunch, and I parted gladly. The road was now two deep ruts and my pedal would strike when down unless I kept a perfect line in the center or turned from side to side keeping the up pedal on the close side of the rut. I was still riding with one leg and only allowed the other to rest on the pedal, but could use no force on that side. As the day advanced it become insufferably hot. The alkali plains were all about me. A white alkali dust impregnated the air. The road was white and occasional patches of cactus were all that relieved the white glare of the plains. Stations were nine miles apart. After I reached Red Lionand I commenced to follow the railroad again. Thirst I could only relieve by drinking ginger soda at these stations. For fifty miles this kind of touring progress continued before I reached Sterling. There I found the object of my chase had left an hour before. Exhaustion conquered and pursuit was impossible. Dinner and a very long rest put me in good condition, and to my joy my knee hurt no more, and I rode freely. The Capt. of the Sterling Bike Club rode fifteen miles to Merino with me. Here I crossed the Platte again, away from the railway. Night was approaching. Soon I came to an irrigation ditch flowing across the main road. Off came my shoes and stockings and with my Victor on my back I waded across. My shoes I replaced and rode on. Buffalo gnats and huge musquitoes swarmed on my bare legs. Two more ditches were waded, but at the fourth I stepped up to my waist at the very edge. Darkness was about me now. Some bird sat on the ground and sang "too deep", "too deep." I did not dispute. I could not go on, so I retreated half a mile to a house, where I was taken in, my cloths dried, and I was given a bed. In the morning I got up at four o'clock and prepared a breakfast for me, and I was on the road by five. After wading four or five more irrigation ditches I reached a good road and was soon in Fort Morgan. My bike tires were full of cactus thorns, and after dinner I sat down to the task of mending my tires. This was useless, and I soon gave it up. Looking out of the window I saw a wheelman slowly passing. His head was almost resting on his breast, and he was the picture of despair and exhaustion. I nailed him, and he was my man from Kearney. At four that morning he had left Fort Morgan to make Denver, ninty miles. He had taken the wrong road, and his cyclometer showed that he had walked and pushed his wheel for forty-six miles over the sand hills. He resolved to take the train, but at last agreed to rest, and next morning to start again for Denver. Early next morning we started. We left the railway station, now to pass through a perfectly treeless region. For nearly twenty miles we rode and walked (for there was three or four miles of sand) before we reached a ranch. The man in charge got up a royal breakfast, and almost famished, we soon removed all signs of eatables from the table. The wilderness of this region can be imagined when I tell you that there was a continual chatter of prairie dogs on all sides and their holes in the road. Snakes lay basking in the sun, half outside of holes where the dogs vanished at our appearance. Cayottes loped across the plains by the dozen, and even an antelope stood and gazed at us from a hill. We are now in sight of the mountains, which lay like piled up blue clouds on the horison. Except for the heat we had a very easy ride the remaining distance to Denver. We arrived there about six o'clock. I was twenty-four days in getting to Denver; nineteen days actually on the road; distance a little over 1,500 miles by road. Next week a friend of mine and myself will cross the Rocky mountains on our bicycles. This has been done very rarely with success. I will write an account of our trip later.

CO. C. IN CAMP.

Hot, dry and dusty.

If you don't believe it you should have gone to camp with the boys.

Co. C. left Tecumseh on the early train Tuesday morning, August 14th, and arrived at Island Lake about 2 o'clock that afternoon. The first thing in order was to get dinner, and the balance of the afternoon was spent in unpacking baggage, pitching tents and putting things in readiness for camp life.

Wednesday morning the daily routine of camp began in earnest and was followed for five days, the camp formally breaking up last Monday morning. All say that the camp was one of pleasure and profit to both men and officers.

Co. C. was domiciled in ten mess tents, where the boys were all well provided for. Below is the list with the occupants of each:

Mess No. 1—Sergt. Farley, Privates Brown and McCollum, Clerk Bolan.

Mess No. 2—Sergt. Chase, Corp. Gray, Privates S. J. McClure and Lowry, Musician Shoebottom.

Mess No. 3—Sergt. Walker, Privates Roy Hughes, Stevenson, Hall, Spaulding.

Mess No. 4—Privates Crossman, Jenkins, Wescott, Hubbard, M. Hughes.

Mess No. 5—Corporals Burlingame, Spaulding, Tiffany, Watkins, Private Conklin.

Mess No. 6—Privates Schroeder, Hodges, Wertner, Liddle, Heck.

Mess No. 7—Private Stewart and Sim Boyd, W. Wallace.

Mess No. 8—Corp. Heesen, Privates Brezie, Fred Hall, Kerr, Van Winkle.

Mess No. 9—Privates Beneway, Hastings, Smith, Gregg, Austin, Beck.

Mess No. 10—Sergts. Bowen, Howell, Corp. Lee, Private Rude.

The experience of Co. C. differed but little from that of previous years. There was much hard work to be done, with but little recreation, but the boys stood the racket all right, and there was but little sickness in the company. Their few leisure hours were profitably employed. Through Corporal Gray's influence the boys were entertained by a barefoot reel, the music being furnished by the mandolin club of Co. H., of Jackson. Mr. Armstrong, of the same company, possesses a beautiful tenor voice, and helped pass away the time with some new and original songs.

D. T. Hall filled the position of brigade hospital steward with Dr. Tefft as assistant. They had seven hospital stewards and forty privates in charge, constituting the hospital corps. There was considerable sickness in the Third and Fourth regiments, so that the hospital service had plenty of work on hand. The management of the corps was highly creditable to the officers in charge. The correspondent of the Tribune, in a lengthy report of his camp experience, says:

The sick soldiers in Camp Rich are so well cared for that it is hardly a misfortune to spend a part of the time in the hospital. No military camp in Michigan has ever had so complete and efficient a medical department. Out here, away from any populous center, save the temporary city of canvas, as complete a hospital service is maintained as can be found in a metropolis. Hospital Steward Daniel T. Hall, of the First Regiment, is acting brigade hospital steward and his seven years' experience in state encampments and eminent fitness for the position render him a thoroughly efficient officer. He is assisted by Dr. F. O. Tefft.

The company broke camp last Monday morning, packed up at once and took the train for home, arriving here on the noon Lake Shore train. They were pretty well "tuckered out," but all agreed that their week's experience in practical military life had been both pleasant and profitable.

It was "hot, dry and dusty."

During a day on the road last week we happened at Frank DePuy's at exactly high noon. An interval of an hour was taken to enjoy Frank's hospitality, and we found him fully equal to the occasion. Private letters received from Rev. David Lewis state that the report in last week's paper about his injury was exaggerated. Dr. J. M. Rice has written for the September Forum an instructive article on the school-excursion taken by teachers and pupils of the Anderson, Ind., public schools to historic places in Virginia—the first excursion of the kind, with a definite educational purpose, ever taken in the United States. Dr. Rice explains in detail the educational value of it.

Last Friday Carl Updyke, a 15-year old son of Jas. Updyke, fell 35 feet from the top of a willow tree back of Abner Wilson's house. He struck upon a pile of stones and cut his forehead, one bone of his left leg was broken near the ankle, and the other dislocated, his back injured somewhat, and both bones of his left arm broken in the wrist. He was carried home and Dr. Frost assisted by Dr. Woodward and Dr. Knight set the bones. He is getting along very well considering the serious injuries he received, although he will be laid up for some time. The wonder is that he was not killed outright.

He has a fine peach orchard, the crop is a good one, and is bringing good prices, so Mr. Langan feels correspondingly happy. His old Tecumseh friends will be glad to hear this good news about him.

Our Deerfield correspondent reports a very heavy storm of wind, rain and hail one mile southeast of that place, about 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon. It has been reported that I was going out of the insurance business, but that is a mistake. I have only given up one company, the Phoenix of Hartford, that I thought did not use me right, and was trying to play hog. I have still seventeen Companies, either one of them as good as the one I gave up, and some of them with nearly double the assets. I wish to say to my friends that I am here to stay and will take care of your insurance when it expires. About the first of Oct. I expect to move into the James block, under the Masonic Temple. WHOLESALE POISONING.

Ex-Gov. Winans May Have Been Murdered by a Woman, Who Has Since Died.

DETROIT, Aug. 20.—Rumors that ex-Gov. Winans had been poisoned by a woman at Hamburg have led to an investigation. Dr. Smith, the medical attendant, said Mr. Winans was not poisoned. But he said the woman in question, Mrs. Butler, had poisoned her father, mother and husband, who died. She also poisoned the doctor himself, he alleges, and a farm-hand. Then fearing arrest, she took poison herself and died. A few days after the sudden death of ex-Gov. Winans at his home in Hamburg there were rumors that there was something mysterious about it. These rumors did not spread beyond the confines of the village until the suicidal death by poison a few days ago of Mrs. Julia Butler, a widow who has lived in Hamburg many years. Then tongues were loosened, and it was quite freely stated that the ex-governor had gone the way of the father, mother and husband of the suicide. Mrs. Butler resided upon a big farm upon the borders of Whitmore lake. Dr. Smith declares emphatically that the ex-governor died from natural causes to his certain knowledge, and that the dead man never ate or drank a thing prepared by the woman.

Dr. Smith is blamed on all sides for keeping back the story until she herself escaped by the poison route and are not half satisfied with his version of the death of ex-Gov. Winans. Some of them still declare she had ample opportunities to poison him, as she did her father, mother, husband, young Whitlock, and the doctor himself. Not only was she at Winans', but they declare the ex-governor was several times at her home not long before his death in connection with a loan he made her soon after her husband's death to buy out claims against the home farm.

CHARGED WITH BRIBERY.

Members of Detroit's School Board in Trouble.

DETROIT, Aug. 17.—A most sensational episode occurred at a meeting of the city school trustees Wednesday night, when four of the trustees, Joseph A. Walsh, William C. Liphart, Milo H. Davis and Julius Leichtenburg were arrested and taken to police headquarters, charged with accepting bribes. The investigation was instigated by Mayor Pingree. The arrested trustees were locked up to wait arraignment, bail not being permitted.

The men are charged with soliciting and receiving $25 each from E. H. Acheson, the representative of the Manitowoc Seating company of Manitowoc, Wis., which company was given the contract for furnishing a large number of seats for new schools not long ago. It has developed that they were led into a trap set by the detectives and carried out by Agent Acheson. The alleged bribery deal was made in Acheson's hotel, the detectives and a stenographer witnessing the transactions through a hole in a partition.

The accused men were arraigned Thursday, pleaded not guilty, and gave bail in $5,000 each. Mayor Pingree has long insisted that several of the city board were crooked and warned members he would catch them. The mayor says other arrests will follow, as contracts have been sold regularly for six months.

PASSED AWAY.

Death at Ishpeming of Ex-State Senator Swift.

ISHPEMING, Aug. 17.—William F. Swift died at his home here Thursday morning. He was engaged in the mining hardware supply business here. He was born in Sharon, Litchfield county, Conn., July 10, 1848, and removed to Ishpeming after graduating at Yale in 1873. He was city recorder from 1873 to 1879, inclusive, and in 1880 he was elected mayor. In 1881-'82 he was state senator from this district, defeating A. P. Swineford, the democratic candidate. For several years he was associated in the law business with E. E. Osborne, now general attorney for the Chicago & Northwestern railway company in Chicago.

TEN YEARS OF CRIME.

Martin Blow Has Been Poisoning Farm Stock at Dryden.

LAPEER, Aug. 18.—Sheriff McArthur has arrested Martin Blow, a young farmer of Dryden, on the charge of poisoning farm stock. For ten years past fine stock in the vicinity of Blow's home has been a hazardous investment. Sudden and mysterious deaths of horses and cattle were frequent and post-mortem examinations showed the presence of some kind of poison. The heaviest loser has been William H. Blow, father of the young man under arrest. Mr. Blow is a man of considerable prominence among Lapeer county farmers, being at one time president of the Lapeer County Agricultural Society. He was formerly a prosperous man, but is now old, nearly bankrupt, and is likely to lose his farm through the conduct of his son. Young Blow had often been suspected by the neighbors, but evidence could never be obtained which would fix the crime on him. Six months ago he was arrested at the instance of his father and brother, but owing to the want of evidence he was released. Recently two cows belonging to Mrs. Philo Gibbs died suddenly and it was found that death had been caused by a dose of aconite. Blow's arrest followed. He confessed his crime to the sheriff.

In his confession the young man claimed his uncle, who lives near Ionia, was responsible, having furnished him with the poison and rewarded him with money so he was not obliged to do much work. His father and uncle had had trouble over some property and his uncle is said to have threatened at that time that his brother should never prosper. Through the agency of the man's own son the prophecy has been fulfilled. Young Blow also gave as his reason for poisoning other people's stock that he did it to avert suspicion.

The uncle, who is a farmer at Ionia, and who, it is said, is dissatisfied with a division of some property, was arrested and brought here, and is now in jail. His examination is set for this week. The son has been bound over to the circuit court. The uncle, Sherman Blow, denies everything, and says that he and his brother were always on the best of terms, and he knows nothing of the crimes.

The governor at once telegraphed Secretary Gresham that Lindholm was wanted here and will have him extradited. Ever since Lindholm's departure the authorities have been quietly searching for him. Prosecuting Attorney Gardner said that Lindholm will be promptly prosecuted on the embezzlement charge, and also that he undoubtedly knows all about the salaries amendment fraud, and that his testimony in the pending case is of great importance.

Important Intelligence From All Parts.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Regular Session.

IN the senate on the 13th no business of importance was transacted beyond the confirmation, in executive session, of the Chinese treaty, the vote standing 47 to 50....At a caucus of democrats of the house members, shortly before convening, a resolution was offered by Speaker Crisp, which was carried, advising the recession from the disagreement to the senate's amendments to the Wilson bill, the passing of the amended bill, and the introduction of separate bills making coal, iron, sugar and barbed wire free of all duties. When the house convened in regular session the resolution was carried by a vote of 130 to 21. At a session held in the evening it passed separate bills for free sugar, iron, coal and barbed wire.

A MESSAGE was received in the senate on the 4th from the house informing the senate that the house had passed bills placing coal, iron ore, barbed wire and sugar on the free list, in which it asked the concurrence of the senate. Bills were passed promoting Commodore Louis C. Sertori, retired, to rear admiral on the retired list, and authorizing soldiers' home managers to extend outdoor relief to veterans. The house was not in session.

In the senate on the 15th the conference report on the civil service bill was presented and adopted. A letter was read from Secretary Carlisle in regard to the four pending bills—free iron, coal, sugar and barbed wire—declaring that if the four bills became laws there would be a deficit at the end of the present fiscal year of about $30,000,000, of which over $28,000,000 would be caused by the free sugar bill alone....In the house no business of importance was transacted beyond the introduction of a resolution by Gen. Black in regard to silver coinage, who asked for unanimous consent for its immediate adoption, but it was referred to the committee.

IN the senate on the 16th a joint congratulatory resolution from the United States to Hawaii was adopted. Tariff bills relating to sugar and other articles in dispute were referred to a committee, and Senator Hill's measure providing for the exclusion and deportation of alien anarchists was passed without division....In the house there was but a bare quorum present. The deficiency appropriation bill was further considered, as also was the silver coinage resolution.

IN the senate on the 17th a motion was made to appoint Senator White to the vacancy on the finance committee caused by the death of Senator Vance. Senator Murphy was also put in nomination, but under the rules the nominations went over. The conference report on the deficiency bill was submitted....There was hardly a quorum in the house, as members were anxious to get away and were leaving on every train. No business of importance was transacted.

Ripans Tabules: one gives relief

The Epworth League Convention.

On Tuesday afternoon at about three o'clock, the most successful district Epworth League convention that has yet been held was opened by singing "All hail the power of Jesus name." This was followed by a short devotional service led by Rev. L. P. Davis, presiding elder of the district. He read a part of the fifteenth chapter of St. John, and in a few appropriate remarks he emphasized the following thought: "Our success as Christians depends upon our intimate connection with Christ—working in his name, and faithfully performing our duty, and thereby showing our true discipleship." After several songs, and prayer by Rev. L. P. Davis, Frank L. Parker, president of the Clinton League, welcomed the delegates to the hospitality of the Clinton League. Among the many good thoughts expression in his address were the following: "We cannot intermingle among each other without exerting a decided influence. It is of the utmost importance that our influence be for good. If we individually and collectively, are as willing to receive blessings as God is to give them, we will have a wonderful outpouring of God's spirit during the convention." He then warmly welcomed all visitors "to our town, to our church, and to our homes."

Fraternal greetings of welcome were then extended to the delegates and visitors, in behalf of the other young peoples societies of Clinton, by their respective presidents.

The president of the District League, S. Milo Dole, then responded to the welcome of the Clinton League, in a few happy words. He expressed the desire that this convention may be made intensely practical.

The convention was then favored with a selection by the Clayton Ladies' Quartette.

Pres. Dole called upon Rev. Palmer to respond to the greetings of the other young peoples' societies. The speaker spoke a few minutes on the amount of good that the various young peoples' organizations are accomplishing, and happily ended with the hope that "we all shall victoriously progress in our separate spheres of work and at last meet above when the armies shall be forever one."

This was followed by very interesting reports from the different Leagues in the district. Many interesting statistics were given which told of the prosperous condition of the Epworth League as a whole, in the district. The afternoon service then closed by singing, and after the afternoons feast of spiritual sustenance, all went below to satisfy the demands of the physical man.

TUESDAY EVENING SESSION.

The evening session consisted of two addresses. The first, entitled "The significance of certain modern improvements." by Rev. H. Cansfield, of Ridgeway; and the second, "The witness of the spirit," by Rev. C. W. Baldwin, of Addison. The first address epitomized was as follows: "Movement is a good characterization of this present century." He then vividly portrayed the difference in facilities for travel between our own time and that of our fathers. "The modes of commerce have been revolutionized. Science and art have made great strides." The speaker then followed, statistically, the growth and development of the various young peoples' movements. He noted the object for which each society was definitely started. He enumerated the reigning evils of the day, plainly outlined the duty of every young Christian, and advocated every worker for Christ, to gain a positive experience.

Rev. C. W. Baldwin then held our closest attention for about half an hour. His address was a model of originality and clearness of expression. In speaking of the usefulness of the League, he said, "The secret of strength is not necessarily in numbers. * * * However great our number may be in the aggregate, the strength of the society depends not upon numbers, but upon the state of the units, of which the society is composed."

WEDNESDAY MORNING SESSION.

The Wednesday morning session was largely taken up with the business proceedings of the convention. After quite a close contest, Mr. Frank Parker, of Clinton, was elected district president for the ensuing year. The cabinet members were then elected.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

In the afternoon a very instructive and interesting paper was read by Clarence Hurry, of Tecumseh, entitled "The League and revivals." Mr. Hurry handled his subject in a very masterly manner. He strongly urged loyalty upon every member of the Epworth League; Loyalty to God; loyalty to the League; and not only during the revivals in the winter time, but during the hot summer months, when the zeal of so many Christians seems to die out.

WEDNESDAY EVENING SESSION.

In the evening the convention was highly gratified by being favored with an address by Mr. E. Pierce, of Saginaw, State president of the Epworth League. Mr. Pierce spoke briefly of this young peoples' movement.

The new officers of the District League then appeared on the platform, and were heartly cheered.

Ex-President Dole made his retiring address, and after several songs the convention adjourned.

Throughout the convention there was the utmost enthusiasm manifested. All came resolved to receive good, and all went away strengthened, resolved to work more faithfully and more zealously along every line of Christian work.

Reunion of the Hoagland Family.

The fourth annual reunion of the Hoagland family was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Hoagland, of Britton. No pains were spared to make the occasion a most enjoyable one. Family History.

The history of the Hoagland family for 1893-4 is as follows:

The first event of importance was the long looked for visit of uncle and aunt Smith, of St. Johns, which all enjoyed. The ice once brokun one event rapidly followed another. We have very much to be thankful for in that death has not entered our family circle. The darkest shadow cast was the protracted illness of Mrs Samuel Kniffen, but that had its silver lining by bringing among us Mrs. O. L. Vreeland, of St. Johns, whose absence we to-day regret. The family has been increased by the marriage of Mr. Frank Hoagland to Miss Maud McCullough at the home of the bride in Lockport, N. Y; Mr Arthur Smith to Miss Tina Rupp, of Britton; Miss Dollie Patterson to Charles Hinds; Miss Jennie Osgood to Frederick Gorton, of Ypsilanti. By birth: To Mr. and Mrs. Hinds, a son. The home of our host and hostess has been gladdened by the advent of a daughter. The year will bring their many changes, but God grant there may be as much joy and as little sorrow as the last year has brought to our Hoagland family.

MACON MUSIC.

The Macon base ball club went to Clinton, Wednesday, to play the J. R. club, and played a mixture of the first nine T. H. S. and Stars, and were defeated by the score, 27 to 25, in favor of the Macon nine.

Mr. and Mrs. Revilo Sage, Mr. and Mrs. Percy K. Morgan, Mary Richart, Blanche Mills, the Misses Minnie and Cora Day, of Tecumseh, Frank Sage, Will Herring, Jesse Frost and others regaled at Wampler's lake, on Saturday last.

Tickets will be sold at the door at 10 cents each, the usual price for gold medal contests. The Macon contestants are making an honest effort, and will not disappoint their many friends. The same is no doubt true of Blissfield, Cadmus, Rome Center, Clinton, etc. An early attendance will secure a seat. We bespeak a large attendance from home and abroad.

We have not had the opportunity to interview them as to the pleasure derived from the trip, but trust from their radiant countenances as they passed through the village that A No. 1 was the verdict.

A Five Days' Outing.

On Wednesday, August 21st, with not a cloud to obscure the canopy of the heavens, a party from Holloway and vicinity, equipped with various articles that go to make up a first-class cottage, started for beautiful Sand Lake. The party consisted mostly of married people and their children: H. Holdridge, Geo. Holloway, D. Brown, Al. Macham, R. Boyd, A. Boyd, M. Smelzer, Mrs. Rev. Stead, Mrs. Satterthwaite and Mrs. Kelley, comprising thirty-seven in all. Now do not think for one moment that we did not have a grand time. Five days told the story in the Baker cottage. The first thing in order was to arrange things in a tasteful manner. Dinner was served at precisely 12 o'clock, a meal that was relished by all, after a ride of eighteen miles by carriage. Next in order was a trip in row boats upon the smooth lake. Not a ripple except the agitation made by the oarsman, the children laughing and eyes sparkling at new discoveries, as they skimmed over the water. Occasionally a blue gill's silver sides were plainly seen playing hide and seek among the ferns several feet below the surface. This was a great temptation, not only to the children but to the older ones as well, especially to Michael Smelzer, the fisherman that all can point to with pride. After several hours spent in gathering in the finny tribe supper was served and occasionally a fish story told. After supper, led by Mrs. Stead, the children gave some very interesting recitations and song service, that were listened to with great attention, especially the one by little Seymour Boyd, who gave several masterly recitations. We retired at 9 o'clock and had sweet dreams of the morrow. Only fifteen minutes slumber (at least the night seemed only that long) and the sun was shining in the cottage window.

On Wednesday Sand Lake was blessed with as fine a breeze as ever crossed Puget Sound. Even the birds in the grove seemed to understand that the Raisin people came there for a good time, and the air was rent with their beautiful songs, and everything in nature gave us a grand reception that will long be remembered by all. Even the grasshoppers played around the door, saying: "I am here at your service." Al Macham and Kinnie Holloway laid in store a fine line of angleworms but were so elated over their premeditated trip that they came away and left them on the doorstep at home. Our row boats six in number, were at our disposal, and were not idle much of the time.

The boys and girls were busy gathering water lillies that grow so plentifully along the beach among the rushes. Michael Smelzer captured the big fish. About 5 o'clock Friday Geo. Holloway, H. Holridge, R. Boyd, M. Smelzer and D. Brown were out fishing and all of a sudden the boat began to settle, and Mr. Smelzer got red the in face and began to draw in his side line, and it was lucky it was a side line. He drew up about twenty feet of side line and as he neared the lower extremity found a black bass that weighed TWENTY-TWO POUNDS! He says if anyone doubts this statement they may ask Mrs. Smelzer. He claims her word is perfectly reliable where she is known. Just as he had the fish secure a call for supper was heard and Mr. Smelzer sprang to the oars and the way he rowed would have bothered the Merrimac to have kept up with him.

Friday we received a pleasant call from Mr. and Mrs. Lang and Mr. and Mrs. Anthony.

We appreciate the hospitality of Mr. Curtis and return thanks for the nice string of fish given us, and other favors. Hope we may all enjoy a similar time next year.

TECUMSEH, MICH., AUG. 30, 1894.

The sugar trust did not get what it wanted, though it has got more than it deserved. It will not figure so largely hereafter, either in business or politics.

An exchange asks: "Where to some of the professional politicians get their money with which to prosecute their campaigns." Ask the trusts.

If you want more news about the war between China and Japan than we publish, subscribe for the papers over there and then stand on your head and read 'em.

The free sugar bill was defeated in the Senate by a combination of a few soft-shells with the Republicans. The latter voted solidly to save the sugar trust.

Republicans are apparently endeavoring to maintain the parity between money metals by having one-half their state conventions declare for gold and the other half for silver.

Senator Brice's prediction that the Senate tariff bill would be adopted "without the crossing of a t or the dotting of an i" has been verified. But there will be a dotting of an eye when Senator Brice stands for reelection.

The new tariff bill will have one good effect at least. It will eliminate tariff protection from politics. A few special bills can be passed next winter putting sugar, coal and iron on the free list, which will give the "last straw" to McKinleyism.

Editor Schermerhorn, of the Hillsdale Gazette is mentioned as a candidate for Congress in this district. He would make an admirable candidate, both personally and politically, but this is not his year. Bro. Schermerhorn is young yet and he can afford to wait.

The difference in average duty between the McKinley bill and the Wilson bill is not so much as the average man might suppose to listen to some tariff howlers. The McKinley bill collects an average duty of 47 per cent, the Wilson bill 40 per cent, and the Senate bill 39 per cent.

The Japan-China war may benefit the American farmer. Heavy shipments of rice are being made from this country to the Chinese and Japanese ports. They are not buying our cotton, but by way of [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] our corn.

Ex-Lieutenant-Governor Jones is mentioned as a candidate for Congress in this district. He would make a creditable candidate, and would be heartily supported in a fight for [illegible], but he could not secure the full district vote. He will doubtless enter the contest and be backed by a solid delegation from Jackson county.

The Democratic congressional convention soon to assemble has an important duty before it. A wise nomination will insure success, but it will be a very easy matter for the convention to insure defeat in advance. Personal feelings and predilections must be laid aside entirely, and a candidate nominated with sole reference to the party strength and political fitness.

The Lenawee county delegates will probably support Willard Stearns at the congressional convention, but they will not press his candidacy to the point of stirring up factional trouble. The Jackson delegates will act [illegible] with consideration. What [illegible] Stearns or almost any other Democrat is a harmonious selection and the nomination should be [illegible].

Farmers are wondering at the low price of wheat. They are [illegible] ing all the "blessings" of "protected markets" created by republican legislation for the farmer's special benefit. The McKinley law drove the shipments of American farmers to South America, with which they exchange many articles of products. The American farmer is now selling his wheat in the "open markets" under the broad shield of Wilson law, at 50 cents a bushel.

The Japan-China war may benefit the American farmer. Heavy shipments of rice are being made from this country to the Chinese and Japanese ports. They are not buying our cotton, but by way of [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] our corn.

SWEET PEAS.

Sweet peas of many colors, pink and blue,
And dusky purple mellowing to a hue
Of brown veined crimson when I look at you,
I think my eyes have borrowed of your dew.

Because I knew you long ago, mayhap
Your white face looking from a purple cap,
And your fine bonnet with a modest flap,
And loved you as you lay upon my lap.

Because I like the dear old fashioned traits,
Your stately carriage and your gracious ways!
Because my heart can never cease to praise
The tender beauty of the bygone days;

Because you smell of gardens long ago,
With old world lilies standing in a row,
And dahlias with their gaudy furbelow,
Is this the reason why I love you so?

Because—because, oh, blossoms, you have read
My secret heart, you seem to bow your head
For piety and pity of the dead,
Because perchance I leave a name unsaid.

SNAKE IN THE GRASS.

I detest Celia.

We were so happy till she came to stay with Jack's people and told me I was spoiling him. Of course it was no business of hers if I were—she admitted that—but she was so fond of me that she felt she must speak, being older and more experienced than I, and implore me to remember that it wasn't only my lover I was spoiling, but my future husband, and if I let him have his own way in everything now I should never be able to have mine by and by when we were married.

So Jack and I quarreled at the Hornes' dance last night.

I hardly know what it was about in the first instance, but it grew and grew until it seemed to me there was nothing we weren't quarreling about, and Jack was soon terribly in earnest. Though we had been engaged for three weeks, I'd no idea he had it in him to be so angry. And of course I lost my head and got angry, too—really angry—and said horrid things, and—and—I told him that our engagement was broken off, and there must be an end of everything between us, and—and—Jack took me at my word. I never thought of his doing that.

"As you please," he said, speaking quietly all of a sudden. We were in the conservatory, and the dance music in the drawing-room must have drowned the sound of our voices half a dozen yards away. "You wish our engagement to end, Maud? So be it. Your letters shall be returned to you tomorrow, and I will at once leave you free to resume your flirtation with Frank Horne."

"But—Jack"——

His face was set and white. He never even looked at me. The music ceased. Celia and several other dancers strolled into the conservatory, and he left me.

Yes, he went away and danced with other girls, and he never spoke one word to me or came near me again the whole evening.

Hark! Some one is crossing the hall. Surely Jane won't be so foolish as to show any one in here now!

In another moment "Mr. Dayton" is announced, and Jack himself stands before me.

"Jack!" I started to my feet, and all his treasured documents fall rustling to the floor, but I never think of them. Who thinks of love letters in the presence of the writer? Jack is here, my Jack, and——

But is he indeed my Jack?

The first glance at his face recalls me to myself and reminds me that he is no longer my Jack, or Jack at all to me. I told him I wished our engagement to end, and he remembered it evidently, though I for one brief moment have forgotten. Oh, Jack—Jack!

He waits till the servant has left the room, then takes a small packet from the breast pocket of his coat and turns to me.

"This must be my apology for disturbing you," he says very formally. "I thought I had better bring it myself, in case of accident."

"For me?" I speak vaguely and without offering to take it. I want to gain time.

"Yes—your letters. I have no right to them now."

"How—how beautifully you have packed them!"

He turns away, with an impatient gesture, and lays them on the table.

"I need not detain you any longer, now my errand is done," he says quietly.

"But—there is something else. Oh, you forgot!" as he looks at me questioningly. "You have returned my letters promptly enough (how can I thank you for such promptness?), but you forget your own. As you say, I have no right to them now."

"You wish me to take them? Very well!"

But I do not wish him to take them. Anything but that. I want to postpone the moment of parting. That is all.

"Will you be good enough to fetch them?"

"They are here on the floor. Will you be good enough to help me pick them up?"

He does so without a word. Together we stoop and collect them. Together we lay them on the table. Together for the last time!

I bring paper and string and proceed to pack them up, while he watches me in silence.

"I fear this will not be such a neat parcel as yours," I say, speaking as steadily as I can and bending over the table to hide my troubled face. "You know I'm never good at this sort of thing."

"I know," shortly.

"I can't do it!" And a great tear splashes on the packet. "I'm sorry, but"——

"Don't bother about it." And he lays his hand on mine suddenly. "No need for such a fuss. Give them to me as they are."

"What are you going to do with them?" as he takes them from my trembling hands.

"Put them in the fire!" And he turns to do so.

"No, no, no!" I cry, springing forward and laying a detaining hand on his arm. "Oh, don't, Jack!"

"Why not?" pausing. "You don't want them, and I'm sure I don't."

"I—I do. Please give them back to me."

"What for?"

"To keep! To remind me"——

"Of my folly?"

"Of my own, I"——

"Your folly is over and done with. Our engagement is broken off," he says moodily. "Better forget it ever existed."

"I cannot do that," with an irrepressible little sob, "and I am waiting for those letters."

"Take them, then." And he throws them down on the table. "Keep them to compare with Horne's if you like. I don't care."

"How can you insult me so? What right have you to think me so mean, so heartless?" I cry indignantly. "And you cared for me once, or pretended to."

"I did care, I care now, though I know I'm only a fool for my pains," bitterly. "Heartless, do you say? How can I help thinking you heartless after your conduct last night?"

"My conduct? And what of yours? If I danced with Frank, and, yes, flirted with him a little, you were flirting all the time with Celia and Mollie, and, oh, there wasn't a girl in the room that you didn't flirt with! You know there wasn't."

"Yes, and you should know that there is safety in numbers," he retorts, fixing his dark eyes on mine reproachfully. "But you, Maud, you flirted with Frank all the time, and no one but Frank—a very different thing."

"And what was I to do when you deserted me? Sit still and look miserable? Thanks, no. Really, you are unreasonable."

"You forget that I did not desert you, as you call it, till after you gave me to understand that I wasn't wanted. You told me to go, and I went."

"You did—on the instant."

"And you blame me for that now? Did you not mean me to take you at your word?"

"Not like that," slowly. "You went—oh, yes—as if you were glad to go. I dare say you were, but you needn't have betrayed your feelings quite so plainly."

"I haven't the smallest intention of betraying my feelings for your gratification," he says, with some warmth. "You have treated me shamefully, but I see little use in discussing it now. I don't want to reproach you for jilting me. You've done it, and that's enough."

"Jilting you! Oh, Jack!"

"Call it what you please," and he turns away wearily. "We won't quarrel about that. Celia was right, I see."

"Celia?"

"Yes. She said I would only make matters worse if I saw you. I didn't believe her, but"——

"Celia tried to stop your coming?"

"If you like to put it in that way, yes," with a look of surprise. "But I thought I ought to bring these letters myself, so I came."

"Celia seems to have been unwarrantably busy with my affairs," I say coldly. "I don't know, of course, what she may or may not have told you, but this I do know—that I have never trusted her, and that I trust her less than ever now."

"You are ungrateful, surely. She tried to spare you this interview."

"Had it not been for her it would never have been necessary. But go to her, since you'd rather take her word than mine," passionately. "Go to her and tell her that she has succeeded, thanks to my folly and your"——

I break off, unable to speak for the rising sobs that choke my utterances, and turn away abruptly to the window.

"Succeeded? Celia?" he repeats more to himself than to me. "Maud, what is the meaning of all this? Is it possible that Celia misunderstood"——

"She misunderstood nothing." I speak in a dull, expressionless way and without turning round. "She is far too clever for that. It is you who misunderstood and I."

"What have I misunderstood? Oh, if you won't tell me, I must go to Celia and"——

"Yes, go to her. What are you staying here for?"

"Nothing now." And he walks to the door. In another instant he will be gone.

Can I let him go like this? No, a thousand times no.

"Wait!" And I turn impulsively. "You—you have forgotten something."

"Have I? And what?"

"Your ring. I have no right to it now, as you say."

"I never said so, but"—he checks himself—"give it to me, then."

"Come and take it."

"No, dear, I don't want it. If it is to come off at all, you must take it."

"It seems almost a pity, doesn't it?" I say softly, and my voice is scarcely as steady as it might be. He makes no reply, but passes his arm around my waist, and his hold on my hand tightens.

"I've got used to it, you see, and I should miss it. May I keep it, Jack?"

"On one condition!"

"And that is"——

"That you keep me too."

"Oh, Jack, how gladly!"

He is my Jack once more, and I tell him all, my head on his shoulder.

Our quarrel is over, and we both detest Celia. She can never come between us any more.—Gentlewoman.

A Barber's Record.

A novel shaving record has been established by a Hungarian barber. He made a bet of 100 florins that he would on a railway journey of 20 minutes from Pistyian to Neustadtl shave 15 men without cutting them. The bet was more than won, for he actually shaved three more men than the stipulated number.—London News.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. OVER THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS.

A Trip on a Bicycle from Denver to Aspen, Colorado.

ASPEN, Col., Aug. 1st. '94.

DEAR MR. EDITOR:—After arriving at Denver on my wheel, and spending a week in that city I started on a bicycle trip across the Rocky Mountains to Aspen. A Denver friend had promised to make this trip with me but at last decided that he could not go, and I determined to brave the mountains alone. Monday noon I left the city, and rode six miles to the entrance of the gulch which was to the Rockies. An old house stands near the entrance, and while getting a drink at a spring near by an old man came forth from the ancient structure and informed me that in that house Geo. M. Pullman perfected his invention of the sleeping car. The old gentlemen full of reminiscenes showed me the room where the inventor labored. As I rode on, my melancholy thoughts turned by natural association to the late strikes, and I reached the mournful conclusion that if it were not for that old house and the spring, from which the doubtless George imbibed inspiration we should not have had these lamentable strikes. After reaching this sage decision my mind was released from its toils, and I had leisure to take note of beauties which the mountains were beginning to unfold. On each side of my road arose two great walls of rock. These were a few hundred feet in height for I was only in the foot hills. By the road side flowed a quiet mountain stream, clear as a dew drop in the early morning. Along the bank of this rivulet were flowers of varied hues struggling up between rocks. Above and below me the rocks attracted the eye by the many shades which the mosses gave them in addition to their natural colors. I was assailed at every sense, for the aroma of sweet smelling weeds came about me, and bird songs filled the air, and the eye was dazed with color. The mountain strawberry tempted me from my wheel at times, and the soft mosses and grass at the road side were a delight to walk upon. This was Chimney Gulch but why it was so called I do not know unless because nothing but smoke could get out of it with any kind of ease. The Gulch road led me to a canyon where the mountains became steeper, the rocks were massive and heaped in more rugged and reckless masses. The valley was wider here, and so filled with blue flowers of varying tints that the color was almost contagious. Then a huge mountain barred my way seemingly but the road curled around it, and after advancing a mile farther I found myself on a road cut in the side of Mt. Vernon. The valley lay decked in the richest verdure below me, and above were the imminent overhanging rocks. There were jutting masses of red rock, white rock, green, blue and gray rock, and across the valley were mountains, natures pyramids of all discriptions of rock. I had toiled up this road; now the descent began and with brake plied hard and one foot pressed upon the tire as a second means of holding back I glided down the declivity two miles. The road was rather rough for some time and then smooth but in the last 200 feet the incline became ninety degrees and stones filled the road. I clung to my wheel in desperation but the pneumatic tire bounded too much and finally my Victor succeeded in unseating me and I rolled ten or twelve feet on the rocky road. My first care was to examine my wheel. No damage except to its nickel complexion. My bones were all right, but their wrapping was cut and bruised in various localities. This was of no account. It was only closer union with rude old rockies. We struck up an acquaintance and the Rockies struck the hardest. Floyd hill this was called, and from it I commenced to go up Clear Creek. There is not a more beautful stream in the mountains. They say it is rich with gold. I drank copiously at times from its waters while kneeling at its brink. This was a sort of gold cure to any future tendency to strong drink. I thought a little foresight now would prevent a bill with Mr. Keeley in time to come. A stitch in time as it were. There is a garden of the gods on all sides. Nature has cut and hewn the rocks in the most fantastic shapes. A lively fancy conjures forms of animals, prehistoric and modern monsters bathe in the roaming stream and lie with outstretched bodies upon the banks. Here are mazes of rocks and flowers. Mosses streak the boulders, and weave witching shapes on the granite walls of the canyon. Amid all the beauty the stream bubbles and splashes in the open air, or moans and grumbles as it passes under a lowering mass of rocks. As I neared Idaho Springs I beheld a marvelous pump (how a miner here would laugh at the adjective appended to his pump) and I left my wheel to examine. A Placer pump the man said. It was a long beam rising obliquely from the river for 40 feet. At every ten feet was a beam fixed in a socket on the ground and supporting the long oblique beam. The latter was driven back and forth with a motion like a cross cut saw. A water wheel was the motive power. The shore end of the long beam was attached to a kind of wind mill pump, which went down into a shaft and pumped up water supposed to contain grains of gold, and as this water flowed through a series of boxes to the river the gold was extracted. So much for a pump which was so fearfully and wonderfully made, but I fear I have failed to make an intelligible pen picture of it. The sun passed from sight behind the mountains and clouds which grazed or rested on their summits were changed to evanescent gold. Dark came swiftly then, and at Idaho Springs I stopped to pass my first night in the mountains. I won't tell how innocent I was, how I scornfully threw off the two heavy quilts and lay down to dream under a sheet, which was enough for any one in a July night. Nor will I relate how I got up after awhile and pulled one quilt over me, and later the other, and toward morning was imprecating the landlord for letting his lodgers freeze to death. I do not like to call up the memory either of how I paid a dollar in the morning for those two flimsy quilts and a sheet. The lesson had been learned however and now I stop at the ranches in the mountains, and get a better bed with fewer insect companions for a quarter. At a cold and early hour I set out for one of the grandest I ever hope to take, up Clear Cr[illegible] yon to Georgetown, the fam[illegible] which nestles amid the moun[illegible] such a way that when you are there you wonder how you will ever get out. I will describe the remainder of my trip later.

OBITUARY.

The funeral of Mrs. W. H. Smith took place from her residence in Tecumseh, Friday evening last, the service being conducted by the Rev. W. R. Blachford, of St. Peters Episcopal church. The deceased was born in Ireland, June 12, 1829, and came to this country with her parents when a child, her name then being Julia Herrick. The family moved to Tecumseh within a few years after the Rev. W. N. Lyster took charge of St. Peter's parish, and for five or six years Miss Herrick lived with that priest's family at Sand Lake. Subsequently the Herrick family moved to Cambridge, Mich. where, on March 17, 1852, the subject of this sketch was married to Mr. Smith. They made Cambridge their home until two and a half years ago, when they came to Tecumseh, where two sons, Joseph and Charles, are living. The deceased was a member of the Roman Catholic church, being born of Romanist parents, but for some years has been able only occasionally, to attend her own worship. Death came after much suffering and severe sickness on Wednesday, August 22nd, 1894. Mr. Smith and family have the sympathy of their many friends in this hour of their affliction.

Resolutions of Macon Grange.

It is with sorrow we make mention of the passing away by death, of James L. Remington, a worthy and honored member of Macon Grange, No. 167. He was always deeply interested in the carrying out of the principles on which the Grange stands. He was a charter member of this Grange and among his last acts, although in feeble health, he attended the 20th anniversary meeting held in the Grange Hall in April, 1894, and was welcomed by all. He lived to the age of four score years, an age to which so few attain.

Therefore, we as a Grange assembled, do place upon record our estimation of the worthy acts and virtue of our brother, realizing he has entered upon the more glorious work and rewards of the eternity that awaits all the faithful; at the same time realizing we have lost a faithful and tried laborer in this Grange. We would desire to bow in humble submission to the divine will and pleasure, realizing we are His servants and wish to be under His guiding hand at all times.

Resolved, That we extend to the family of our co-worker and brother our estimation of the worth to us of their husband and father, and our sympathy with them in this affliction.

Resolved, That we endeavor to be ever faithful in the work from which he has been called, imitating him in his zeal and faithfulness in any duty assigned to us, and be ready to lay down our implements of labor when called, as he was called, to leave the work in other hands and enter upon the work on high to which the Great Master may soon call us.

Done in the Grange, July, 1894.

H. W. STEVENS,
MANSON CARPENTER.

Judge Walter Clark, the Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, writes in the September Arena on "The Election of Senators and the President by Popular Vote, and the Veto." Judge Clark is in favor of the election of senators by popular vote, but is opposed to the extension of the principle to Presidential elections, as he believes it would imperil the republic. But he considers the powers of patronage and the veto vested in the President anomalous and dangerous, and would have them curtailed.

At the last meeting of the Lenawee County Pioneer Society, a committee, appointed for that purpose, reported in favor of reorganizing the society under the provisions of the statute, thus making a permanent legal organization of it. The required notice has been published in the HERALD three weeks, and a public business meeting will be held for that purpose at the Council Building in Tecumseh next Monday afternoon at one o'clock. All the old settlers of this and adjoining towns are requested to be present at this meeting and lend the project their assistance.

An article gathering together "World-Wide Echoes of the Parliament of Religions," by the Rev. John Henry Barrows, of Chicago, who was Chairman of the Parliament, will appear in the September Forum. The books, articles lectures and addresses that have been published and delivered about the Parliament during the year since it was held in almost every civilized language would fill many volumes. Perhaps no previous meeting of men anywhere on earth was ever so much discussed within the first year that followed it. Dr. Barrows sums up the results of this year of "echoes."

A TECUMSEH BOY HONORED.

We always take something of a special interest in former Tecumseh boys who go West to grow up with the country, especially when they are the recipients of business or official honors. The last man to be honored, whose boyhood was passed in our village, is Chas. S. Crane, of St. Louis, who has just received the appointment of Gen. Passenger and Ticket Agent for the Wabash Railway. He has filled the position of Assistant Ticket Agent since 1883, and is now promoted to the first place. His old Tecumseh friends will congratulate him most heartily on his good fortune. The St. Louis Dispatch, of Aug. 26th, contains this notice of Mr. Crane's promotion.

Charles S. Crane, the newly appointed General Passenger and Ticket Agent of the Wabash system, is a man who owes his promotion to his own efforts and services. Without influential relatives to aid him he rose from a position in the yards to one of the most important in the great railway system. Mr. Crane is a native of Michigan.

When a mere lad he became tired of the quiet life in his native village of Tecumseh and so went to Toledo, O., where he entered the employ of the Wabash road. His duties consisted of marking in the small book, which he still retains as a memento, the numbers of cars. He served in that capacity for two and one-half years, and then in 1866 secured a position as clerk in the General Passanger Agent's office.

In 1872 he was promoted to the position of rate clerk.

In December, 1879, Mr. Crane came to St. Louis as chief clerk of the General Passenger Agent's office. In 1883 he was appointed Assistant General Passenger and Ticket Agent, which position he held until yesterday, when he was made General Passenger and Ticket Agent of the Wabash system. Mr. Crane's jurisdiction extends over the entire system, embracing 2,100 miles of road.

It has been reported that I was going out of the insurance business, but that is a mistake. I have only given up one company, the Phoenix of Hartford, that I thought did not use me right, and was trying to play hog. I have still seventeen Companies, either one of them as good as the one I gave up, and some of them with nearly double the assets. I wish to say to my friends that I am here to stay and will take care of your insurance when it expires. About the first of Oct. I expect to move into the James block, under the Masonic Temple.

CRIME ON THE INCREASE.

Startling Statistics Shown by Attorney General Ellis' Report.

LANSING, Aug. 25. — The advance sheets of the report of Attorney General Ellis for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1894, have been issued. The report shows that the whole number of prosecutions instituted during the year was 22,349, which is 3,375 more than for the preceding year, while the proportion of convictions to the number prosecuted was 0.227 per cent greater. The whole number of convictions was 17,349, and acquittals, 1,728. Of the total number of cases commenced 972 were dismissed on payment of costs; nolle pros. was entered in 992; 915 were dismissed on examination, and Attorney General Ellis shows how, previous to 1891, enormous sums were annually paid outside attorneys to whom state business was farmed out, and to prosecuting attorneys, who followed criminal cases from their respective counties to the supreme court. He says that the attorney general who will take charge of the office next January will find sufficient work to occupy his entire time, and the people cannot reasonably expect him to give that time for $2.19 per day. The opinion is expressed that an increase of the official salary to $4,000 a year would save more than twice the salary every year to the taxpayers of the state.

INSURANCE SOLICITOR ON TRIAL

Business Men Back Him Up and Say the Law Is Unconstitutional.

KALAMAZOO, Aug. 26.—Edward C. Gray, the solicitor for the Lloyd Insurance company of New York, a company unauthorized to do business in this state, who was arrested at the instance of State Insurance Commissioner Gildings, had his opening examination Saturday. Myron H. Beach, of Chicago, assisted by a local attorney, acted for the defense. The case will be a hotly contested one and the defendant will not only be assisted by the Lloyds, but by well-known business men who believe the statute forbidding these companies from doing business is unconstitutional. Mr. Gray says that no application was made as charged in the warrant and he will further fight the warrant on constitutional grounds. The result will be closely watched in insurance circles. The case will be carried to the United States supreme court, if necessary, by the defense.

1000 Meals for Five Cents

Each person eats on the average over 1,000 meals per year. To properly flavor these would require say 17 cents worth of Diamond Crystal Salt. This is a trifle greater outlay than if the other kinds were used, but 5 cents would more than cover the difference, and pay for the luxury of having

instead of the other kinds. But the important thing about it is the finer flavor your food will have and the greater protection your health will receive when you use the salt that's all salt. Ask your Grocer for DIAMOND CRYSTAL. If he has not got it, write to us. If you make butter, investigate our Dairy Salt, there's money in it. Address

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No? Go to Virginia: land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Boyce, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Low rate excursions every month over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. E. E. Posey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile, Ala.

Farmers' Home Reading Club.

Two letters were received last week by the Farm and Dairy editor, asking for particulars regarding the F. H. R. C. This is a home course of reading in agriculture, horticulture, dairying, etc., on the Chautauqua plan. It is a grand thing for our farmers, their wives, sons, daughters and the the "hired man." Write Prof. F. B. Mumford, Sec'y., Agricultural College, Mich. We are reading this course and could not be hired to drop it. We expect to keep at it (in spite of the tariff, or the exit of silver) until we "graduate." Too much cannot be said in favor of this course for our young farmers who have had no opportunity to pursue a course of study at the Agricultural College. In these days it is almost criminal to live in ignorance. The well-informed, educated, practical, hard working business farmer is the one who ought to make the most money, and—he generally does. He who wills may win.—Michigan Farmer.

Dr. E. E. Hendershott and Samuel Kniffen were Adrian visitors last Wednesday.

Miss Addie Lamkin, of Franklin, is visiting with her sister, Mrs W. J. Helm, this week.

Our boys played Milan at the Tecumseh tournament Tuesday. Score, 6 to 3 in favor of Milan.

Burton Nichols and wife returned last Saturday from a visit in Ohio. They report a good time.

Two couple of our young people spent two or three days at the lakes last week. They report a very good time.

LOST.—A silk umbrella, between Britton and T. V. Hoagland's. The finder please leave at Lee Bro's store and be rewarded.

F. M. Link was arrested by a U. S. revenue collector last Tuesday night and arraigned before Justice Oliver for trial. We go to press too early to get the details.

We understand that a home newspaper has been started here with E. W. Lenardson as editor. The paper will be printed in Petersburg. We wish him success.

School meeting in District No. 2 was held last Monday evening, and the following trustees were elected: Chas. R. Dubois and Wm. Underwood for a term of three years.

Our school commenced last Monday with Prof. Collins to wield the rod and Miss Mariam to assist him. We hope the school will be as well conducted this year as last. They report a good attendance.

Kniffen & Hendershott, proprietors of our new brick and tile mill, have purchased one of the best No. 9, A. machines of H. Brewer and Co., of Tecumseh. They have erected a dry shed 24x108, two stories high. It is one of the best in this vicinity. They expect to be running about next week.

The Clinton ball team came over last Saturday to play their fourth game with our boys. Clinton strengthened their team by securing Whelan and Keusch from Tecumseh, La Decour from Blissfield and Paul Crafts from the Adrian team. Our boys played strictly Britton men. The umpire did very good work until the 10th inning, when he got a little chicken-hearted when one of our men ran into the Clinton catcher knocking him out of line and the umpire called him out for his cruelty. The game was full of good plays from beginning to end and the boys had to play eleven innings to determine who were victors. Following is the score:

Mrs. Simon Gould is quite sick at this writing.

Mrs. Lydia Hall is under the doctors' care at present.

The long dry spell was broken by a heavy rain Tuesday night.

Dr. Begel, of Holloway, is expected to fill the pulpit next Sunday.

Elder Cansfield left for Sault St. Marie, Monday, to attend conference.

Addie Sherman began the fall term of school in the Getty district, Monday.

C. A. Satterthwaite, wife and son, Fay, of Portage, O., visited friends over Sunday.

Chas. Foote was elected director for the fall term at the annual school meeting, held Monday night.

Quite a number from here attended the Demorest Gold Medal Contest, at Macon village, Friday night, they speak of the entertainment in exalted terms. Macon people have reason to feel proud over the grand success, also to know that in Miss Lula Weeks, they have a young lady of marked ability as a reciter. It was with every effort of elocutionary power that Miss Bryant, of Cadmus, won the medal.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

School began in our district Monday; J. L. Richard wielding the birch.

Miss Mary Fairbanks, of Ogden, is visiting with Miss Carrie Winship this week.

The L. O. T. M. will give a what's-to-be-found-on-a-penny social at the home of their lady commander, Mrs. E. J. McIntyre, to-night. Every one cordially invited. This may be the means of relieving the financial stress of the country or at least boom pennies.

About 4:30 p. m. last Monday, John Preston met with an accident that, although not proving fatal, bruised his face and dazed him to the extent that he was unable to tell how it happened: but from circumstances and witnesses it seems that he was training a colt and was driving to Holloway; just after crossing the railroad, south of Mrs. Lopers, Wabash passenger train No. 53 came flying by, frightening the colt, which gave a jerk, landing John in the ditch on his face, and the horse ran down the road turning west at the corner by Dr. Begel's, and was caught about 60 rods from the corner by a gentlemen, with a horse and buggy. When questioned about the matter John said he did not know how it happened or whether he had a horse or not, and when shown the colt said it was not his. The colt was uninjured. John was able to ride home; he knew he was hurt but could remember nothing else.

—Holloway & Florence have received three car loads of coal at this station, part of which is not under contract. Parties wishing coal would do well to see these gentlemen, and learn their prices and terms.

THE FOURTH MATINEE.

The fourth and last matinee was held at Bill's driving park last Friday afternoon. A large crowd was in attendance, and the races were fully up to the average standard. MACON'S GOLD MEDAL CONTEST.

One of the most successful entertainments ever given in Macon took place in the audience room of the M. E. church, Friday evening of last week. The audience was made up of prominent people from Adrian, Blissfield, Tecumseh, Clayton, Macon, etc., as the seven contestants for Demorest Gold Medal, represented most of the surrounding towns. The church was prettily decorated with flowers, and at 8 o'clock the young ladies and gentlemen, who were to take part in the programme, passed up the main aisle and were received by the Director, Wm. B. Hatch, of Washington, D. C. All were dressed in full evening dress, each wearing the silver medal won in previous contests. After a few well chosen words, Mr. Hatch announced the following programme:

How to curtail the liquor traffic—Mr. Hood, Rome Center.

Instrumental trio—Little beauty—Miss Emma Bailey, violin; Miss Mettie Miller, piano; Mr. George Miller, cornet.

Alcoholic slavery—Miss Lulu Weeks, South Macon.

The judges were Dr. L. G. North Prof. Kellogg, of Tecumseh, and Miss Taylor, of Ypsilanti. The audience, after a suspense of several minutes, were relieved when Dr. North arose and in his usual happy style, spoke of the importance, and holding aloft the beautiful gold medal in its leather case. He said it was no easy matter, in the presence of so many anxious friends, to decide to whom it should go, as the contestants were so evenly matched, but that the judges were unanimous in their opinions that it should be given to No. 7. Mr. Hatch then presented the medal to No. 7, and the young lady was introduced to the audience as Miss Bryant, of Cadmus. The second prize was given to Miss Lulu Weeks, of Macon. Great credit is due Mr. Hatch, who was untiring in his efforts to make this a red letter event, in Macon. He was ably assisted by Miss. Cornelius, county superintendent of W. C. T. U. work, and many others.

PIONEER MEETING.

Pursuant to a call published for three successive weeks in the Tecumseh HERALD, a meeting of old residents was held at the Council Building in this village last Monday afternoon, to reorganize the Lenawee County Pioneer Society under the provisions of chapter 145 of the Compiled Laws, and thus plant it upon a legal and more permanent basis. The meeting was called to order by S. C. Stacy, Secretary of the County Society, upon whose motion Lucius Lilley was chosen Chairman and Wm. DeMott, Secretary of the special meeting. The object of the gathering was then stated and articles of Association and By-Laws were read by Mr. Stacy. These were based upon the Constitution and By-Laws of the State Pioneer Society, with a few changes. On motion of D. D. Sinclair, the articles were adopted and the persons present were requested to affix their signatures thereto. Below is the list of persons joining, giving their names, date of coming into Michigan and present residence:

As there were but two officers of the present Pioneer Society present, the question arose as to whether the new Society should be completed at once or an adjournment be taken to some future date. After some discussion it was finally resolved that the meeting be adjourned until Saturday, Oct. 13th, 1894 at two o'clock p. m., at the Court House in the city of Adrian, at which time By-Laws will be adopted, officers elected and a legal organization perfected. All persons interested are requested to make a note of it and be present at the adjourned meeting.

Business is picking up everywhere and the outlook is now favorable for a booming fall trade in all directions.

Some of the Ohio potters who wanted the highest tariff on earth or clay are being sued by the government for importing pauper foreign labor.

St. Louis, Mo., has just dedicated a new union railway station, which becomes an event of national importance, as it is the largest, finest and costliest depot, not only in this country, but in the world.

It is not denied that Carroll D. Wright, Commissioner of Labor, and one of the "arbitrators" of the difficulty at Pullman, travels on a Pullman pass. Mr. Cleveland should put another man in Wright's berth.

One of the Republican organs recites from history the short lives of protective tariff bills. That's it. Protective tariffs require constant tinkering. And every tinkering bothers business. The only settled tariff is one for revenue only.

Levi P. Morton is likely to be the Republican candidate for Governor of New York, because he has a barrel. Gov. Flower, the present incumbent, is likely to be renominated because he has a barrel. And that is about the only recommend that either of them possesses.

The address in favor of free silver coinage, recently presented to Congress by the labor organizations, contains these significant figures. It says: "Before the demonetization of silver, 3,500 bushels of wheat or 35,000 pounds of cotton equaled the salary of a Congressman, and 35,000 bushels of wheat or 350,000 pounds of cotton equaled the salary of the President; while to-day 10,000 bushels of wheat or 100,000 pounds of cotton only equal a Congressman's salary, and 100,000 bushels of wheat or 1,000,000 pounds of cotton that of the President."

For the first time the bronze statue of Freedom which surmounts the dome of the capitol was last week illuminated by electricity in honor of the visiting Knights of Pythias. The statue is 19 feet 6 inches high, measured from its pedestal which rests on the dome, and to fit the figure with the wires necessary for its electrical illumination was such a dangerous job that no electrician could be found who would undertake it. However, the man has been found and the work done and since Wednesday night eighty-eight 100-candle power electric lights have nightly glittered around the statue of Freedom.

An Indiana farmer took Congressman Bynum at his word when that distinguished gentleman in the last campaign said that wheat would go up to $1.25 per bushel if Cleveland was elected. So he went off and sowed so much that his crop amounted to 2,000 bushels, which he has had to sell for from 45 to 50 cents a bushel. He now intends, by process of law, to have the Congressman pay him the difference between what he got for his cereal and the promised $1.25. The Detroit News aptly comments: "If every political talker were held as hard to his promises as this Hoosier promises to hold his congressman, some politicians would go broke in short order.

"President Cleveland" said a Southern Senator, who for obvious reasons forbade the use of his name, "is a much shrewder politician than he gets credit for being. For instance, look at those two tariff letters. People not in the habit of looking beneath the surface regard those letters, particularly the one to Mr. Wilson, as bad 'breaks' or errors of judgment on the part of Mr. Cleveland. Now, on the contrary, they were shrewd moves, the full force of which had been carefully calculated long in advance of the writing of those letters. That last letter has made it certain that the tariff is to once more be the principal issue in the Congressional elections, and that is just what Mr. Cleveland wants. It will prevent the financial question becoming paramount, as Mr. C. has feared it would, particularly in the south and west, and will enable Mr. Cleveland and his party to gain two year's time in which to get together on a financial policy before entering the Presidential campaign."

PIVOTAL FACTS.

In considering the justification for the firm stand of the House the President and the Democrats of the country for free raw materials, these pivotal facts must be remembered:

1. Untaxed crude materials is the original American policy. There was no duty on wool for nearly forty years after the adoption of the Constitution. Lead was never taxed until the passage of the war tariff in 1861. Pig iron was free until 1860, and scrap-iron was taxed only 24 per cent. before the war.

2. It is the policy of every nation whose manufactures compete with ours. No other civilized country, even those with protective tariffs, makes manufacturing dear and increases the cost of transportation and of living by taxing coal, iron, lead, copper, wool or lumber.

3. It is the principal and policy of the Democratic party. In its platforms, State and national, by the action of its representatives in congress, by the letters of its candidates, and on the stump and in its press, the Democratic party is as plainly and sacredly pledged to the doctrine of free raw materials as it has ever been pledged to anything.

4. It has been approved by the people in two general elections by overwhelming majorities. It is sustained by the universal sentiment of the Democratic party to-day.—New York World.

A PROTECTION PET.

In 1893 the Sugar Trust paid dividends of $16,500,000 on a nominal capital of $75,000,000. The entire plant could be constructed for $15,000,000. This was under the McKinley law, which protected refined sugar and gave no revenue on raw sugar to the treasury. The McKinley law was purely a trust measure, with no effort to raise revenue. Its whole effect was to enable the trust to pay 110 per cent. a year on the actual investment.

It is reported that several officials of the trust receive more than $100,000 a piece in salaries.

Sugar has been manufactured in America successfully since 1764—a hundred years. The trust was organized in 1887. The Republicans under Harrison found a highly profitable industry and a monopoly. They gave the monopoly free raw material, a protective duty of 60 cents on the 100 pounds and annual dividends of 110 per cent., besides the rich profits represented by princely salaries and millions laid away in the surplus fund.

This was McKinleyism, and it illustrates protection. No care for the treasury, none for the wages of the workingmen, none for the commerce of the country. The whole sugar provision of the McKinley law consisted in bounties taken in one form or another from the people and given to private individuals.

It is as plain as day. Government can be honest as long as protection is the object of its revenue laws.—St. Louis Republic.

AN EASTERN TARIFF REFORM VIEW.

While the country as a whole, including the protectionist portion, appears to be glad that there is to be no more tariff agitation for a considerable time, there is a small contingent, having its headquarters in Philadelphia, which proposes to upset the whole arrangement and re-enact the McKinley bill. The organ of the Manufacturers' Club in that city has announced this program and something more to wit: the free coinage of silver. That there may be an improvement in business for a short time, following the passage of the present bill, it admits, but this will be vain and delusive. Its program is announced in the following words at the conclusion of an article in its issue of August 18:

"This work of destruction and of infamy will be wholly undone within five years. The Republican party will control the next Congress and the next, and when Mr. Cleveland shall retire from office with the most dishonorable record of any man who ever held it, the Republican party will destroy the Wilson tariff and once more give genuine protection to the industries of the nation."

We might pause to ask what is "genuine protection" and who are the judges of its genuineness. There are several organs of manufacturing interests in the United States who are not quite harmonious in judgment on this point, and above them all is the Republican party, which is not quite harmonious with itself. We find in the Boston Journal of Commerce the following statement of the average ad valorem duties on textile manufactures in the new law, as compared with the McKinley tariff, the Mills bill and the tariff of 1883.

Schedule.	Cotton.	Flax.	Wool.	Silk.
New law, per cent. ad valorem	41	32	41	46
McKinley Tariff	45	42	99	53
Mills Bill	32	26	49	50
Tariff of 1883	35	31	67	45

The cut in wool manufactures appears larger than it really is, because raw wool is now on the free list. This statement, the Journal tells us, is prepared by Mr. Herbert Myrick, "whose name is a guarantee of the accuracy of the compilation." The point is that as to these schedules the average duties under the new law are a trifle higher than those of the tariff of 1883, which was a Republican tariff according to our recollection, and was not as low as the leading protectionists of that time, John L. Hayes, H. W. Oliver, Robert P. Porter and other members of the Tariff Commission, recommended. Therefore when the organ of the Manufacturers' Club, of Philadelphia, calls for a new tariff agitation and applies the word "infamy" to the present bill, it applies it still more to the tariff of 1883, and still more to the Morrill tariff of the war period.

We feel safe in saying that any party or faction which sets out for a general tariff overturn during the next few years will receive a box on the ears of a very decisive character. The Democratic party may, for one reason or another, get a setback in the coming elections, but that will not imply that the people want either the McKinley tariff or the Sherman silver bill re-enacted. On every side we find a popular demand for a rest and relief from tariff agitation. This does not mean that the sugar trust is to be allowed peaceful possession of its plunder, or that manifest errors are not to be corrected, but it does mean that the people do not want another general tariff disturbance at present. The time will come when tariff changes will be necessary, because time brings changes in all things; but for the present the country wants recuperation, and in order to gain it must have peace.—New York Evening Post.

LINCOLN'S IDEA OF WALL STREET.

I call attention to the following discussion of this subject by Governor Curtin and President Lincoln, during the war. Mr. F. B. Carpenter, the painter, who spent six months in the White House with Mr. Lincoln, relates the case as an eye-witness as follows:

"The bill empowering the Secretary of the treasury to sell the surplus gold had recently passed, and Mr. Chase was then in New York giving his attention personally to the experiment. Governor Curtin referred to this, saying, 'I see by the quotations that Chases' movement has already knocked gold down several per cent.'

"This gave occasion for the strongest expression I ever heard fall from the lips of Mr. Lincoln. Knotting his face in the intensity of his feeling, he said: 'Curtin, what do you think of those fellows in Wall street who are gambling in gold at such a time as this?

"'They are a set of sharks,' returned Mr. Curtin.

"'For my part,' continued the President, bringing his clinched hand down upon the table, 'I wish every one of them had his devilish head shot off.'"

It seems that the Man of Galilee and President Lincoln entertained the same opinion of the money changers who speculate on the necessities and distresses of the common people.—Congressman John Davis.

GOOD NIGHT.

Pale in the amber flooded west
A horned moon dips low,
And soft through silver silences
The rose winds faintly blow.
Yet still a horned moon shall lend
A lance of lingering light
To cross the wind, to cross the dusk
And give my love good night.

The long lake rippling through its reeds
Hath lilies all a-blow.
At fall of dew each sleepy flower
Folds up her leaves of snow.
Yet one fair lily bud shall wake
To smile all virgin white
Across the dark, across the dew
And give my love good night.

The light may fail, the lily fade,
The lightning's lurid glow
Flame in the sky, the rose winds rise
To storms that rudely blow.
Yet constant still, as rose to June,
This heart shall take delight
Across the dark, across the world
To give my love good night.

A DROP OF BLOOD.

In the summer of 1888 I was employed to look after some legal business at Boone Courthouse, W. Va. Leaving the railroad at Brownstown and taking directions and a horse from my landlord at that point, I set out through the mountains early in the afternoon, expecting to reach Racine in time for supper.

As the afternoon waned, however, I noticed that the road became constantly rougher and apparently more unfrequented until it was little more than a deserted pathway that crossed and recrossed the gravelly bed of a dry creek in a mad effort to remain in the narrow valley that wound circuitously among the mountains, whose black timbered summits seemed to stretch higher and higher above me in the gathering twilight. It being a cloudy day, I was completely mystified as to the points of the compass, and it now became evident to me that I had in some manner missed my way. I had already gone too far to retrace my steps before nightfall, so that unless I speedily found shelter I would be obliged to pass the night in the open air.

Being in nowise pleased with this prospect, I concluded to press on a little farther before abandoning the quest and had barely formed this resolution when a bend in the pathway brought me into full view of what appeared to be a large, square, southern mansion, surrounded by trees and situated a little way up the slope of a remarkably lofty mountain that rose precipitously behind it.

A nearer approach revealed an outward appearance of overgrowth and dilapidation. The fence had fallen down in several places. The open gate was barely supported by its rusty hinges. The yard was a mass of weeds. The condition of the house I could not determine in the dim light made dimmer by the heavy shadows of the trees. Between the tall weeds and briers there was a wide stone walk leading from the gate to the front door.

The prospect was not an inviting one, but as my situation had become somewhat desperate I determined if possible to obtain accommodations for the night.

My repeated knocks elicited no response beyond a hollow echo, and concluding the place to be deserted I tried the door. Somewhat to my surprise, it yielded, the rusty hinges creaking terribly as I pushed it wide open. As I entered I was greeted by that musty, lifeless odor common to places long closed and uninhabited. I had matches with me, and striking one I looked about me.

I was in a wide hall. Before me a dark staircase, partially whitened with dust, led to rooms above. To the left and right were closed doors, and attached to the white casement of the latter was a little bracket candelabra containing a cluster of six half consumed wax candles. Lighting two of these, I took one of them from the holder, and opening the door at my right entered.

The room in which I found myself was apparently the parlor of the deserted mansion. The dust covered haircloth furniture, which had evidently been for many years undisturbed, was of a style massive and once much in vogue. A number of paintings and engravings were upon the walls in tarnished gilt frames. A large chandelier suspended in the center of the room was of elaborate workmanship. The floor was covered with a heavy matting, the exact nature of which I could hardly determine, owing to the thick covering of dust. Passing on to the adjoining room, I was not disappointed in finding it to be a large bedroom with all the appointments peculiar to an old-time southern home of wealth. I approached the tall canopied bed in the opposite corner and drew back the curtains. It was ready for the guests for which it had so long waited. The bedding was yellow with age, but the canopy had protected it from the dust. It had not been occupied for years.

I confess I was possessed with a sense of awe amid these surroundings, but not being of a timid nature I determined to pass the night beneath this roof in preference to enduring the heavy fog that always gathers at night in these mountains. Leaving my candle lighted, I returned to my horse and arranged his bridle rein so that he could eat the grass for a considerable space about him. Then, removing the saddle, I returned with it to my strange quarters.

Prying open one of the creaking windows and its heavy shutters to let fresh air into the musty apartment, I fastened back the draperies of the tall bed and threw back the long unused bedding, the odor of which reminded me of cerements. To relieve this somewhat I covered the pillow with my coat, and removing only my outer garments I lay down, for I was greatly fatigued with riding, an exercise to which I was totally unaccustomed.

My candle I had, with a few drops of melted wax, affixed to a small table near the center of the room, and having no desire to remain in darkness in this lonely place I left it burning.

As I lay there, wondering at my strange surroundings and not altogether free from a sense of fear at the silence and shadows of the deserted place, I now noticed for the first time that beyond my candle and a little to the left there hung against the partition wall separating the two rooms a full length portrait of a lady. The picture was an oil painting and the execution admirable. It was fully life size, and the frame that inclosed it wide and elaborate, although now tarnished and dusty.

But it was the figure itself that most attracted me. The face was that of a woman not beyond 20 years of age and beautiful in the extreme. Her hair was a wealth of glistening gold, her dress that of a bride. The picture appeared to have suffered but little from age, and the light as it fell upon it made the view from my position remarkably good. As I lay there in silent contemplation of this beautiful portrait I forgot any incipient fears that had hovered about me and fell to speculating upon the history of this deserted house and the story of that fair bride.

I was too tired to muse long. My eyelids grew heavier, and I caught myself mingling fact and fancy without being able to distinguish them. Then I fell asleep.

I do not know what time it was when I woke, but it must have been very late, for I noticed that the candle had burned low and was flaring wildly as from a draft. At that moment a fear came upon me such as I had never known. An iciness seemed creeping over my body, beginning at my feet and extending rapidly upward. I was trembling as with an ague.

A slight rustling sound from the next room attracted me, and turning my eyes involuntarily in that direction I almost expired from fear, for into the chamber, her head bowed and wringing her hands in evident distress of mind, there entered the lady of the portrait. The counterpart was exact—the dress, the pattern of the lace, even the rings upon her slender white fingers. That it was a spirit I never for a moment doubted.

Slowly she approached the bedside without noticing me at first and seated herself in a heavy armchair a few feet away, still moaning and wringing her beautiful hands. Raising her eyes at last, she seemed to become conciouss of my presence and spoke.

"Oh, pray for me," she moaned, "pray for my soul. Oh, pray for me,

I know not what power possessed me at that moment, but suddenly, in spite of my abject terror, I found myself upright upon my knees in the bed pouring forth a prayer for the beautiful, distressed spirit before me. As the words fell from my lips—words which seemed to be uttered through rather than by me—I noticed that she seemed to grow calmer and at last turned her sorrow stricken face full upon me. I noticed, too, and with the utmost terror, that the candle had burned down to the wood, and that in another moment we would be in darkness. Still the earnest words poured from my lips, and the face before me seemed to be growing misty in the flickering light of the expiring candle. Suddenly the figure rose from the chair, and taking one step toward me stretched forth her exquisite arms above mine and vanished. As she did so I distinctly felt something hot, like wax from a dripping candle, fall upon the back of my right hand. At that instant, too, the candle gave one final flare and went out.

When consciousness returned, I was lying across the bed, and the sun was streaming in at the open window. For a moment I was a little dazed at my surroundings; then it all came back to me. Seized with a wild panic—such panic as possesses stampeding cattle—I caught up my clothes and my horse's saddle and fled. As I passed the portrait its eyes seemed to follow me and added to my terrors. Through the dusty rooms, out of the weed grown yard, I tore as one distraught to where my horse was quietly waiting. A moment later I was urging him down the unfrequented path.

Not until I was far away did I pause in my frantic flight. Then, suddenly remembering, I glanced at the back of my right hand, and there—round, red and dry, like a crimson wafer—was a drop of blood.—Detroit Free Press.

Kite Flying In Burma.

Mr. E. D. Cuming, author of "In the Shadow of the Pagoda," describes the Burmese as much given to kite flying, an amusement that they contrive to enjoy with a minimum of bodily exertion. Their method of operations is very simple. Says Mr. Cuming:

You pare down two 12 inch slips of bamboo, tie them at their centers crosswise, run a thread around the four tips and paste upon this frame one thickness of paper. Tie a nail or a small screw nut to one corner, and your kite is made.

The altitude that a well made kite of this kind will reach is wonderful, and the lightest breath of wind will take it up. A hundred and fifty or 200 yards of strong sewing thread, wound on a skeleton reel of 4 inches in diameter and 8 inches in length, completes the equipment.

Then, having started the kite by a process of gentle plagiarism, you squat down in the middle of the street, so as to keep your thread clear of the houses and let the kite help itself.

If you have fastened the thread with cunning, the kite rises almost perpendicularly, bringing you joy in the envy and admiration of those who cannot make a steeper angle than 40 degrees. The kite having taken out all the thread, you sit and contemplate it poised still and clear in the upper air for a few hours.

In Rangoon, on a still morning or evening, hundreds of kites float over the Burmese quarter of the town, some nearly out of sight, others hovering just above the roofs. When driving, your eye has frequently to halloo out of the way a middle aged man who is backing slowly down in midstreet coaxing his kite up. He goes about the business with a ponderous solemnity that raises it to the dignity of a science.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. The First Two Days of the Base Ball Tournament in Tecumseh.

FINE WEATHER, GOOD CROWDS IN ATTENDANCE AND SOME SPLENDID GAMES.

The base ball tournament opened Tuesday afternoon under most favorable circumstances. The weather was fine and a large attendance for the first day. Owing to some unknown cause the first game was not called until after two o'clock.

The first game was between Milan and Britton. Game opened with Milan at the bat. Harwood hit to Lee and was thrown out at first. McKenzie struck out and Hinkley was thrown out at first by DuBois. In the second Norris made a nice single and scored on Easlick's error. Hartman flew out to Whelan. Voorhees was given first on balls and scored on a wild throw by Whelan. Hause and Wilson struck out and Blackmer flew out to Whelan. In the 3rd but three men went to bat. Hammond struck out. McKenzie made a hit but was thrown out stealing second and Hinkley was thrown out by Palmer to Whelan. In the fourth Norris and Hartman each made a nice single. Voorhees flew out to Wiggins. Hause made a rattling single, Norris and Hartman scoring. Blackmer got first on DuBois' error, Hause scoring. Wilson struck out. Hammond hit to Lee who threw Blackmer out at second. In the 5th McKenzie made a single. Hinkley hit to Easlick and was thrown out at first. McKenzie scored on a passed ball. Norris followed with a hit. Easlick took in Hartman's fly and threw Norris out at first very nicely, executing a pretty double play. In the 6th Voorhees struck out. Hause was thrown out at 1st by Easlick, and Blackmer by Lee to Whelan. In the 7th Wilson struck out. Hammond was thrown out at first by Easlick. McKenzie made a hit and Hinkley was thrown out by Easlick to Whelan. In the 8th Norris was thrown out by Lowe to Whelan; Hartman by Easlick to Whelan. Voorhees got his base on balls, but died there as Hause struck out. In the 9th Blackmer flew out to Larrabee. Wilson reached first on DuBois' error. Hammond made a single. McKinzie reached first on Wilson's put out at third, and Hinkley flew out to Biggs.

Britton only scored in the 3rd inning. Biggs hit to short and was thrown out at first. Easlick reached first on Hammond's error. Lee flew out to Blackmer. Whelan made a hit. Easlick scored on McKenzie's wild throw. Lowe followed with a nice single, Whelan scoring and he scored on a wild throw by Hause. DuBois hit to Palmer and was thrown out at first. This was an exceedingly pretty game and was characterized by sharp fielding.

The second game was between Cone and Clinton and was called about 4 o'clock. In the first inning it was plain to be seen that Cone was outclassed—not in it, so to speak.

Cone was first at bat, and scored one in the first inning. Caswell reached first on an error by Keusch. O. Curry was given his base on balls and took his second on Kennedy's wild pitch. W. Caswell hit too short who put C. Caswell out at 3rd. Curry scored on a wild throw by Kennedy. Ellis and Raymond struck out. In the 6th they scored three more. Ellis got a base on balls. Raymond made a single. Ellis scored on La DaCour's wild throw. H Kehoe hit to LaDaCour who threw Raymond out at third. J. Kehoe hit for a single. Both Kehoe's scored on Wade's wild throw. J. Curry flew out to LaDaCour. Hammond got his base on balls and C. Caswell struck out.

Clinton commenced hitting the ball from the start and singles and doubles followed in rapid succession. Schofield hit the first ball pitched for a clean two bagger, followed by Wade and Boocher with pretty singles. These aided by J. Curry's wild throw netted three earned runs. Whelan went out at first. Rogers was thrown out at first by the pitcher and Kennedy struck out. In the 2nd they made four runs. La DaCour made a double and Keusch a single. Bice hit to first. Schofield hit to right which looked good for two bags, but Hammond got under it. Wade hit the ball for two bases, and Boocher for a single. Whelan flew out to center. In the 3rd, 4th and 5th they made three runs each by heavy hitting, aided by numerous errors. In the 6th they increased their score by six runs and made two more in the 7th. After Cone had played their part of the 8th inning, Clinton offered to let them continue playing their part of the 9th, but they had all they desired and the game closed. Clinton made a pretty double play when La DaCour caught J. Curry's hot liner in the 4th and threw H. Kehoe out at second.

SECOND DAY.

The second day of the ball tournament showed a largely increased attendance and though the spectators were disappointed at Cone's failure to play Tecumseh, thus forfeiting the game to them, score 9 to 0, yet the game between Britton and Clinton was so exciting and close that they were well satisfied. The sympathy of the lookers on was about equally divided between the clubs and as first one team and then the other had a slight lead the interest was intense, and until the full nine innings were played it was a question who would win. Although Clinton made eight errors some were excusable ones, particularly the one of Norris, in the third, when, owing to the sticky condition of the infield, his feet slipped and he went down, allowing Lowe to reach first. The game abounded in brilliant playing by both teams, by both in and out fields, and, though Clinton won yet Britton has no reason to feel sore. Clinton was more fortunate in making hits at critical points. To Webber Clinton is indebted for winning the game as, with the score 9 to 7 at the beginning of the ninth with two men out and bases full, his batting a two bagger cleared the bases and the game was won.

The game was called at three o'clock with Clinton at the bat. Scofield struck out; Wade did likewise only he reached first on Lewis' drop of the third strike. He got no farther as Boocher flew out to Wiggins and McKenzie to Lee. In the second but four men went to bat. Norris hit to Lee and was thrown out at first; LaDaCour hit to Easlick and was put out at first; Rogers got his base on balls and stole second where he was left as Codling struck out. In the third but three faced the pitcher. Webber hit to Easlick who threw him out at first; Schofield made a rattling hit to left which looked good for two bases but Larrabee took it in in fine style.

In the fourth Clinton made her first runs and tied the score; Boocher flew out to Brownskill; McKenzie made a safe hit, advanced to second and third on passed balls; Norris got his base on balls and stole second; both scored on LaDaCour's single; Rogers hit to Lee and was out at first. In the fifth Coddling and Webber flew out to Wiggins; Schofield took first on balls where he was left as Wade flew out to Larrabee. In the sixth Boocher and McKenzie hit for singles; Norris hit to Brounskill who threw Boocher at third; LaDaCour and Rogers went out on strikes. In the seventh Clinton took the lead; Coddling hit to Lee and was out at first; Webber made a single and took second on a passed ball; Schofield was again given his base on balls; Wade got first on Webber's put out at third; Boocher hit for a single, Schofield scoring; McKenzie hit for another and Norris's long line hit over third base scored Wade, Boocher and McKenzie; LaDaCour hit to pitcher and was out at first. In the 8th. they added another; Rogers reached first on a dropped third strike; Coddling was thrown out at first by pitcher; Webber made a single, scoring Rogers; Schofield for the third time was presented his base on balls; Wade struck out and Boocher was thrown out at first. In the 9th. they added five more; McKinzie for the fourth time made a safe hit; Norris and LaDaCour took first on balls; Rogers got first on McKinzie's out at home plate; Coddling fanned; Webber made a rattling two base hit, scoring three; Schofield hit for a single and stole second; Webber and Schofield both scored on Wade's single; Boocher made a rattling drive to right but Wade was thrown out at the plate endeavoring to score on it.

For Britton, in the first Lee made a base hit; Whelan flew out to Rogers; Loree was thrown out by Boocher to McKenzie, as was also DuBois. In the second Wiggins hit for a base; Larrabee hit to Boocher who threw wild to first, he reaching first and Wiggins scoring; Biggs flew out to Boocher and Easlick was thrown out at first by Boocher. In the 3rd. Brounskill made a nice single; Lee flew out to Wade. Whelan reached first on Wade's muff of his fly; Lowe got first on Norris' excusable error; DuBois made a hit scoring Whelan and Wiggins went out on an elegant running catch by Wade. In the 4th. Larrabee reached first on an error of shortstop and stole second and third; Biggs was thrown out at first by LaDaCour; Easlick struck out; Brounskill got his base on an error by short; Lee made a hit, Larrabee scoring. Whelan made a fine two base hit, bringing in Brounskill and Lee; Lowe went out from Boocher to McKenzie. In the 5th. DuBois went out on a grounder to McKenzie; Wiggins fanned out and Larrabee on a grounder to first. In the 6th. Biggs flew out to Rogers; Easlick was out on foul gathered in by McKenzie; Brownskill took his base on balls; Lee made a hit but was caught napping and the side was out.

A GAY EVENING AT THE ARMORY.

Capt. Hayden, in his orders for drill last Tuesday evening, prepared the boys of Co. C. a surprise, and the entertainment more than surprised and delighted them. Surely no military organization, either private or militia men, were more royally entertained and banqueted by their commanding officer than were our boys on that night. The regular drill was first gone through by the company in the maneuvers of which they were pleasantly assisted by Dr. Woodward's society orchestra. After the drill the company was seated to listen to a well selected musical program, which consisted of vocal solos by Miss Mabel Hayden, violin solo by Rev. E. C. Andrus, duet for flute and violin by Miss Mabel and Mr. Levi Hayden. Miss Tone, of Texas, presided at the piano. The orchestra also assisted in the program, while Messrs. Ross, Bowen McClure and Tidball rendered two fine quartettes. Music soothes the savage breast, but a well organized militiaman must eat, and that often. In this case both were amply provided and the boys fell in with alacrity to a spread of ice cream, fruits, cigars, etc., to which it is suspected they did ample justice.

After supper a business meeting was called at which Capt. Hayden's resignation was tendered. However, the same was unanimously laid away for the present, as the boys could not under any circumstances allow the happy memories and bright visions of that night to be at once turned to sorrow and regret by the loss of their gallant Captain. It is safe to say that the resignation will never be called up to act upon. The festivities closed with a social hop, which ended a most enjoyable evening's entertainment.

THE SCHOOL MEETING.

The annual school meeting of this district was held at the central school building last Monday evening, and the business was dispatched in about half an hour. The entire attendance did not exceed thirty, which shows that the patrons of the schools are pretty well satisfied with their present management.

The meeting was called to order by the Moderator, Dr. Geo. Howell, and the minutes of the last annual meeting were read by the Director, Dr. North, which were approved. The regular annual report was then read by the Director—the details of expenditure being omitted on motion of Abner Wilson—and also the report of estimates and recommendations. On motion of C. A. Slayton, the entire report was then accepted and adopted. D. McNair and C. A. Slayton were appointed tellers and the meeting proceeded to the election of two trustees for the full term in place of A. L. Brewer and Dr. Howell. The former declined and P. S. McKinnon was elected in his place. Dr. Howell was then elected to succeed himself. We gather a few figures from the reports of the Director and Superintendent. The number of non-resident pupils in attendance last year was 60. Total expenditures last year for all purposes, $9,742.78. In the high school last year 83 pupils studied Latin and 23 German. None pursued the study of Greek or French. Total sum paid for teachers, $5,980.

The fuel item is about $200 larger than usual because a large supply of coal now on hand for the coming year has already been paid for. The cost of fuel actually used last year was $504.02. The number of school children of school age now in the district by the census taken last week, is 546. In June of this year, Prof. Newcomb of the University visited our schools and as a result they are now on the "University List." A graduate from any of our three courses can hereafter enter the University without examination.

Below are the tables showing receipts, expenses for last year and estimates for the coming year:

FOREST FIRES.

They Cause Incalculable Damage in Northern Michigan.

Several Towns Apparently Doomed to Destruction—The Burning of Bridges Renders Railway Companies Powerless to Operate.

GREAT DESTRUCTION.

DETROIT, Sept. 8.—A dull red glare overhangs the entire state of Michigan. Accompanying it is a thick, smoky haze that makes the atmosphere hot and suffocating. Both smoke and glare come from the raging forest fires in the upper peninsula and the entire northern section of the lower peninsula. Thousands of dollars' worth of timber, hundreds of homes and farms and scores of hamlets have fallen prey to the devouring flames that are spreading with no resistance and now threaten to desolate whole townships. The fires have been smouldering for several weeks past, but suddenly burst into raging torrents of flame. It is impossible to get any idea of their extent or damage. Nearly every city in the upper peninsula is cut off from communication, the Western Union Telegraph company being unable to reach them. From the few that can be reached it is learned that practically the woods of the whole peninsula are a mass of flame. Hundreds of homesteaders and wood-cutters have been burned out. From Marquette comes the report that the fires took a fresh start Sunday and cleaned out the town of Sidnaw.

BAY CITY, Sept. 3.—Forest fires are raging throughout Tuscola county, doing great damage. At Gagetown people have plowed around buildings to keep them from burning. Donald Alexander's barn, with all his grain, burned to the ground. Unless rain is sent soon nothing but a miracle can save the town.

Michigan Central engineers who have been running on the Mackinaw division of the road for years say that the present forest fires are the worst the people of that part of the state have ever seen. Other years the fires have been bad enough, but this season everything is so dry that it easily catches fire and nearly the entire distance between Bay City and Mackinaw the fires are raging fiercely and the smoke is very thick. Miles of swamp in the vicinity of Pinconning have been on fire for days and the marsh has been burned deep down.

At Gladwin a crew is kept busy fighting fire that threatens to destroy the Michigan Central roundhouse and other buildings. The home of William Mowrie was burned. Sleicher's camp, 2 miles out from Gladwin on the railroad track, has been burned. The fire was so hot that every light of glass in the passenger coach of the evening train which was passing was cracked. The passengers were somewhat nervous, and upon completion of the trip the car was laid up for repairs. Sleicher saved his mill and shingle sheds. The loss on Stevens' camps, thirteen in all, burned on Monday last, was $2,000. At the time the men were ready to sit down to supper the fire was 40 rods away. A change in the wind sent the fire rapidly through the green timber, and in a very few minutes the camps were in flames. While the woods all about Gladwin are ablaze, the town is not in imminent danger, although some hard fighting has been done to keep a few houses near the woods from burning. Around Bay county the flames seem to be dying out.

ISHPEMING, Sept. 3.—Forest fires are raging at various places in the upper peninsula. At Ewen six buildings burned Sunday. The town is threatened and high winds prevail. Two hundred men are fighting the flames. A large amount of timber and farm crops have been consumed. Nestoria is also threatened. Bridges on the South Shore line near Marengo are all burned and trains abandoned. Big fires are on the south and west sides of Ishpeming close to dwellings. Firemen were called out to protect property on the south side near Lake Angelina mine to-day. No rain has fallen here in over four weeks.

MARQUETTE, Sept. 3.—The western division of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road is crippled by the loss of bridges in forest fires, but the company expects to have all trains through again soon. The South Shore started a bridge train west early Sunday morning, and it is probably now at work on the burned trestle at Bibon.

Reports from all the lumber towns between Nestoria and the Wisconsin state line are that all are safe so far, but many are fighting fire dangerously near. At Ewen many people have loaded their effects on a train which the South Shore officials are keeping ready to move out if necessary, and some small buildings in the outskirts have been burned. The smoke is still heavy here and the fog whistles are sounding. This smoke is probably blown in from the western part of the peninsula, and comes from large tracts of burning swamp land southward from Ishpeming and about twenty miles from here. If the last named fire works eastward, it may wipe out Sands, Swansy and other settlements along the Northwestern road.

LUDINGTON, Sept. 3.—Forest fires are raging in the eastern and northern part of this county, especially along the line of the railroad. Many acres of valuable timber have been completely destroyed. Farm crops in that section have been seriously damaged, and farmers are striving to save their homes. The lake along the shore, and for several miles outside is covered with a continual cloud of smoke, making navigation very dangerous.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Sept. 3.—Forest fires are raging in Chippewa county along the railway lines and in the territory along the river between this city and Detour. The dense smoke from the fires in this vicinity and along the south shore of Lake Superior is interfering somewhat with navigation. The smoke settles on the water like a heavy fog. Under these circumstances navigation, especially in the St. Mary's river, is dangerous.

SEEKING THE GUILTY.

Thorough Investigation of Bribery Charges Being Made at Lansing.

LANSING, Sept. 1.—At the bribery investigation Commissioner Van Ceulebrock, of the board of public works, testified that he had been offered $500 by an agent of a stone company to vote for certain plans for their building, which provided for the use of the company's stone. Commissioner Dunham swore he had been assured if he voted for certain paving brick there would be a nice thing in it for him. The names of the companies interested in these offers have not been divulged, but it is asserted neither was successful. Cashier Osband, of the People's savings bank, testified Architect Marble, of Chicago, came to him early in the fight and asked if the use of money would help his case any and if so what men he should approach. Marble was advised such a course would be suicidal. Prominent members of the Citizens' association who have been active in unearthing the alleged frauds in connection with the projected public improvement will be next examined.

SHIPWRECKED.

Experiences of a Party of Menominee Business Men.

MENOMINEE, Aug. 31.—Five business men of this city—W. A. Pengill, W. E. Kuhnle, F. Hibard, Charles Besnah and James Fairbank—left here in a sailboat Monday for a day's fishing on the east shore of the bay. They were lost in the dense smoke and sailed about until they were driven ashore on Hat island by a heavy squall Tuesday night. The boat was dashed against the rocks. A pole was erected and a towel tied to it for a signal. The smoke cleared away to the eastward Wednesday and they were sighted by some fishermen, who took them to Egg Harbor, and from there they reached Sturgeon bay by team and arrived home by steamer Thursday night. Their only food for two days was green butternuts and high-bush cranberries.

A FATAL WRECK.

Engineer and Fireman of a West Michigan Train Killed.

GRAND RAPIDS, Sept. 1.—The Chicago & West Michigan passenger train which left here at 7:30 Friday morning for the north struck a herd of cattle driven in by the forest fires near Brooklings, Newaygo county, 62 miles north of here. The engine, baggage car and one coach were ditched. Joan Kobe, fireman, and John S. Patterson, engineer, were killed, and three other passengers were hurt. The cattle were gathered just around a sharp curve and were not seen until too late.

THE DROUGHT.

Farmers in Northern Michigan Will Lose Through Lack of Rain.

MANCELONA, Sept. 3.—Never in the history of northern Michigan have the people suffered so much for want of rain. Corn and potatoes are very near an entire failure and there is no way of estimating the loss in this part of the state. The potato crop here has been relied upon to help the people out, but this fall they will have to buy or go without. Men who have in twenty, forty and sixty acres will not get their seed back. It is a sad blow to northern Michigan.

THE RAILS SPREAD.

Train Wrecked Near Ontonagon—The Engineer Killed.

ONTONAGON Sept. 3.—Train No. 65, north bound, on the Milwaukee & St. Paul road, was wrecked twenty miles south of here Sunday. Forest fires had warped the rails out of line. Engineer Fred Almquist was killed, five cars of logs piling on top of his engine. Part of the train was burned and Almquist's body is probably cremated. Brakeman Stantly Orton had a leg broken. The firemen and conductor escaped. The station of Rubicon is destroyed and the village of Pori is threatened.

A Sudden Call.

ADRIAN, Sept. 3.—Frank Wright, of Wright Brothers contractors, engaged on the new building for Adrian college, came to the city Saturday afternoon and was taken suddenly ill with pain in the abdomen and carried home. He grew steadily worse, dying Sunday afternoon. He was a member of the Eighteenth Michigan infantry and was a survivor of the Sultana disaster. He belonged to the local post of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Fire at Davidson.

FLINT Sept. 3.—The village of Davidson, a short distance east of this city, was visited by a destructive fire about 6 o'clock Saturday morning. It destroyed the Davidson flour mill and elevator, also the brick building adjoining, in which was located the postoffice and Moss' grocery store and the Index printing office. The total loss will probably be between $10,000 and $15,000.

Charged with Poisoning Her Babe.

BIG RAPIDS, Sept. 1.—Mrs. Marion Davis, living a few miles from here, is charged with the murder of her 6-day-old babe by giving it carbolic acid. Upon discovery of the crime by the woman who was attending her she fled, and her whereabouts are still unknown. The remains of the babe were taken up and a post-mortem examination supported the charge of poisoning.

Defeated the Chicago Company.

MENOMINEE, Sept. 1.—After a trial lasting a week, the jury in the case of the Two River Manufacturing company against the Spaulding Lumber company of Chicago, but operating a mill at Cedar river, this county, rendered a verdict against the defendant in the sum of $10,709. The case grew out of alleged trespass for cutting timber.

BOUGHT BY NEW YORKERS.

Sale of the Property of the Detroit Street Railway Company.

DETROIT, Sept. 3.—After several months of negotiation the property of the Detroit Citizens' Street Railway company Saturday evening passed into the hands of R. T. Wilson & Co., bankers, of New York, who have purchased a large majority of the stock under the terms of a contract made by the old company with Thomas Nevins, of Orange, N. J. The option under the Nevins contract would have expired Saturday, but the final details were not arranged until long after banking hours. The consideration for the stock purchased is not stated, but it is believed to be upwards of one-half million dollars, besides which the purchasers relieve the company of a considerable outstanding indebtedness. New directors have been elected, and J. M. Edwards, of New York, was elected president, and R. T. Wilson, of New York, treasurer.

The declarations were demurred to and transferred to the United States district court and argued before Judge Severins here Saturday and the demurrer sustained.

He was arrested, but a gang of about twenty white caps took him from jail and gave him 100 lashes on the bare back and tied him to the trunk of a tree. He was rescued by the sheriff's posse and may not recover. None of the party have been apprehended or recognized.

Arrested for Embezzlement.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Low rate excursions every month over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. E. E. Posey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile, Ala.

Any candidate who is boycotted by the Knights of Labor next fall can use that fact to gain the unanimous support of the American Federation of Labor.

That treasury "deficit" is now a handsome pile of gold that is increasing by the shovelful.

The earlier symptoms of dyspepsia, heartburn, and occasional headaches, should not be neglected. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla to be cured.

The chances of happiness are greater when persons of the same faith are united.

Hood's Pills cure all liver ills.

This Congress so far has more to its credit than is generally conceded. For one thing, about $30,000,000 has been saved on the appropriations.

DEAR MR. EDITOR:—In my last letter my trip had been accomplished as far as Georgetown. Here I would have to cross Argentine Pass, the highest mountain pass in the world, 13284 feet above the sea level. I made inquiries on the main street about the pass and soon had a crowd about me. They all said that it was impossible to cross with a bicycle. Only one wheelman had ever crossed it, and that was several years ago when the road was in a good state. One team only had crossed in three years. An old doctor in the crowd advised me to get a man and bronchoes to take me over. I listened to all their advice, and then did as I had decided to do. I bought a good big lunch and strapped the box to my wheel and started up the pass amid prophecies that I would be back before night. The first two miles were very steep and the road filled with boulders over which I was compelled to carry my wheel. At the end of two miles I reached a mining camp, and saw the last human faces which I was to see for 12 miles. The miners shook their heads dubiously and I know they expected me back. Such a road; above me crags were to be seen frowning and threatening to descend in thundering masses. Below the trail a stream foamed and roared through granite chasms and fell over a cascade at intervals of 50 to 100 feet. The white foam was continuous for many rods at times where the waters seethed among flinty rocks. There was a wilderness about me such as I had not seen before. All was confusion. Nature built that gorge in a hurry. She put all the material there but left it in hopeless confusion. Soon I entered a pine strip and here the road was ridable for about two miles, and that was all I rode for about 14 miles. After this was passed my road soon ascended above the timber line. There were spring flowers all about me. There is a flora here such as I had not seen in the mountains. I had passed beyond summer and was enjoying the spring time. Flower beds are here of the most gorgeous hues, and arranged to please the eye as no skilled gardener could place them with the most subtle art. The valley and the mountain side was cut with many a stream, and by the roadside bubbled up the clearest and most tempting springs. Everything led my thoughts to Greek Mythology, and I half expected to come upon some oreads in the secluded spots. Not a mountain nymph have I found in the Rockies, but lots of frightfully homely women and girls, who even Southey could not conjure into Nymphs. The witch of the Alps has a rival in the mountains here for I have seen her. But the poetry of the situation was ephemeral, for clouds very black and very demonstrative came up. I put on my rubber cape and plodded on. Then I was almost on a level with the clouds, and the lightening was altogether too playful about me. The thunder rattled in the crags, and about my ears. I wonder what a thunder bolt would do with a nice Victor bicycle if it should lightly toy with it for a moment. A question also arose about the effect of pneumatic tires upon a stream of electricity and I tried to recall enough Physics to determine this interesting problem. I had been informed that only bronchoes had crossed the pass for some time and I began to think that I was a near relative of the broncho whose first name was Jack. But the worst was to come. Hail began to beat and sting my hands and face. There is no monotony in the mountains and the hail soon gave place to snow. For an hour the snow fell about me, and soon on the 31st day of July, I was wading in snow and trundling a bicyle. Pleasant, very much so. From out the snow I could pluck the most beautiful flowers, and with a natural yearning for novelty I snowballed an innocent pine stump. Finally the snow ceased or I got above it, and seating myself at the side of a mountain spring I ate my lunch in oppressive solitude. When I started on the light air at the high altitude began to affect me. I could walk and push my wheel only 40 or 50 feet at a time then rest a minute. My heart beat rapidly and I panted with the least exertion. The top of the pass was in sight, but high above, and the road zig-zagged back and forth to get less of an incline. To avoid the long distance around by road I climbed the side of the mountain and reached the road at a point about 50 feet above me, but I decided that such short cuts did not pay for I had to drag my wheel and reached the road exhausted. But suspense is painful. I reached the top and all my toil had its reward. 5000 feet below me lay the green valley. Towering in snowy majesty on the other side was Gray's Peak. In all directions the caps of snow upon the summits of numberless mountains loomed up. This is the very crest of the Rockies and as far as the eye pierces the mountain air one can see the grand rugged towers of the ranges. The sources of two rivers lie on either side of the pass. One finally flows into the Atlantic. In the distance was Green Lake with its buried petrified forest. A beautiful legend about the punishment of a band of Ute Indians is told about the lake. They killed a young brave and his bride, and at night the water from a fountain flowed into a hollow where they were encamped and drowned them all. The forest also was covered and has petrified. A descent of two miles now confronted me. I was to descend in two miles as far as I had ascended in 12. Such a descent as it was. Along the almost vertical side of the mountain a road had been cut. Sharp rocks filled the road and at times it was so narrow where the outer edge had caved away that I was compelled to carry my Victor and hug the clift closely to avoid plunging into the Valley a number of thousand feet below. This all had an end and after spending 8 hours in traversing 14 miles, I reached Decatur at the foot of the Pass. The 30 or 40 houses which I saw above had only one inhabitant. The houses were deserted because mining silver is not a profitable business at present. I slept in a miners shanty that night and next morning heard their hopeful story of a new claim which they had located and were sure of a fortune. From here I went along the canyon to Kokomo and Robinson, the Sodom and Gomorrah of modern times. Whisky is the staff of life here. I must simply catalogue my adventures from here out, how I crossed mountain streams, over logs, and rode along paths where I had to calculate by trigometric functions whether my pedal would be up or down as I passed a rock in the path. If down I must leap off of my wheel. The mountains on both sides had such varied forms, sugar loaf mountains, hen coup and tent shape mountains, great bulky mountains and lean hollow sided mountains rose on either side. The mountain streams would sing any song my fancy dictated and my ride to Leadville was very pleasant except that the storm; had made the roads very muddy. I arrived in Aspen safely and will write you about my trip back to Colorado Springs later.

OBITUARY.

The death of Robert B. Titus occured Aug. 14th. For a number of years he had been a sufferer, gradually growing until death relieved him. He was born 58 years ago in Washingtonville, Penn. He came to this county when but a young man, and has lived here ever since. He united with the Presbyterian church during the ministry of Dr. Wishard in 1864. Mr. Titus was a consistent Christian and died in the same faith that he had embraced as a young man. During the many months of suffering this faith was his hope and in the closing hours his joy and comfort. To him death had no terror; it was the culmination of his life's desire, the reaping of the reward, the gathering of life's sowing. Two children awaited him in glory, while two remain the comfort of the mother. The funeral took place Aug. 16th at the family residence, and his body was laid to rest in the Tecumseh cemetery. Rev. Charles M. Brown being absent, the services were conducted by Rev. E. L. Hurd, D. D., and were deeply impressive and comforting to the loved ones and a large number of friends who were present to pay their last tribute of respect to the departed.

The W. C. T. T. will hold a tea meeting at the home of Mrs. Mary Sutton on Friday afternoon of this week. The ladies of the Britton Union have an invitation to attend and enjoy the afternoon.

Those boys who wish to be recognized as young men when they are out driving with a young lady, will do well to bear in mind that fast driving and "cowboy" yells on Sunday nights not only degrade their manhood but lay them liable to the law.

We think the person that stole Mrs. Miller's peaches Monday night, is about as low down as a person can get. We can't believe anyone but a thoughtless child or a heartless wretch would treat a widow in so shameful a manner. Mrs. Miller is a hard working woman and a mother to every one and should receive the friendship of all.

Misses Collins & Dersham, having opened millinery and dressmaking rooms in Mrs. W. H. Arner's home, desire to make the acquaintance of the ladies of the village and vicinity. A call at their place of business will receive the kindest attention of the young ladies. The young ladies come to our village highly recommended by the people of Blissfield, and it is hoped the residents of this village will extend a hearty welcome.

A new girl at Mr. and Mrs. Cure's, and Ed says 'tis bald like her pa's, so this is the first score for them.

The Onsted and Rome Center nines crossed bats, on Saturday afternoon and indulged in ice cream in the evening.

The types made us say last week that Miss Holmes instead of Miss Howes would teach here, so we wish to correct the error.

If it is not too late we wish to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Fred Randolph, and wish them joy in their new relationship as man and wife.

The brick and tile yard of Howard & Hand is being rushed with work at present in supplying them goods for their many customers.

The Cambridge Junction and North Rome boys played a game of ball at the farmers picnic, and the score stood 15 to 16 in favor of the latter club.

A new boy arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wimple, last Saturday, and grandpa and grandma Wimple smile all over as it is their first invitation as grandparents.

Saturday's breeze was the stiffest of the season. Alanson Updyke's windmill, Seymour Love's chimney, part of Web Love's barn roof, also the windmill on the old Kishpaugh place; straw stacks were scattered broadcast, and much timber laid low, and shade and fruit trees ruined; great damage was done in the apple orchards, the apples being nearly all shaken from the trees.

AGUE CAKE.

Enlargement of the Spleen Caused by Chronic Catarrh.

People who have been much afflicted with malaria or fever and ague are very liable to have a fullness or enlargement of the left side just under the ribs. This is commonly called in malarious districts ague cake. This fullnes is due to enlargement of the spleen, caused by the malaria. The enlarged spleen presses against the heart above, causing palpitation of the heart and shortness of breath. It also presses against the stomach and bowels, causing disturbed digestion, bloating, constipation, gurgling in the left side, and a formation of great quantities of gas.

As long as there is a particle of the malarial poison left in the system, not only will the ague cake continue to disturb the function of the other organs, but the enlarged organs tend to perpetuate the poison in the system.

It seems to be a settled fact that Peru-na is the most reliable, if not the only, remedy that can be relied on to cleanse the system in cases of chronic malaria. It never fails to bring relief to these disagreeable symptoms, and if a regular course of Pe-ru-na is taken it does not fail to permanently cure.

In order to furnish the public a complete knowledge of the effect of Pe-ru-na in old cases of chronic malaria the Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio, have published an illustrated pamphlet on chronic malaria, which will be sent free to any address.

STONE & WELLINGTON, Madison, Wis.

China's attempt to blow Japan off the sea while she is beheading her own people at home entitle her to put up the sign: "This is my busy day."

THE LECTURE COURSE OF 1894-95.

Fine Array of Attractions, Consisting of Music, Oratory, Impersonations and Magic. All of a High Order.

Tecumseh has gained a reputation for her successful and high-toned lecture courses. Few cities had better courses than Tecumseh offered during the seasons of '91, '92 and '93. Last season, owing to the world's fair and the hard times, no Star Course was given, but this year there is such a wide-spread desire for a course that the gentlemen who made up the old committee determined to take the work in hand once more. They have arranged for six entertainments, as follows:

George R. Wendling, lecture, Nov. 12.
Temple Quartet Concert Co., Nov. 24.
Maro-Battis Combination, Jan. 10.
The Maud Powell string quartet, Feb. 8th.
Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., lecture, Feb. 20th.
Prof. John B. DeMotte, Illustrated lecture, March 9.

It will be seen that the above list gives great variety, all of it by number, one talent.

George R. Wendling, who opens the course, is too well known to require any description. As an orator he ranks among the best before the American public. Prof. David Swing says of him "Great and powerful as Ingersoll and Cook are, it is a pleasure to turn from both and hear Wendling."

The Temple Quartet Concert Co., assisted by Genevieve Pugh, cannot fail to please those who were so delighted with the Lotus Glee Club. For their entertainment is similar in character and their reputation equally good. It is unquestionably at the head of American male quartets. Miss Pugh is a reciter of marked dramatic ability, and is highly commended by the leading critics and authorities, among whom is Leland T. Powers.

The Maro-Battis entertainment will be something of an innovation on our former courses. Mr. Maro is a prestidigitateur and magician, who gained great popularity last year by his unique program, fascinating his audience by his bewildering slight-of-hand tricks, and Mr. Battis is an impersonator and humorist who has won the highest encomiums from the press. The combined program of these two gentlemen furnishes a pleasing variety that never fails to delight an audience. That their entertainment is a refined one is attested by the commendations of secretaries of Y. M. C. A. before whom they have appeared.

Next on the course will come an entertainment that will doubtless appeal to our musically inclined people very strongly.

The Maud Powell String Quartet will rank with any musical event ever given in Tecumseh. Miss Powell has an international reputation as a violinist and has been identified with the best musical societies in the country. The rest of the quartet consists of the accomplished violinists, Johannes Miersch Paul Miersch and Josef Kovarik, all of whom by their talents are worthy associates of Miss Powell. The committee consider that in this company they are offering the music-loving people of Tecumseh a rare treat.

In Rev. Thomas Dixon the committee feel that they have secured an orator who will please and instruct his audience in the same powerful manner as Russell H. Conwell. Mr. Dixon is pastor of the 23rd Street Baptist church, New York City, and though only about thirty years old, he has gained national prominence by his oratory. A great many bright things have been said about him. T. B. Kingsbury, D.D., L. L.D., says of Dixon, "He can pack away a marvellous amount of thought, language, description and rollicking humor in an hour." The New York Tribune says: "He would make his fortune as an actor. Indeed, he could almost preach in pantomime." Dr. Henson, of Chicago, says: "I always feel, after hearing Dixon, as if I had been on a spree, and wanted to go on another, for I see angels instead of snakes, legions of angels."

Though last on the course Prof. John B. DeMotte, A.M., Ph. D., will not be the least in the benefit as well as pleasure which he will give his audience. He is conceded to be the greatest lecturer on the platform to-day in his special line of work. Though his lectures are of a scientific nature, he makes them very entertaining by his stereopticon illustrations. His lectures have received unbounded praise for their entertaining character.

The price of season tickets will be the same as in past, $1.50, and with an attractive list of entertainments we have no doubt there will be no difficulty in disposing of the whole number issued. As only 600 will be issued, people should not delay too long in securing them. A committee of three young ladies, the Misses Sena Hosmer, Carrie Osborn and Etta Coddington have been appointed to sell season tickets, or they can be procured of J. H. Smith or S. W. Anderson. Single tickets will be 50 cents.

TECUMSEH, MICH., SEPT. 13, 1894.

The base ball tournament and the Republican convention last week brought two big rain storms, which were very welcome. Come again, gentlemen.

"Chicago is a disgrace to civilization," says a Chicago evening paper. We knew that it was pretty bad, but this frank admission by a good authority is almost surprising.

Friends of Colonel Breckinridge in Richmond, Ky., hanged their candidate's opponent in effigy the other night. Evidently this other candidate is suspected of being a gentleman.

Vermont went strongly Republican as was expected, but the Democrats stood up to the rack bravely, polled a large percentage of their vote and actually elected several members of the assembly.

Whether the Democratic majority in Arkansas shall be 5,000 or only 2,000 is a matter of small importance. In either case it will be large enough to show that the Democratic grip on the state has not been loosened.

Every good woman can and does look after lives," says one of Colonel Breckinridge's friends. If this is the theme of a discussion by which he benefited from the shafts, brickbats and rotten eggs along the line of the late campaign travels.

Commenting on Cleveland's last letter, the Boston Post says: "The President's letter is opportune and in all respects admirable. In so many things he has done at the right time and in the right manner, he has done nothing better than this."

President Cleveland's letter to Congressman Catchings is very generally commended. He strikes out from the shoulder and tells the people plainly what his views are on the question of reform. And the people are with him to-day as they were in 1892.

Indiana farmers are feeding their wheat to hogs and selling their corn, reversing the usual process. Wheat sells for only 40 cents per bushel, while corn goes quickly at 49 to 45. Moreover, wheat is said to contain almost twice as much fat producing nutriment as corn. Hogs are high, so there is economy in selling corn and feeding wheat, but it never was so before.

Here is a specimen of business enterprise, such as one seldom sees: An enterprising citizen of Lansing is an undertaker, a furniture dealer and a coroner. He recently sold a man a bed and the unlucky man was killed by the thing closing up and smothering him to death. The versatile merchant then ascertained the cause of death in his official capacity as coroner and afterwards officiated in the mournful proceedings which followed.

The average rainfall in the state in August did not exceed three-fourths of an inch, or two inches less than the usual amount in this month. In July there was a deficiency of one and three-fourths inches. There was a very light rain, throughout the state, general July 20, but none from that date to the 1st of September. With a drouth thus practically unbroken during the two principal crop growing months of July and August, it is not difficult to estimate the condition of crops. They are dried up. Corn, potatoes and garden truck are damaged beyond recovery, the yield will be but a small per cent of an average, and pastures afford little or no feed for stock. The rains of last week came too late to do much good as corn cutting is already in progress.

The Philadelphia Times thus comments on the defection of Senator Jones: "If Senator Jones were a mere politician, such as his colleague Mr. Stewart and the Populist leaders generally, his defection from the Republican organization would be generally passed by with the remark that he is simply looking out for his re-election to the Senate two years hence; but Senator Jones is not a man of that kind of structure. He is a big brained, honest-hearted, square man, and has been since the retirement of Conkling the ablest Republican debater in the Senate, although he seldom participated in Senatorial discussion. He is not therefore looking after his re-election to the Senate, for he has yet three years to serve of his present term, and being entirely single from the herd of freaks who advocate the Populist cause, much more than ordinary importance must necessarily be attached to the political move he has just made.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, Sept 7, 1894.

A political sensation of the first magnitude was that sprung upon the country by Senator Jones, of Nevada, when he announced his withdrawal from the Republican party and his membership of the Peoples' party. Senator Jones is now serving his fourth term in the Senate, and his prominence in the Republican party is attested by his being a member of the Finance committee, which is always regarded as a high party honor. To say that the populists are jubilant over their distinguished recruit is putting it very mildly indeed. Already there is some talk of Senator Jones being made the populist nominee for the Presidency in 1896, but that cannot be—he was born in England.

At the headquarters of the populist Congressional Campaign committee Senator Jones' letter is regarded as a campaign document of inestimable value, particularly in the northwestern States, where there are many who believe with Senator Jones in the free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1, but still remain in the old parties, trusting that their parties will eventually endorse the idea. Senator Jones destroys that illusion by ridiculing the various "silver planks" in the following vigorous language: "All these resolutions and so-called silver planks are the same sort of dust that for many years has been thrown into the eyes of silver Republicans and silver Democrats to blind them sufficiently long to permit a particular election to be held, and to secure their votes for that election. If those conventions favored the free coinage of silver by the United States at a ratio of 16 to 1, without regard to the policies of foreign governments, the English language is sufficiently copious for them to say so".

The populists believe that the letter will be worth at least twenty members of the next House to their party by reason of the votes of the silver men in the old parties that it will cause to be cast for populist candidates sooner or the silver issue. The Republicans are not saying much about the letter, but it is plain that they do not like it even a little bit, coming as it does right at the beginning of the Congressional campaign. It is particularly distasteful to the administration Democrats, because it will have a decided tendency towards forcing the silver issue to the front, and their calculations had all been made with the idea that it was to be ignored wherever possible and temporized with elsewhere. Men of all shades of political opinion agree that the letter is likely to prove an important factor in the Congressional campaign, although they disagree as to which party will be most benefited thereby.

There is also another important aspect to be considered. The populists are now figuring upon holding the balance of power in the Senate as well as the House in the next Congress. They say that the influence of Senator Jones will result in the election of one populist Senator from Colorado, Montana, Wyoming, Idaho and California and two from Utah. Should their expectations be realized there is little doubt that they will hold the balance of power in the Senate after the fourth of next March. They are also claiming that Tillman and Irby, of South Carolina will act with them, certainly upon the silver question, if not upon all others. It will require 46 Senators to control the Senate of the next Congress and should Arizona and New Mexico get admitted in time to send Senators to the fifty-fourth Congress it will require 48. All of which shows that the political situation is in a very interesting condition, and that there are very few certainties ahead.

It seems to be generally conceded by South Carolina Democrats in Washington that Gov. Tillman will be sent to the Senate. One of them—Mr. Miles W. Blalock—says: "I notice that speaker Crisp, Senator Gordon and Representative Bourke Cockran are reported as intending to go to South Carolina to stump the State in the interest of Gen. Butler for re-election to the Senate. If those gentlemen are wise they will stay out of South Carolina. No power on earth can defeat Gov. Tillman's election to the senate. If any of his friends should, in hope of serving him, go on the stump, it would only solidify the Tillmanites: it would be a waste of time, a fool's errand, and I have no idea that the gentlemen mentioned are really thinking of such a mission."

The treasury department is preparing for the reorganization provided for at the last session of Congress. It is said that the large number of dismissals to be made are to be based on the merits of the employes, but all the same those without political influence are badly frightened.

A BOOK WORTH READING.

Wealth against Commonwealth, which is announced for early publication by Harper & Brothers, is a book on the "trusts" or monopolies, which are so conspicuous a feature of American life. It is not an argument, but a dramatic presentation of the human facts of the combinations in sugar, coal, matches, meat, oil, and many other things. It has been the aim of the author to give a picture of the realities of modern business, and to make some of its mysteries clear to the common people, out of whose lives and labors its fabrics are made. It is, as he says, a venture in realism, not in the world of fiction, but of realities. Monopoly is treated broadly, as the supreme expression of our commercial tendencies, and the chief social and political fact of a civilization which is giving to business what other civilizations gave to war and religion. Our great trade combinations are regarded as merely illustrations of a movement which is itself but an illustration of the spirit of the age. Of these, the oil trust is taken as the prototype of all the rest, and is described in full detail. Its growth is traced from its origin to its vast proportions now, when it controls the oil, and several other, markets of a continent—perhaps four continents—and is probably the most influential and most dreaded financial power in America. It is a romance of the business, as absorbing in its interest as any ancient or mediæval romance of conquest. The direct bearing of the book upon the most important social and economical questions now under discussion everywhere is obvious. It contributes to the debate an immense stock of pertinent facts. By his well-known article in the North American Review on "Lords of Industry" in 1884 the author gave the public its first clear view of the centralization of industries. The debate which he then initiated has been growing more important every year, and the present volume, the embodiment of ten year's study, finds the subject first on the order of the day in politics as well as in livelihoods.

The more we think about Richard Croker's retirement from politics the more we admire his foresight.

Yes.

Yes.

And when dirty you need only wipe them off with a wet cloth or sponge?

Yes.

Wonderful! How are they made?

A linen collar covered on both sides with waterproof "CELLULOID." Looks exactly like a linen collar.

Is it the only waterproof collar and cuff made?

No, but it is the only one made with the linen interlining and consequently the only one that can give entire satisfaction, because it is the best.

How can I know that I get the right kind?

Because every piece is stamped as follows:

I am now married and have two healthy children." C. W. LEWIS, Saginaw, Mich.

GOING ABROAD.

The other shore—she sails to that
And leaves me here alone, whereat
I sigh in vain and let a tear
Slip down my cheek. Another dear,
However, still is left me at

The other stand, and I hang my hat
Up there until she come, whereat
I much rejoice. Betimes, I fear
The other shore.

Ah, me, I talk but through my hat
When I begin to talk like that,
And still I have a doubt and fear,
And hope presents but little cheer,
Yet if I'm left I'll take for that
The other, sure.

THE RAY'S WORK.

Of all the beautiful things in this beautiful world there was none that the little ray loved so well as the summer sea. He and his comrades would play by the hour together with the rippling wavelets, darting from one to another in dazzling, mad flashes of light, spreading themselves over the waters, a sheet of molten gold, till a touch of the wind's light lips broke it up into a thousand shimmering fragments. And the waves loved their playmates, too, and each, as the rays kissed it, became itself a little golden sun, sending forth its light into the radiant air, for the sea, like a fickle, lovable woman, answers back to all in their own moods and is loved just because she cannot be trusted. Then, where the waves broke on the golden sands or round the clean, dark rocks, the little rays would fill their foam with light till it shone more brightly white than the Jungfrau's crest, and the music of the waves breaking was a joy song for their own loveliness. Laughing, they ran up the smooth sand and embraced with teasing play the small pink feet which scampered away before them, while the sun's rays flashed from their surface to meet the light, brighter still, which shone from children's eyes. Oh, those were happy days, and as the little ray danced along over the waters he hoped that they never might end.

But a time came when the voice of the wind sounded from afar. The sea heard it and was troubled to its depths at the new life of power and strength which was tearing within it, while the wavelets far and wide raised their tiny crests, and in ripples of white foam whispered the news one to another. The clouds, too, heard the voice and gathered together at its bidding to spread themselves a thick, dark curtain over the sea and hide from the sun's face the things which were to be. And so the little ray could visit the sea no longer nor join any more in sport with his favorite playmates. At this his heart was very sad, and he took no delight in the other pleasures to which his comrades called him. They told him of the wild games they played with the wind shaken leaves of the forest; of the snow cold peaks which they crowned with dazzling splendor of jewels; of fog laden valleys filled with dream forms of weirdest, strangest loveliness; of mysteries of beauty revealed midst the world's most squalid dreariness. But it was all in vain. The little ray longed for his lost playmates and would care for none of these things.

As he wandered sadly among the heavy, driving clouds, losing himself in their sullen masses, searching for some crevice through which he might penetrate, one of them pitied him. "Since you will it so," said she, "I will let you through, though I fear you will find that dreams that are past can never be dreamed again." Then she shrank back from her neighbor, and with one swift word of thanks the little ray darted down through the opening she had made.

Down he went to the sea below and there lay quivering and lost in its black gulf. Oh, what a changed world it was! Above him the tempest hurried along and shouted to the waves as it went, and the waves threw their white heads up and answered back in crashing thunders. "Death, death, and the end of all things!" passionately yelled the tempest. "Ruin!" roared the waves. "Naught is that can withstand us!" a world of darkness and tumult and terrible unrest. The little ray lay where he had lighted, tremulous and afraid, now glimmering for an instant among cataracts of rushing foam and then lost again in the dark depths of the water.

"Ha!" cried the waves when they saw him. "So you are here, little ray. The world is changed since you saw it last." "Changed indeed," said the ray. "Oh, why cannot you be as you were before, my playmates?" But the waves laughed, shaking spray from their crests till the tempest caught it and whirled it mountain high in the air. "Give us the winds for playmates," they cried, "and the men's lives for our sport. Talk to us not of the wretched, spiritless days that are past. The world is worth living in now." "But you were happy then. You rejoiced in the earth's beauty and were happy," said the little ray wistfully. "Because we knew no better," they answered. "We have learned since then that there is something fairer than beauty, more glorious than joy. Oh, the rapture of fury when we raise the ship high in the air to hurl her down on the rocks beneath—the cruel rocks whom we love and linger to kiss and infold in our soft white arms even then in the joy of that moment of power. To crush into pieces the mighty vessel with all its wealth and labor of workmanship; to scatter abroad the heavy fragments, flinging them to and fro in the very scorn of our sovereign strength; to watch men gasp in their death agony as we lift ourselves above their writhing bodies, and then to crash down and dash the life from their lips—this is power, little friend; this is power, and there is no glory in the world like the glory of power."

The ray grew chill and wan and trembled as he listened. "Is there nothing, then, left which is fair to look upon in all this waste of waters?" he cried, and he wandered dismally on. Everywhere the same dark gulfs and white crested mountains mingling together in tumultuous chaos; everywhere floating fragments of wreck and the stain of earth torn from its parent shore; ruin and destruction and nothing that was fair to look upon.

Far out to sea a woman, with a child in her arms, floated alone in a small open boat. Alone they had been saved from a wrecked and sunken ship—saved from drowning, as it seemed, but to die of hunger, and for hours they had tossed helpless at the mercy of the waves. Many a ship had come near them, but the woman's cries were not heard in the howling of the tempest, and beneath the darkened sky the fluttering rag she waved was lost in the spray which enveloped her. So the ships went on. The woman's voice grew faint, and despair was in her heart. "Let death but come quickly," she cried, "and but for my child it would be welcome—but for my child and for his father awaiting him at home. I have cried. I have prayed in vain. No help is left in earth or in heaven."

But the little ray wandered on toward her over the sea, and the woman, lifting her heavy lids, saw the coming glimmer on the water. Her breath came quicker, her pale lips trembled, her glance followed swiftly up to the patch of blue sky above, while over her death-like face and in her dulled eyes there broke a light such as the ray had never seen before. At the sight of it now he flashed back up to the heavens beyond the clouds. "Come," he cried to his comrades, "come and see, for there is something fairer than aught that has been before, fairer than the sunlit sea or than the laughter on children's lips." His comrades flocked to his call and poured down through the crevice in the clouds, widening it as they went. Then they stretched themselves, a broad path of light, from the sky above to the lonely boat, which they bathed in their soft radiance.

Across the storm driven sea, cleaving the waves asunder with stately motion, a great ship came. The eyes of those on board her, wearied with gloom, turned gladly to that bright spot on sky and sea, and turning saw the boat, saw the white face of the woman and her waving signal. So the ship altered her course, and soon the mother and her burden stood safe upon the decks.

Evening drew near. The tempest had fled now, and thus left alone the tired, gray waves, their strength failing and their fury spent, were heaving in sullen impotence to rest. The clouds, falling away from the sky, gathered themselves in soft, changing masses of vapor around the edge of the sea. The sun, sinking lower and lower, called to the rays to come. Sadly they heard the call. They bade farewell to their beloved earth in a passion of fervid color. Upon wave and cliff, mountain and cloud, they rained their glowing kisses, and earth's beauty quivered into new glory, as does a maiden's in her lover's embrace. Then they drew together, a road of golden splendor on the sea as they crowded westward after their departing king. With slow, majestic motion he sank to rest.

But the little ray hung back. He had found the cloud who had stood his friend that morning, and he waited to give her goodby. He was filling her now with his own golden glory of light as he whispered to her of all the beauty which was in the world. Alas, she would stay with it still in the wonder of the night, the great dark peace which he never might know. He thanked her, too, in loving words and kisses till she blushed red with pleasure, and then with tender, slow reluctance he drew away from her. As he went the flush faded, passing in gentle change through every shade of russet and purple till the cloud was left alone, resting soft and gray on her twilight couch.

But the little ray was thinking of the light of hope which he had seen in the woman's eyes that day. "Ah," said he to himself, "if I could only shine like that!" And with this wish in him he lingered still in the sky beneath, coloring it a green so pure and so tender that to the woman watching from the ship's deck it seemed as if heaven's own spring were bursting into blossom in her sight. But the light lessened, and the color faded, and she remembered that it was but sun tinted vapor after all. She sighed, but the sigh left her lips in a smile, for the child laughing stretched his hands to her face. Lovingly she pressed him closer to her and drew her shawl more warmly round him. "Good night, little one," she whispered. "You must sleep now, for the day is ended. To-morrow, when the light comes back, you shall wake again." Then she bent her head down toward his face and mingled her smiles with his in a long, soft kiss.

That was the last thing which the little ray saw before he, too, followed the sun to rest.—Pall Mall Magazine.

A Big Dress Order.

"Women play odd tricks on one another sometimes," said a smart American woman the other day, "but the queerest I ever heard of was perpetrated by one social leader in a western city upon another. They were rivals and hated each other accordingly, though outwardly they preserved the semblance of pleasant relations. Every chance that either got to give a dig at the other was eagerly seized.

"But the final and most effective stroke, after which no calls were exchanged, was delivered by Mrs. L——. She sent out cards for a grand entertainment and then took pains to find out what Mrs. F——, her competitor, was going to wear. A gorgeous pink brocaded satin was the material of Mrs. F——'s gown, it was ascertained.

"Accordingly Mrs. D——, whose husband was in the dry goods business, obtained several hundred yards of the same identical stuff and draped the walls of all the rooms on the lower floor of her house with it. You may imagine the feelings of Mrs. F—— on arriving in her superb new frock, which she expected to make a sensation. Naturally she ordered her carriage and drove away in tears."—London Tit-Bits.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. HOMEWARD BOUND.

Some of The Beautiful Towns in the Mountains of Colorado.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 9, '94.

DEAR MR. EDITOR:—As my trip from Aspen back over the mountains was by a different route and had varied features I think a description will have interest. Aspen is one of the chief mining towns in Colorado. My friend succeeded in obtaining permission to lead me down into the bowels of the earth for about a mile and a half. I longed for my Victor when we reached the far end of the cold, damp and dark tunnel, and had to plod back while fellows on velocipedes went rolling by us on the track. Another day we climbed the mountain side, entered a mine and were dropped in a bucket 600 feet, from which level we crawled and squirmed through a tunnel to the side of the mountain and down to the town. After three days viewing the various places of interest my friend, Fred McNair, and I started back over the mountains. Fred was to accompany me to Tin Cup and then return. We rode up Castle Creek to Taylor Pass. This pass is about 12000 feet high and was a great relief after my experience over Argentine Pass. The road has a panorama of wonder views on both sides. In the valley below are long ghastly lines of bare pine trees. On the valley sides these stricken pines have fallen and lie in heaps like jack straws. As you ascend the river grows smaller and tries to make amends for its diminutive size by raging and tearing along. The steady climb of 5 miles brought us at last to the summit where we erected a pyramid of stones and stacked a stick of wood with our names upon the top. This we crowned with a broken beer bottle to keep the rain from our pencilled and illustrious names. Whatever height man has attained there the beer bottle has ascended also. Down the rocky descent we went then to the valley below. Brake down and sliding and bumping over boulders we jeapordized our limbs and bicycles to get to the fine valley road as soon as possible. Once there, we had a good ride for 30 miles through Taylor park. Occasionally we rode through the creek splashing water upon ourselves and wheels. We were within 11 miles of Tin Cup when Satan, in form like unto a ranchman tempted us. We could make Buena Vista over Cottonwood Pass and save 15 miles. Twenty-eight miles he said, and only 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Of course we could make such a short distance before dark, so we turned aside and were soon toiling up Cottonwood Pass, but this road had been unused for 8 years. It was filled with huge rocks, trunks of cottonwood trees lay across the path at every 100 feet on an average, we were obliged to lift our wheel over logs. Such a long Pass. We began to think there was no top short of heaven and my friend even prepared a little apology to make to St. Peter for his appearance in a bicycle uniform. To our surprise we attained the summit but only as the sun was going down over the mountains. Here was a grand scene. Mountains whose crevices were streaked with snow were golden crowned by the dieing god of a day. A beautiful lake lay in the hollowed top of a mountain near us. The whole western sky was illumined and the horison was ragged and uneven where the rude peaks pierced it. This was the poetry of situation but there was some terribly realistic prose: Twenty miles from Buena Vista, 7 miles from the foot of the pass. A heap of stones at the pass was crowned with the whitened skull of a cow. We wrote our names upon the skull with a sort of grim humor and started down the pass. This side of the pass was worse. Logs more frequent and stones always in the path. We had hardly progressed two miles before it was uncomfortably dark. A thick growth of large cottonwood trees was all about us, and the quarter moon which shown for half an hour scarcely pierced through the overhanging trees. We were desperately tired and at last my friend became sick and so weak that by the time we had pushed and struggled on two miles more in the dark he declared that he could go no further. I built a fire and we spread our capes upon the ground where he slept while I hunted timbers to burn. After three hours rest he said that he was much better and we both fed the fire and sat around awaiting morning. At one time we thought we saw the eyes of a wild animal lighted by our fire, but investigation proved that they were only two large flowers peeping over a log. Toward morning the cold became extreme and only the hottest fire kept us reasonably comfortable. When the first streaks of dawn appeared we started on and after two miles of difficult riding we reached the valley road and coasted nearly all 13 miles into Buena Vista. Part of the road is the finest I have ever ridden upon. Buena Vista is the most beautifully situated city in the mountains. About it is a wide level valley and at a distance the mountains rise in fantastic shapes and varied color. Some are gray, some red, and others are green with the vegetation of their sides. Great sandstone rocks have assumed wonderful shapes and lie in artistic disorder on the hills. Castles and causeways seem to have been wrought with great blocks of red granite. I remained that morning with my friend and in the afternoon resumed my journey, Hill Top, which was 16 miles distant and up hill all the way, I reached in two hours and then coasted down into alkali plains. The plain was bare of vegetation and as I could see the road in the distance. I rode across country upon a surface like a billiard table. But alas I came to a river and attempted to ride across but found it too deep and near the farther bank was obliged to leep ignominiously into the cold waters. I saw a ranch in the distance and rode at full speed to the door. Here I was invited to remain all night and did so. The ranchman was "baching it" as he said, but he was a good cook and I fared well. With the dawn I went on over perfect roads and during the day I coasted at one time 13 miles at a terrific speed and through a country which charmed the eye with its marvels and beauties in rock. The road sparkles with mica and is of disintregated sandstone. Giant ruins appear on either side apparently, and long streaks of colored rock appear piled as if to make a fortress. Through Manitou and by the Garden of the Gods I passed seeing the marvel of Ute Pass, and at last reached Colorado Springs, where I shall remain a few days. C. H. VANTINE.

OBITUARY.

It is with a feeling of deep sadness that we record the death of Francis C. Rector, which occurred at the family residence, two miles north of the village, Sunday, August 26th. Mr. Rector was born Dec. 22, 1841, at Delta, Ohio, where he resided until 15 years of age. During the year of 1857 he removed with his parents to Raisin township, settling near Holloway. He was married Nov. 30th, 1864, to Miss Frances Doty. Four children blessed this marriage. Two still remain with their mother, her comfort and cheer; Minnie and Eva are with their father in that better land. After several years, spent in Raisin he removed to the farm, where he breathed his last. He was a successful man and improved his place, making out of it a model home and farm. He was a man of many friends, as was attested by the great number who attended his funeral. He had one friend in whom he trusted much, one who accompanied him through his long illness and across the dark river, the One that he is now with. Mr. Rector had suffered many months, but through all was patient and brave. During the winter he made a confession of his love and faith in Christ Jesus, and was received into the Presbyterian church. Daily this love developed until he looked with joy to the moment that he should be at home with him. His calm resignation and joyful hope was most apparent to all who visited him. A friend said to him a few days before his death, "I hope that you will soon be better." He said, "better soon, but not here." To die thus is indeed gain. And the memory of such a death is a far greater heritage to those left behind than countless money and land. He was buried in the Tecumseh cemetery beside his two daughters so dear to him, who had preceeded him to that better land. A large concourse of friends followed the body to the grave, in love to him and to his bereaved wife and children. His funeral occurred Aug. 27th at the family residence and was conducted by his pastor, Rev. Chas. M. Brown.

OBITUARY.

Mary Jane Holmes was born in Yates county, N. Y., Jan. 31st, 1846. When 11 years of age she with her parents and brother moved to Ill. by boat and team, where she resided two years. In the winter of 1858-9 they moved to Macon, Lenawee county, Mich. On the 6th of Nov. 1862 she was united in marriage with Abraham D. Hunt. In Jan., 1868, with her husband and one son she moved to Franklin, where she has since resided. Although never very strong she always attended to her household duties, unassisted, until a few years past, bearing physical pain without complaint. She was a woman possessed of many rare qualities, chief among them being her very retentive memory, a clear judgment and a kind heart. She died Aug. 28th, 1894. A husband, three sons, an adopted daughter, an aged mother and a brother beside many relatives and friends are left to mourn her loss.

Indiana farmers are feeding their wheat to hogs and selling their corn, reversing the usual process. Wheat sells for only 43 cents per bushel, while corn goes quickly at 45 to 47. Moreover, wheat is said to contain almost twice as much fat producing nutriment as corn. Hogs are high, so there is economy in selling corn and feeding wheat, but it never was so before.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

GOOD NIGHT.

Pale in the amber flooded west
A horned moon dips low,
And soft through silver silences
The rose winds faintly blow.
Yet still a horned moon shall lend
A lance of lingering light
To cross the wind, to cross the dusk
And give my love good night.

The long lake rippling through its reeds
Hath lilies all ablow.
At fall of dew each sleepy flower
Folds up her leaves of snow.
Yet one fair lily bud shall wake
To smile all virgin white
Across the dark, across the dew
And give my love good night.

The light may fail, the lily fade,
The lightning's lurid glow
Flame in the sky, the rose winds rise
To storms that rudely blow.
Yet constant still, as rose to June,
This heart shall take delight
Across the dark, across the world
To give my love good night.

A DROP OF BLOOD.

In the summer of 1888 I was employed to look after some legal business at Boone Courthouse, W. Va. Leaving the railroad at Brownstown and taking directions and a horse from my landlord at that point, I set out through the mountains early in the afternoon, expecting to reach Racine in time for supper.

As the afternoon waned, however, I noticed that the road became constantly rougher and apparently more unfrequented until it was little more than a deserted pathway that crossed and recrossed the gravelly bed of a dry creek in a mad effort to remain in the narrow valley that wound circuitously among the mountains, whose black timbered summits seemed to stretch higher and higher above me in the gathering twilight. It being a cloudy day, I was completely mystified as to the points of the compass, and it now became evident to me that I had in some manner missed my way. I had already gone too far to retrace my steps before nightfall, so that unless I speedily found shelter I would be obliged to pass the night in the open air.

Being in nowise pleased with this prospect, I concluded to press on a little farther before abandoning the quest and had barely formed this resolution when a bend in the pathway brought me into full view of what appeared to be a large, square, southern mansion, surrounded by trees and situated a little way up the slope of a remarkably lofty mountain that rose precipitously behind it.

A nearer approach revealed an outward appearance of overgrowth and dilapidation. The fence had fallen down in several places. The open gate was barely supported by its rusty hinges. The yard was a mass of weeds. The condition of the house I could not determine in the dim light made dimmer by the heavy shadows of the trees. Between the tall weeds and briers there was a wide stone walk leading from the gate to the front door.

The prospect was not an inviting one, but as my situation had become somewhat desperate I determined if possible to obtain accommodations for the night.

My repeated knocks elicited no response beyond a hollow echo, and concluding the place to be deserted I tried the door. Somewhat to my surprise, it yielded, the rusty hinges creaking terribly as I pushed it wide open. As I entered I was greeted by that musty, lifeless odor common to places long closed and uninhabited. I had matches with me, and striking one I looked about me.

I was in a wide hall. Before me a dark staircase, partially whitened with dust, led to rooms above. To the left and right were closed doors, and attached to the white casement of the latter was a little bracket candelabra containing a cluster of six half consumed wax candles. Lighting two of these, I took one of them from the holder, and opening the door at my right entered.

The room in which I found myself was apparently the parlor of the deserted mansion. The dust covered haircloth furniture, which had evidently been for many years undisturbed, was of a style massive and once much in vogue. A number of paintings and engravings were upon the walls in tarnished gilt frames. A large chandelier suspended in the center of the room was of elaborate workmanship. The floor was covered with a heavy matting, the exact nature of which I could hardly determine, owing to the thick covering of dust. Passing on to the adjoining room, I was not disappointed in finding it to be a large bedroom with all the appointments peculiar to an old time southern home of wealth. I approached the tall canopied bed in the opposite corner and drew back the curtains. It was ready for the guests for which it had so long waited. The bedding was yellow with age, but the canopy had protected it from the dust. It had not been occupied for years.

I confess I was possessed with a sense of awe amid these surroundings, but not being of a timid nature I determined to pass the night beneath this roof in preference to enduring the heavy fog that always gathers at night in these mountains. Leaving my candle lighted, I returned to my horse and arranged his bridle rein so that he could eat the grass for a considerable space about him. Then, removing the saddle, I returned with it to my strange quarters.

Prying open one of the creaking windows and its heavy shutters to let fresh air into the musty apartment, I fastened back the draperies of the tall bed and threw back the long unused bedding, the odor of which reminded me of cerements. To relieve this somewhat I covered the pillow with my coat, and removing only my outer garments I lay down, for I was greatly fatigued with riding, an exercise to which I was totally unaccustomed.

My candle I had, with a few drops of melted wax, affixed to a small table near the center of the room, and having no desire to remain in darkness in this lonely place I left it burning.

As I lay there, wondering at my strange surroundings and not altogether free from a sense of fear at the silence and shadows of the deserted place, I now noticed for the first time that beyond my candle and a little to the left there hung against the partition wall separating the two rooms a full length portrait of a lady. The picture was an oil painting and the execution admirable. It was fully life size, and the frame that inclosed it wide and elaborate, although now tarnished and dusty.

But it was the figure itself that most attracted me. The face was that of a woman not beyond 20 years of age and beautiful in the extreme. Her hair was a wealth of glistening gold, her dress that of a bride. The picture appeared to have suffered but little from age, and the light as it fell upon it made the view from my position remarkably good. As I lay there in silent contemplation of this beautiful portrait I forgot any incipient fears that had hovered about me and fell to speculating upon the history of this deserted house and the story of that fair bride.

I was too tired to muse long. My eyelids grew heavier, and I caught myself mingling fact and fancy without being able to distinguish them. Then I fell asleep.

I do not know what time it was when I woke, but it must have been very late, for I noticed that the candle had burned low and was flaring wildly as from a draft. At that moment a fear came upon me such as I had never known. An iciness seemed creeping over my body, beginning at my feet and extending rapidly upward. I was trembling as with an ague.

A slight rustling sound from the next room attracted me, and turning my eyes involuntarily in that direction I almost expired from fear, for into the chamber, her head bowed and wringing her hands in evident distress of mind, there entered the lady of the portrait. The counterpart was exact—the dress, the pattern of the lace, even the rings upon her slender white fingers. That it was a spirit I never for a moment doubted.

Slowly she approached the bedside without noticing me at first and seated herself in a heavy armchair a few feet away, still moaning and wringing her beautiful hands. Raising her eyes at last, she seemed to become conciouss of my presence and spoke.

"Oh, pray for me," she moaned, "pray for my soul. Oh, pray for me,

I know not what power possessed me at that moment, but suddenly, in spite of my abject terror, I found myself upright upon my knees in the bed pouring forth a prayer for the beautiful, distressed spirit before me. As the words fell from my lips—words which seemed to be uttered through rather than by me—I noticed that she seemed to grow calmer and at last turned her sorrow stricken face full upon me. I noticed, too, and with the utmost terror, that the candle had burned down to the wood, and that in another moment we would be in darkness. Still the earnest words poured from my lips, and the face before me seemed to be growing misty in the flickering light of the expiring candle. Suddenly the figure rose from the chair, and taking one step toward me stretched forth her exquisite arms above mine and vanished. As she did so I distinctly felt something hot, like wax from a dripping candle, fall upon the back of my right hand. At that instant, too, the candle gave one final flare and went out.

When consciousness returned, I was lying across the bed, and the sun was streaming in at the open window. For a moment I was a little dazed at my surroundings; then it all came back to me. Seized with a wild panic—such panic as possesses stampeding cattle—I caught up my clothes and my horse's saddle and fled. As I passed the portrait its eyes seemed to follow me and added to my terrors. Through the dusty rooms, out of the weed grown yard, I tore as one distraught to where my horse was quietly waiting. A moment later I was urging him down the unfrequented path.

Not until I was far away did I pause in my frantic flight. Then, suddenly remembering, I glanced at the back of my right hand, and there—round, red and dry, like a crimson wafer—was a drop of blood.—Detroit Free Press.

Kite Flying In Burma.

Mr. E. D. Cuming, author of "In the Shadow of the Pagoda," describes the Burmese as much given to kite flying, an amusement that they contrive to enjoy with a minimum of bodily exertion. Their method of operations is very simple. Says Mr. Cuming:

You pare down two 12 inch slips of bamboo, tie them at their centers crosswise, run a thread around the four tips and paste upon this frame one thickness of paper. Tie a nail or a small screw nut to one corner, and your kite is made.

The altitude that a well made kite of this kind will reach is wonderful, and the lightest breath of wind will take it up. A hundred and fifty or 200 yards of strong sewing thread, wound on a skeleton reel of 4 inches in diameter and 8 inches in length, completes the equipment.

Then, having started the kite by a process of gentle playing, you squat down in the middle of the street, so as to keep your thread clear of the houses and let the kite help itself.

If you have fastened the thread with cunning, the kite rises almost perpendicularly, bringing you joy in the envy and admiration of those who cannot make a steeper angle than 40 degrees. The kite having taken out all the thread, you sit and contemplate it poised still and clear in the upper air for a few hours.

In Rangoon, on a still morning or evening, hundreds of kites float over the Burmese quarter of the town, some nearly out of sight, others hovering just above the roofs. When driving, your syce has frequently to halloo out of the way a middle aged man who is backing slowly down in midstreet coaxing his kite up. He goes about the business with a ponderous solemnity that raises it to the dignity of a science.

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have obtained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

History, says the Rev. Dr. John Henry Barrows in the September Forum, has scarcely any contrast to present greater or more instructive than that between "the light of burning heretics" which threw its glare over the enterprise of Columbus, and the purer splendor of a parliament of religions, which cast its radiance, four centuries afterward, over the Columbian anniversary.

Poverty or Riches, Which shall it be? Though there is abundance of wealth in this country, it is not as equally distributed as it should and would be if all were educated to look sharply after their business interests. How can this be done? To every young man and woman who completes a course of training at the Detroit Business University, the question is answered in a way that brings competency and wealth. If you would know about this institution, send for catalogue, 11-19 Wilcox Ave., Detroit, Mich.

Thursday, Aug. 30th, was Floyd Bryan's ninth birth-day, and his parents gave a little birth-day party in his honor. About thirty-five members of his Sunday School class were present, including his teacher, Miss Ellen Fisher, Mrs. J. D. Shull, Miss Hattie Smith and a few others. A very pleasant afternoon was spent beneath the shade trees on the lawn, and refreshments were served at five o'clock. Floyd was the recipient of several birth day gifts, which were justly appreciated, and the guests felt that they owed Mr. and Mrs. Bryan a vote of thanks for their hospitality.

The Republican Representative Convention for the first district in this county was held at Sutton's Opera House, in Tecumseh, last Saturday. The thunder storm arrived about the time the convention opened but that did'nt phase the delegates a bit. There was a full delegation from each town in the district. The members got down to business at once and inside of two hours their work was completed and the convention had adjourned. Thomas M. Camburn was honored with the nomination, and as there was no other candidate, he was nominated by acclamation. Mr. Camburn is one of the first citizens of Franklin and he will make a strong candidate.

For the past year and more, S. C. Stacy has been diligently at work preparing a lecture on the Columbian Exposition. His own personal observations during three visits at the Fair in 1893 and his facilities for gathering material from other sources have been combined to the best advantage, and the result is a descriptive lecture to which he believes people can listen with both pleasure and profit. It is divided into three sections and is profusely illustrated with stereopticon views. After several rehearsals he has finally perfected his arrangements to give the story in public, and will begin next week. The entertainment will be presented to the people of Macon at the M. E. church, Macon Village, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings; at the Grange Hall on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings. Further details will be announced in circulars. Don Bowen will act as advance agent and general assistant.

Last Tuesday evening Co. C enjoyed a drill to the music of the traveling orchestra which has been discoursing music about town this week. At the business meeting a committee of the Sergeants was appointed to wait on Capt. Hayden asking for a reconsideration of his resignation. A MYSTERY.

Unaccountable Disappearance of a Cassopolis Physician.

Dr. A. B. Conklin Enticed from His Home—His Failure to Return Arouses Suspicion of Foul Play—Details of the Affair.

DISAPPEARS AS DID CRONIN.

CASSOPOLIS, Sept. 10.—Sunday night, September 2, Dr. A. B. Conklin, the leading physician of this place, was called from his residence to his office, ostensibly on professional business. It was at 9 o'clock and with the assurance that he would be absent but a short time the doctor picked up his medicine case and started for his office. His wife waited for him until long past midnight, but he did not return. Monday dawned, but he was still absent. The wife became alarmed. During all the years of their wedded life Dr. Conklin had been a model of punctuality. It was the first time that he had remained so long from home without reason. If his business affairs happened to keep him away even an hour longer than usual it was his invariable custom to advise his family.

Mrs. Conklin's first step was to visit the office, but beyond finding a few articles misplaced there was no other evidence that a struggle had taken place. The front door was unlocked. Dr. Conklin had never failed to lock his office after business hours. This suspicious circumstance, as later developments proved, was evidence that his supposed murderers had gained entrance to the building and waited his coming.

The village was aroused and search made in every direction, but to no purpose. Stone Lake was then visited but nothing could be discovered there that tended to clear up the mystery. The lake has been dragged, but with no success, though the search is unabated, nearly everybody in that part of the country lending a willing hand.

Dr. Conklin's brother from Manchester has arrived here and is doing everything to ferret out the mystery. He says his brother was a witness in a murder case that is soon to be tried in the eastern part of Michigan, and he ascribes his disappearance to that. This is given color by the fact that for several days previous to the mysterious disappearance narrated above two strange men with apparently no business on their hands and evil looking enough to be guilty of any crime had been hanging around the place. A description of the physician was mailed to the detective agencies and police departments throughout the United States.

One of the articles found on the floor of the physician's office was a bottle of strychnine. This circumstance, while offered as confirming the theory of suicide, is not convincing for the reason that the body would have been found long before this as the result of the work of numerous searching parties.

Volunteers, members with Dr. Conklin in the secret fraternities, and private detectives have heretofore directed the work of investigation and search, but the notoriety given the village and the public clamor that the mystery be solved has resulted in the authorities taking hold, and greater efforts will be put forth to determine whether Dr. Conklin committed suicide or was the victim of a conspiracy to murder him. Within a radius of ten miles of Cassopolis are numerous small bodies of water. Organized parties will drag the lake bottoms, and also thoroughly search the stretches of timber land lying to the north, east and west of the village.

A reward of $2,000 has been offered for the discovery of the doctor dead or alive, and the search is being pushed vigorously. The fraternities of which the doctor was a member are urging the matter. Mrs. Conklin, though prostrated, still entertains hope that her husband is alive.

Dr. Conklin was a frequent contributor to the medical press and for several months had been engaged on a work entitled "Nerve Acid," which he hoped to have ready for publication at an early date. He was a prominent member of the Knights of Maccabees. The local lodge is divided in belief as to his fate, but has appointed committees to act in cooperation with the officers. Dr. Conklin carried life insurance to the amount of $6,000. There were times in his life when he became despondent, but no threats were ever made to end his fancied wrongs by suicide. His domestic relations were pleasant and his home life was marked by his devotion to his wife and children.

OPIUM SMUGGLERS CAUGHT.

Detectives Capture Two Men and 600 Pounds of the Drug.

ST. CLAIR, Mich., Sept. 8.—John Jacobs and John Green said to be members of a gang of smugglers with headquarters at Windsor, were arrested at 2:30 a. m. The prisoners crossed the river in a row boat with two trunks and about 600 pounds of opium and were arrested by detectives who had been laying in wait for them. The opium was obtained in Toronto. The capture is believed to be an important one, as the prisoners are thought to be experienced hands in the importing business with many big consignments of poppy-juice to their credit in the past.

They were placed under bonds of $2,500 each, which they were unable to give, and were taken to jail. They admitted their guilt to the local custom officials, but later concluded to plead not guilty. Green admits that he was formerly a special agent of the treasury department.

SUSPICIOUS STORY.

One Tramp Relates a Queer Yarn Concerning the Killing of His Chum.

CHEBOYGAN, Sept. 9.—A cold-blooded murder was committed Saturday afternoon 3 miles from this city on the track of the Mackinaw division of the Michigan Central railroad. The story as told by one of the men concerned is that he and the murdered man were walking on the track when they were stopped by other men, one of whom struck his chum on the head. While they were killing his chum, the man who tells the story ran in the woods, circled around and came out on the track, hailed a passing engine, got the body of his dead chum aboard and brought it here. The informer is in jail awaiting further developments. Officers with a crowd of men started out to search for the murderers. They are all tramps, and it is the opinion of many that the informer is the culprit.

A SIDEWALK DROPS.

Many Persons Injured and Several of Them Likely to Die.

None were killed, but a number were so seriously injured that their lives are despaired of. The worst injured are:

Mrs. Ball, ribs broken and bad cuts. Mrs. Y. P. Cassell, skull fractured and internal injuries. Mrs. Albert Mix, both legs broken. Mrs. F. H. Sprague, severely bruised. Mrs. William Sweezey, badly cut and internal injuries. Mrs. Frances Showalters, injured about the head and spine.

Furious Storm.

SAGINAW, Sept. 8.—The most severe electrical storm experienced here in years began at 7:30 Friday evening and continued four hours. The rain fell in torrents, cellars filled up, sewers overflowed and the water is nearly 2 feet deep on all down-town business streets. Considerable damage has been done.

County Seats Cannot Be Moved.

MURDERED IN HIS HOME.

An Aged and Wealthy Resident Slain Near Detroit.

DETROIT, Sept. 10.—C. V. Chauvin, 76 years of age, and a wealthy and prominent citizen of Grosse Point township, was found murdered in his home on the Grosse Point road northeast of the city late Sunday afternoon. The murderers have not been caught, but the officers claim to be close upon their trail.

Chauvin lived as a hermit in an isolated place. Joseph Groesbeck, a cousin of the deceased, called at his house late Sunday afternoon and discovered Chauvin's dead body on the floor. On his head were three terrible wounds, evidently inflicted by an ax. The murderers had ransacked the house, but probably found nothing of much value, as Chauvin kept little money with him. Persons in the vicinity claim to have seen two men go to Chauvin's cabin in the morning and afterward start from there toward the city.

Chauvin had lived as a hermit for eighteen years. He was once a member of the Michigan legislature, had held various local places of trust, was an intelligent student and is estimated to have been worth upward of $200,000. Three other attempts at robbing and killing him had been made, but it was quite well known of late that he kept nothing of value on his premises.

VICTIMS OF A STORM.

Two People Are Killed and Much Damage Is Done Throughout the State.

DETROIT, Sept. 9.—The heaviest rain and electrical storms known in this state for years prevailed Friday night and Saturday morning in the southern and central portions of the lower peninsula. Cities and towns were flooded and lightning bolts struck scores of residences and outbuildings. At Whitehall Mrs. Jacob Smith and son were instantly killed by a lightning bolt while sitting by an open window. At Dexter George Lyman was struck by a bolt, which rendered him unconscious. Electric light dynamos were burned out at Caro and Saginaw, and the street cars stopped at the latter place. Farm buildings reported burned aggregate a loss of $20,000. At Saginaw sewers overflowed and basements were flooded.

KALAMAZOO, Sept. 9.—Charles Bush, a Hollander, aged 20, was killed by lightning Saturday. He was returning from the celery fields with several others, who were shocked but not seriously injured.

CROPS DRIED UP.

Garden Truck Damaged Beyond Recovery and Pastures Offer No Feed.

LANSING, Sept. 9.—The Michigan crop report for September says: The average rainfall in the state in August did not exceed three-fourths of an inch. With a drought practically unbroken during the two principal crop-growing months of July and August it is not difficult to estimate the condition of crops. They are dried up. Corn, potatoes and garden truck are damaged beyond recovery; the yield will be but a small per cent. of an average. Pastures offer little or no feed for stock. There is little doubt that wheat will be largely fed to stock the coming winter. Thrashers' returns of more than 68,000 acres of wheat thrashed show that the average yield per acre in the state is 16.65 bushels.

WILL BE BROUGHT BACK.

Would-Be Slayer of Mayor Hobbs to Be Tried in Benton Harbor.

LANSING, Sept. 8.—Gov. Rich has issued a requisition on the governor of California for Louis Robb, who is wanted at Benton Harbor for assault with intent to kill. In April, 1893, Robb shot Mayor Hobbs, of Benton Harbor, and disappeared after being released on $3,000 bail. He was traced through Iowa and Colorado and finally was located in San Quintin prison. After reaching California he engaged as a stage driver, and while acting in this capacity stole an express package and was captured in Mexico after a desperate battle with the officers. His term at San Quintin is about to expire and he will be brought to Michigan.

Mayor Pingree Sued.

DETROIT, Sept. 10.—Fire Commissioner Goodfellow, Assistant Chief Elliott and Secretary Tryon brought suit Saturday against Mayor Pingree for false imprisonment on account of their arrest for alleged conspiracy to prevent his honor from seeing the books of the department. Commissioner Goodfellow sues for $25,000 and Tryon and Elliott for $15,000 each.

Rev. Father Lawrence Dead.

ESCANABA, Sept. 8.—Three hundred people of this city assembled at the depot to receive the remains of Rev. Father Lawrence who died at Calumet, Mich., of typhoid fever, that were on the way to be buried at Cincinnati, O. Father Lawrence was at one time pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic church for two years in this city.

Lightning Does Much Damage.

GREENVILLE, Sept. 8.—During a storm in this vicinity lightning destroyed a barn belonging to C. H. Wells valued at $300, and a barn belonging to John Kenyon, including farming implements and a valuable team of horses, causing a loss of $6,000. The electric lighting station was also burned out, entailing a loss of $800.

Dawn a Great Steam Yacht.

DETROIT, Sept. 9.—Detroit's two crack racing steam yachts, the Dawn, which has the reputation of being the fastest on the lakes, and the I. C. U., had a 14-mile race on the river Saturday afternoon. The Dawn won by fourteen minutes, making the run in 48:00, partly against wind and current.

Struck by Lightning.

BAY CITY, Sept. 8.—A heavy storm of wind and rain, accompanied by thunder and lightning, visited this section Friday night, extinguishing the forest fires. Thomas Laido, a railroad switchman, was struck by lightning and fatally injured.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South, and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Low rate excursions every month over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. E. E. Posey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile, Ala.

Are tell-tale symptoms that your blood is not right—full of impurities, causing a sluggish and unsightly complexion. A few bottles of S. S. S. will remove all foreign and impure matter, cleanse the blood thoroughly, and give a clear and rosy complexion. It is most effectual, and entirely harmless.

Chas. Heaton, 73 Laurel Street, Phila., says: "I have had for years a humor in my blood which made me dread to shave, as small broken pimples would be cut, thus causing shaving to be a great annoyance. After taking three bottles of S. S. S. my face is all clear and smooth as it should be—appetite splendid, sleep well and feel like running a foot race all for the use of S. S. S."

A BOOK WORTH READING.

Wealth against Commonwealth, which is announced for early publication by Harper & Brothers, is a book on the "trusts" or monopolies, which are so conspicuous a feature of American life. It is not an argument, but a dramatic presentation of the human facts of the combinations in sugar, coal, matches, meat, oil, and many other things. It has been the aim of the author to give a picture of the realities of modern business, and to make some of its mysteries clear to the common people, out of whose lives and labors its fabrics are made. It is, as he says, a venture in realism, not in the world of fiction, but of realities. Monopoly is treated broadly, as the supreme expression of our commercial tendencies, and the chief social and political fact of a civilization which is giving to business what other civilizations gave to war and religion. Our great trade combinations are regarded as merely illustrations of a movement which is itself but an illustration of the spirit of the age. Of these, the oil trust is taken as the prototype of all the rest, and is described in full detail. Its growth is traced from its origin to its vast proportions now, when it controls the oil, and several other, markets of a continent—perhaps four continents—and is probably the most influential and most dreaded financial power in America. It is a romance of the business, as absorbing in its interest as any ancient or mediæval romance of conquest. The direct bearing of the book upon the most important social and economical questions now under discussion everywhere is obvious. It contributes to the debate an immense stock of pertinent facts. By his well-known article in the North American Review on "Lords of Industry" in 1884 the author gave the public its first clear view of the centralization of industries. The debate which he then initiated has been growing more important every year, and the present volume, the embodiment of ten year's study, finds the subject first on the order of the day in politics as well as in livelihoods.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Third and Final Day of Last Week's Tournament.

The third day of the tournament show increased attendance. The management was censured strongly by the spectators, for early in the day it was announced that Britton and Cone would play at the close of the Milan and Tecumseh game, and when the time came Britton refused to play thus forfeiting the game to Cone. When the people paid to see two games and two days in succession only witnessed one, they felt that they had reason to complain of their treatment.

The game between Milan and Tecumseh proved very close and exciting though but few players of either team were in the game, they having both secured assistance from other teams. The game was called as 1:30 p. m. with Milan at the bat. Needham struck out. McKenzie and Hinkley made singles but Norris and Hartman fanned. In the second, Voorhees went out on a foul fly to Whelan. Condon and Hause hit for a base. Condon scored on Lowe's wild throw. Donnelly struck out and Needham hit to Brounskill and was thrown out at first. In the third McKenzie went out on a long fly to right. Hinkley hit too short and was out at first. Norris made a hit, stole third and died there. In the fourth Voorhees hit for two bases. Condon went out on strikes. Hause made a single, and Voorhees reached third on a passed ball and scored on the pitcher's wild throw to third. Donnelly made a hit but was thrown out in stealing second Needham reached first on balls and McKenzie took first on Webber's error and Hinkley struck out. In the fifth, Norris hit for two bases, stole third and scored on Whelan's error, whereby Hartman reached first. Voorhees hit too short and reached first on Hartman's being run down between second and third. Condon fanned and Hause flew out to Wade who made a fine running catch. In the 6th Donnelly flew out to Webber. Needham hit for a base. McKenzie hit a grounder to Whelan at first who made a pretty double play unassisted. In the seventh Hinkley reached first on an error by Whelan and second on Lowe's wild throw. Norris fanned. Hartman made a single, scoring Hinkley. Voorhees reached first on an error by Keusch and Condon struck out. In the eighth Hause hit to Webber and was out at first. Donnelly was thrown out by pitcher to first and Needham struck out. In the ninth McKenzie flew out to Keusch. Hinkley got his base on another error by Whelan. Norris fanned and Hartman flew out to Lee who made an elegant running catch.

For Tecumseh in the first Lee got a base on balls. Webber hit too short and reached first on Lee's put out at second; he stole second and scored on Whelan's single, after Spaulding had struck out. Fyanes flew out to second. In the second they scored two runs. Brounskill got first on the third baseman's error and Keusch his on another and both got second on hits by Wade and Lowe. Lee flew out to Donnelly. Webber struck out and Spaulding was out at first. In the third Whelan hit to second and was out at first. Fyanes was thrown out at first and Brounskill went out on a foul hit which McKenzie took in very neatly. In the fourth Keusch hit to third and was out at first. Wade went out on a fly to second and Lowe went out on a short hit to Hartman. In the fifth they scored three earned runs on singles by Lee and Webber, and doubles by Spaulding and Whelan. Fyanes was thrown out at first. Brounskill reached first on Whelan's out at the plate. Keusch got his base on balls and Wade was thrown out at first. In the sixth Lowe reached first on Hartman's error, Lee on balls, and Webber on Lowe's out at second, and Whelan flew out to Hartman. In the 7th they scored four more. Donnelly being in the box for Milan, presented Fyanes his base on balls, hit Brounskill and Fyanes scored on Keusch's single, he having stolen third. Wade fouled out. Lowe and Lee made singles, scoring Brounskill and Keusch, and Lowe scored on Webber's hit to short who threw Lee out at second. Spaulding fanned. In the eighth, with Easlick in the box for Milan, Whelan went out on a fly to Easlick. Fyanes on a grounder to Whelan and Brounskill went out on a short hit to Easlick.

The game throughout was interesting from start to finish, and there were several very fine running catches by both teams which received merited applause. The fielding was sharp and many of the steps and pick ups were fine.

It was expected that a rubber game would be played on Friday afternoon between the Tecumseh and Clinton clubs as they were notified by the management to that effect. The managers intended to divide the gate money Friday between these two clubs, and the clubs understood that they would have to play on Friday. But it seems that they came to a private understanding between themselves to divide first and second money and not to play. They appeared on the grounds Friday afternoon, and the crowd began to assemble and the public supposed there would be a game. Then the Tecumseh club flunked and the game was off. The T. H. S. boys claimed that they were sure of defeat and hence "didn't want to play." Well, what of it? To an unsophisticated outsider it would seem much more manly to come to the scratch even if they were beaten, and get second money, which they were sure of anyway. The managers were fairly entitled to the gate receipts of Friday and the clubs themselves would have had a portion of them.

Messrs. McDonald and Bostwick are entitled to credit for the fairness with which the tournament was carried out, and they cannot justly be held responsible for the outcome on Friday afternoon.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barrett, of Allegan, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fagan, of Tecumseh, were called here Sunday to attend the funeral of their cousin Minnie Barrett.

Wendell Bush, who has been enjoying a few weeks hunting among the Rockies, made his grandmother, Mrs. Hall a short visit, leaving for his home at Brooklyn, N. Y. Wednesday.

Remember that beginning with Oct. 1st. the Library will be open both afternoon and evening; also that the annual dues are due and the Librarian is very anxious to make out your receipt so as to balance her books.

Tickets for the Lecture Course to be held in Tecumseh the coming winter, may be had of Miss Clark, at the Library. Six entertainments are in the course, and may be had for $1.50 for the full course, or 50 cents for a single entertainment.

There were nearly fifty of the W. C. T. U. ladies' present at the tea meeting, given at the home of Mrs. A. J. Sutton, in honor of the ladies of the Britton Union, on Friday afternoon, and a very profitable as well as pleasant time was spent by all.

Minnie Barrett, who has been sick for the past month, was called to her final rest a little past 8 o'clock, Friday evening. From the first but little hopes of her recovery, by friends, was believed to be possible, yet the end came somewhat suddenly. The funeral was held at the church, Sunday afternoon. Rev. Cansfield spoke words of comfort and hope to the bereaved family. The Epworth League and Sabbath School attended in a body. The class of six boys, of whom she was teacher, acted as honorary bearers. It was one of the largest funerals ever held in the village. The remains were interred in the family lot at the village cemetery, at the setting of the sun. The gift of floral pieces by friends were very fine. The members of the League furnished a beautiful collection of cut roses, that were placed in and around the casket. The friends and neighbors of the saddened home feel very sad for them in the loss of a daughter and sister, but their loss is her gain, and to the large circle of friends, who mourn her departure, there is a hope beyond the grave, where meeting of loved ones will never be broken.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the neighbors and friends who lent such valuable and willing assistance for the comfort of our dear daughter during her sickness. Also to the Epworth League for the beautiful flowers; and to her Sabbath School class of boys for their kindness and attention in so many ways; and to the choir for the beautiful selections.

Up to the time we go to press he was reported as being no better. The horses were caught at Ridgeway.

OBITUARY.

Joseph Herbison was born in 1838, in County Antrim, Ireland. He was the third son of a family of fourteen children. In 1848 he came with his parents to America. They located in the then town of Tecumseh, where his boyhood and youth was passed. About twenty-five years ago he bought a large farm in the town of Bath, Clinton Co., where he has since resided. Farming has been his occupation with the exception of a few years when he assisted his father in mason work. In 1870 he was united in marriage to Isadore Trumbull. His wife and four children survive him, two step-children, dear to him as his own and raised from infancy, also four brothers and one sister to mourn his loss.

Last Saturday afternoon was an exciting day for Holloway. The Kids of the Kelley and Holloway schools had made arrangements for a matched game of ball. So, duly upon time they arrived, six men on a side, and proceeded to business. We cannot give a full detail of the game, but sufficient to say Holloway won the palm, which so elevated them that it was with difficulty they could be restrained from climbing to the roof of some of our tallest buildings (25 to 30 stories) and jumping off, under the impression that they had wings. The score stood 48 to 41. Come again boys.

The G. A. R. organization had a grand reunion in Pittsburg last week. In Tuesday's parade forty thousand old vets were in line.

The racing record has again been broken and Robert J. is king of the turf. At Indianapolis last week he paced a mile in 2:02 1-2.

Mr. Gorman is having all he can do just now to keep his grip on Marvland, and he may yet realize to the fullest extent the difficulty of being simultaneously a servant for monopoly and a boss for Democrats.

The prices of domestic woods have already advanced about ten per cent. under the new tariff law, while Australian wools have declined. This is exactly what the advocates of free wool have always predicted.

There is a great many points in the country outside of Georgia which would be willing to contribute handsomely to secure that joint debate between Speaker Crisp and Secretary Smith. It would be a drawing card anywhere.

Stewart and Jones have left the Republican party for the Populist camp. We will give Gorman and Brice to the Pops to make things even. These four children of toil will reform all the evils of the day—that is, all in which they have no investments.

In naming Editor Grandon as their nominee for Congress the Prohibitionists of the second district made an excellent choice. He will poll every vote that would support that ticket any way, and will strengthen the local tickets in every county in the district.

There are 40,000 more women than men in Massachusetts. If the predominating sex is enfranchised such a thing as male disfranchisement in that state is not impossible. Another tea party as a protest against taxation without representation may become a necessity in Massachusetts.

The voters of the second Congressional district never had a better lot of candidates to vote for than this fall. Personally considered they are all first class men. Gen. Spalding, Thos. E. Barkworth and D. W. Grandon are all good men and true. The election will turn on political issues alone.

Cottonseed hulls promise to become a leading competitor of wheat as a feed for stock. If the price of corn advances much more, as it probably will in consequence of the shortage of this year's crop, farmers that have corn will probably sell it and feed their stock on cheaper food. Cottonseed hulls are baled like hay and sell at from $4 to $5 per ton in southern markets.

The Chicago Times says: "The Sugar Trust's annual 'clean-up' shows last year's profits to have been a trifle over $28,000,000. No wonder Gorman, Brice and the rest of the gang stuck by their guns throughout that bitter fight on the Senate amendment to the sugar schedule of the Wilson bill. Mr. Havemeyer could afford to do the handsome thing, leaving the possibilities of stock-jobbing in sugar certificates entirely out of the question.

Grumbling is the poorest paid profession known to man. If it does not actually prevent success, at least it robs success of all satisfaction. To grumble at your circumstances is to belittle yourself, however much you may try to put the blame on other people's shoulders. To grumble at trade, while the world is full of successes, is to confess that you have been unable to divert a sufficient portion of the world's trade to your own doors. Stop grumbling—go to work. Stop complaining and try advertising—that's the hopeful end of all business and the profitable one. The grumbler drives trade away, disheartens himself, dissatisfies his employes, discounts his own possibilities of success and makes himself profoundly miserable the while. The active advertiser knows better than to grumble; encourages his own strength, stimulates his own hopefulness, imparts a portion of his enthusiasm to the multitude, makes it a pleasure for them to deal with him and the ducats roll in like a shower.—Exchange.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Sept. 17, 1894.

The man who tries to get an accurate idea of the political situation by visiting the headquarters of the Congressional committees of the several parties finds himself in a badly muddled condition when he gets through listening to what is told him. Of course it would be very impolite for him to accuse anybody of deliberately lying or misrepresenting things, but he cannot help thinking that the Congressional committees command the services of a number of men with imagination enough to make them successful war correspondents or real estate boomers; also, that some of the claims made bring to mind the boy who wasn't afraid to be in the dark, but still continually whistled to keep up his courage.

While the Democratic and Republican managers are fighting for a majority of members in the next House, either would gladly let the other side have a majority, if thereby they could retain for their own party the control of a majority of the state delegations in the House. The House may not be called upon to elect the next President, but then again it may—many think the indications point that way—and if it should the prize will belong to the party that can control the votes of 23 states in the House, as Arizona and New Mexico will not probably get representation in Congress early enough to be considered in this business: in fact, that was one of the reasons why the bills for their admission were not acted upon by the Senate at the last session. So far as the vote for President is concerned a majority of one is just as good as the entire delegation, as each state only has one vote and that is cast by the majority.

In the present House the Democrats control the delegations from 26 states, the Republicans from 11 and the Populists control three states and hold the balance of power in one—Nebraska. Now the question that is bothering the politicians is what changes will be made in the state delegations by the coming Congressional elections. The elections that have been held have not thrown much light upon the subject, for nobody really expected Alabama or Arkansas to go any other way than Democratic, or Oregon, Vermont and Maine to go any other way than Republican. To control a majority of the state delegations in the next House the Republicans will have to hold the 14 they now have and to add 9. The Democrats cannot lose more than three of the states they now have without dropping into the minority, and as the states they now control include New York, Illinois, Ohio, Wisconsin, Wyoming, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Delaware and New Jersey, the chances for losing are altogether too numerous to please members of that party. The Populists figure upon controlling the delegations of at least four and possibly as many as eight states. If this claim should turn out to be correct the Populist increase would be entirely at the expense of the Republicans and would probably result in giving the Populists the balance of power in the House should the election of President be thrown into that body by reason of the failure of any candidate to receive the votes of a majority of the electoral college. This prospect of holding the balance of power in the election of a President should the House be called upon to perform that duty, is highly pleasing to the Populists, but not to the old parties, each of which would prefer seeing the other win than to see the Populists occupying such an advantageous position.

"The younger a man is the easier he can imitate a fool when placed in a position of authority," was a favorite expression with a wise old man I used to know. It was recalled to mind by some of the actions of young Mr. Doe, the Assistant Secretary of War, who has been acting secretary since Secretary Lamont went away on his vacation. Mr. Doe has an idea that the chiefs of bureaus in the War Department, who are old enough to be his father and all army officers, lack the discretion necessary to tell what should be made public and what kept secret concerning the business of the department. According to his first official act when he was left in charge of the department was to issue an order that no information, however trivial, should be given to anybody until it had been secured. Mr. Doe is more exclusive and difficult to get at than any member of the cabinet, with the possible exception of Olney, since only his order has stirred up a hornet's nest among the newspaper men and others having business with the War Department that may end in making things decidedly unpleasant for the would-be press censor.

The famous musical composers have taken a hint from their literary brethren, and are securing an advance magazine publication for their compositions just as the authors publish their novels in serial form. The Ladies Home Journal, which was practically the first magazine to offer this outlet to composers of repute, finds all the musical men rallying to it. Sir Arthur Sullivan announcing that the new song which he has just finished will be published in that magazine. Patti's veteran conductor, Arditi, has given his new waltz to the Journal, while Reginald de Koven's new song goes also to the same periodical. Strauss has sent his new waltz to the editor, Sousa a new march, and Mascagni, of "Cavalleria Rusticana" fame, is writing a piano score.

A BOOK WORTH READING.

Wealth against Commonwealth, which is announced for early publication by Harper & Brothers, is a book on the "trusts" or monopolies, which are so conspicuous a feature of American life. It is not an argument, but a dramatic presentation of the human facts of the combinations in sugar, coal, matches, meat, oil, and many other things. It has been the aim of the author to give a picture of the realities of modern business, and to make some of its mysteries clear to the common people, out of whose lives and labors its fabrics are made. It is, as he says, a venture in realism, not in the world of fiction, but of realities. Monopoly is treated broadly, as the supreme expression of our commercial tendencies, and the chief social and political fact of a civilization which is giving to business what other civilizations gave to war and religion. Our great trade combinations are regarded as merely illustrations of a movement which is itself but an illustration of the spirit of the age. Of these, the oil trust is taken as the prototype of all the rest, and is described in full detail. Its growth is traced from its origin to its vast proportions now, when it controls the oil, and several other, markets of a continent—perhaps four continents—and is probably the most influential and most dreaded financial power in America. It is a romance of the business, as absorbing in its interest as any ancient or mediæval romance of conquest. The direct bearing of the book upon the most important social and economical questions now under discussion everywhere is obvious. It contributes to the debate an immense stock of pertinent facts. By his well-known article in the North American Review on "Lords of Industry" in 1884 the author gave the public its first clear view of the centralization of industries. The debate which he then initiated has been growing more important every year, and the present volume, the embodiment of ten year's study, finds the subject first on the order of the day in politics as well as in the schools.

Some Notable Opinions on Co-Education.

One of the most interesting topics of the day is undoubtedly co-education, and Demorest's Family Magazine, with characteristic enterprise, has set before its readers in the October number a most excellent symposium on this important question. The contributors to it are among the best known educators of the country and comprise such names as David Star Jordan, Thomas S. Hastings, H. M. McCracken, James M. Taylor, Charles H. Knox, Edmund P. Platt and S. S. Packard. As all of these men have very decided opinions on the question and are authorities on educational matters, their views cannot fail to be interesting. "Cadet Life at West Point" which appears in the same number is a well written and entertaining sketch of the life of a cadet from the time he enters West Point until he is a full-fledged soldier. An excellent description of the school and its surroundings is given and, as it is written by a cadet, it has the charm of local color which only one intimate with the place can give; and the article is also superbly illustrated. "A Failure in Dress Reform" is a sprightly and humorous narrative showing some of the difficulties in the way of would-be progressive young girls assuming masculine attire.

THE BROTHERS.

Ride we out at the dawning of day—
Gray are the hills and a blush on the sky—
Up between fields where the dew frosts lay,
Jack and Harold and I.

Can ever an hour with this compare?
Is ever a bloom like a waking one?
Ho, for the breath of the unwarmed air
That knows not the kiss of the sun!

Over the highway and down the hill
Speed we well like the wings of a bird,
A reddening east and a warming thrill—
The world has awaked and stirred!

A sudden ray and a cock's shrill call,
A salty scent from the sea blown down,
A thought of the work that awaits us all
And yonder the spires of the town!

Back we ride at the closing of day,
Met by the breath that the brier sheds,
And a bird that is flying to west away,
And one star over our heads.

Can ever an hour with this compare,
When the day and the night are almost one,
Filling the sky and the silent air,
Hushed at the death of the sun?

Back 'tween the dewy fields we ride,
Under the deepening heart of the sky,
Passing the bridge and the hill's steep side—
Jack and Harold and I.

And down by the mill will one of us wait,
Wait for the wave of a hand, for a smile,
And over the hill, by a vine clad gate,
Will one of us linger awhile.

But under the stars, in the gathering gloom,
One rideth on, rideth on for a space.
Then, oh, the scent of the white rose bloom,
And the joy in a mother's face!

A BIRTHDAY GIFT.

It might have happened in London or it might not. If any one prefers to localize this story of true love at Liverpool or Glasgow or any other British city where Irish do live, he or she is quite welcome to do so. I am not going to vulgarize a tender idyl by giving with the fidelity of a county court summons the precise town, village or other minute description of the scene where the poetic events to be now told took place.

Mat Casey lodged with Tim Brennan, who occupied a couple of rooms in a small house in a court off a passage in an alley which branched out of a lane in a back street. "Sure you're a gintleman, for you're as good as the pig that pays his rint," Tim used to say to him, and Mat would reply, "True for yez, an it's meself that's proud to be that same." And then, if either happened to have a snilling about him, they would go to the Cobwebs inn and drink it. If in luck, they would perhaps have a fight or two in the course of the night. If things were depressed and people were low spiritedly peaceful, they would in most cases have a fight between themselves and then fraternally pump on each other's heads or repair their faces from the same stock of sticking plaster.

Mat was a traveling tinker, middle aged, jovial, ugly, a fine drinker, a good singer, and, as Tim said, "a dhivil of a poet." Tim was an odd job character—an auction porter and a speculator in small lots. Mat was a widower. Tim had an extensive wife and a scattered family.

At the entrance to the court was a sort of half shop, half shed, with a big room behind and a small one above, where Widow Moloney lived and carried on her business, which consisted in the purchase and sale of anything from an old bedstead to a coverless dictionary and from a broken candlestick to an indistinct oil painting. Her husband had been an attendant at sales and a broker in a humble way.

After the inquest on him—now some 18 months ago—Mrs. Moloney continued the concern. She found it unnecessary to go to auctions, as Tim and others brought their purchases to her, and she had a tolerably ready means of buying and selling, not merely to add from her neighbors, but also, being well known, among the inhabitants generally in a small way.

She was about 40 and weighed 18 stone. A big shawl was always crossed over her opulent bosom and knotted behind. She had a bright eye, a ready tongue, a heavy fist and a strong head.

Mat was deeply enamored of this gentle lady. Of course Tim was in his confidence, and many an untruthful word in praise of Mat did he drop, as if by accident, in her hearing, and many an unveracious account of his broken heartedness on her account did he sighingly narrate, with the addition of his own private opinion that Mat was dying or would kill himself for love of her. Tim was as loyal a friend as a sober though truthful knight of old.

"Tim," said Mat on the eve of Widow Moloney's birthday, "I want yez to give her this birthday card from me. It's a great red heart, with a skewer sticking in it. That riprisints moine—the heart, I mane. The skewer"——

"It's an arrow, Mat—that's what they do be calling it."

"Well, Tim, an there's a good Irish sound about that same. They can't do without us anyway, you see."

"Sorra a bit, an you want me to be afther giving her that?"

"Yes; I've improved it. I've made it stiff with red lead an pat in a few dhrops, as if it was the blood of me heart that was flowing for her, an she's so scornful of me sufferings."

"It's illigant" said Tim, with great admiration.

"An see here, now. I've written some varses to her to the tune of 'O'Shaughnessy's Hat.' Bedad, an they rowl as swately as a jig an as melodhering as the crayther."

He sang them over in his rich voice and delicious brogue, and Tim got excited and promised his most devoted aid. Then they went to the Cobwebs and in due course were violently ejected, had a tussle with some strangers about something of which they had no particular notion or recollection, lost each other and finally got home somehow, though separately.

Next morning they arose with unclouded and unaching brows, and Tim started on his mission. Mat waited at the Cobwebs for his return.

Tim sat down on a cold doorstep and reflected.

"Take her a dhirty, painted, twopenny piece of paper with a red lead heart on it! Bedad an begorra an I won't! I'll do better than that, or my name's not Tim Brennan. Mat's a decent bhoy an a dhivil of a poet, but widdies is practical. It takes the likes of me to understand the likes of them."

Within 10 minutes after this soliloquy he was seated in Mrs. Moloney's disordered and unventilated room.

"There it is, Mrs. Moloney, dear, an it must go to the heart of yez to rade the hidden m'aning," said he as he pointed to a large, healthy looking pig's fry on the table and a bottle of whisky which was standing beside it. He had suppressed the paper missive as poor, artificial and inexpressive, and out of his devoted friendship and slender purse had bought the "pluck" and the spirits which he presented in Mat's name.

"It's an emblim, honey," continued he. "Here's his heart, in a manner of sp'aking, at your fate—on your dish, I mane. The liver shows that he can't live without yez; the lights, that you're the light of his eyes, an that he longs for yez with every breath, an the flare, that there'll be all the fat in the fire an the very dhivil to pay if ye're unkind to him an refuse him. It's an imblim, my dear—a delicate poetical imblim, bedad!"

"It's beautiful!" said Mrs. Moloney, profoundly touched, as she uncorked the bottle and filled up two large port glasses. Then she added: "An I'll cook it. Tell him to come tonight an help ate it. An come you, too, Tim, and Misthriss Brennan."

So it was all understood.

Tim had, like most of his countrymen, the feelings of a gentleman and the tact of a courtier. That was why he and his wife arrived designedly late, having sent a message that supper was not to wait.

Had they come sooner a slight incident might have been avoided, though possibly it all happened for the best.

For, leaving the tete-a-tete meal and the conversations to be imagined by the reader, the crumpled rose leaf arose in this way. Mat had lit his pipe and had asked the widow how she liked the card and the verses.

She laughed and replied that she didn't know about the verses, except those he had been talking for the last hour; but, as for the card, he ought to know, for he had eaten the half of it.

Upon this, Mat had jumped off his chair and exclaimed: "Then it's a dead man I am, an it's a wake I'll be afther attending, an not a wedding! I thought there was a quare taste about that piece of frizzled fat."

"What does the crature be m'aning at all?" cried she in surprise.

"It's poisoned I am. That heart was all over red lead," said he, falling back into his seat.

"Poisoned, you black hearted villain?" screamed Mrs. Moloney. "Then take that!" and she broke a jug on his head.

It was at this point that the Brennans arrived. Tim promptly knocked Mat down, and then he naturally became curious to know what the ambiguity was about.

"He's poisoned me!" said she between a shriek and a sob.

Tim seized Mat and threw him on an incomplete but unmatched dinner service, part of Mrs. Moloney's stock, which stood in a corner on the floor.

The widow, hearing the crash, smashed a chair on Tim's back, whereupon Mrs. Brennan took her by the hair, and the two women fell into some miscellaneous lots in another corner. Then the neighbors came in and took indiscriminate sides, and matters generally hummed for a short time.

Eventually Tim got an inkling of the difficulty, told them to be quiet and narrated all the circumstances, to the great relief, joy and amusement of all the parties.

A pailful of water and a yard or two of sticking plaster, with a few pins for the women, quickly set things smooth and smiling. Mrs. Moloney made them all welcome and soon liberal supplies of whisky, porter and tobacco were formulated. Additional candles were lit, illuminating fitfully the front shop, whose contents seemed the embodiment of the confused thoughts of the guests—tables stacked with their legs in the air, cane chairs hanging on the walls, blank gaseliers suspended from the ceiling, while a lighted lamp stood on the floor to prevent stumbling into the business portion of the establishment, and all went merrily. Mrs. Moloney for one brief ecstatic moment sat on Mat's knee, but they were severally picked up and revived, though the chair was pulverized, and Mat sang the "varses" which Tim had produced from his pocket along with the card.

Tim had applauded, wept and gone to sleep in the middle of the song, but the approval which greeted its conclusion, composed as it was of shouts, shrieks, knockings, tears and a free fight in the southeastern corner, effectually woke him.

Soon after a confused interval of health drinking, recrimination and embracings the party found itself adjourned.

Mat and the widow are to be married so soon as the necessary formalities can be arranged.—Million.

Divorce.

The blue book on marriage and divorce is said to contain singular facts, which may be regarded, however, as touchstones of civilization. In Russia, for instance, people may not wed a fourth time nor after they are 80 years old. In France the wife whose husband objects seriously to her going on the stage makes herself liable to divorce by persisting in her artistic desire. In Germany and Roumania "insuperable aversion" is enough. But in Portugal civilization touches the high water mark. There if a wife publishes literary works without the husband's consent the law frees him at once.—Atlanta Constitution.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. SOME COLORADO SCENERY.

LAMAR, Col., Aug. 13, '94.

DEAR MR. EDITOR:—In relating my experience on my return ride across the rockies I was obliged to omit a discription of the beauty and grandeur of the Ute Pass because of the lack of space. This pass twelve miles in length, is walled by high precipitous red sandstone clifts. The road leads along under overhanging rocks and here winds gracefully and there turns sharply about a corner. These sudden diversions were perilous to a wheelman for he might find himself suddenly facing a team on the narrow road or too much velocity might hurl him to a rocky bed in the river 20 or 30 feet below. The river was raging over the red sandstone and had imparted to it a gory hue by the particles which it tore from its bed; it was not so steep and became a hillside upon which the dark green vegetation contrasted strangely with the dull red soil from which it grew. Gradually the walls widened and beautiful cottages adorned the hillsides. These structures were often of the same material as the mountain upon which they stood, and it was curious to note the rugged beauty which nature had wrought as they contrasted with the geometrical precision of man's art. Red sandstone when acted upon by water and the various disintegrating forces of nature assumes very fantastic shapes, and this pass is a long panorama of natures witcheries. Upon arriving in Colorado Springs I first indulged in a whole days rest, and the second day proved that I was an American by seeing the principal sights of one day. Upon my Victor I rode to Manitou. Here I visited the principal curiosity establishments, then the soda spring, and the iron spring. Of course I imbibed from the springs to satisfy my thirst for novelty and wondered how people could drink the vile stuff. On my return the Garden of the Gods received my attention. I sat upon the balanced rock which has had a plentiful supply of mortar put under it so that it will balance. I strained my imagination until I became aware of cracks and abrasions while I was trying to see the sandstone Dutch wedding as others see it. My fancy struggled almost in vain to see the fish on the grand gateway, and the lions head, but I conquered all these difficulties and came forth as gulled as any bulging eyed tourist ever did. Of a truth I was disappointed in the Garden of the Gods. The mountains are full of much more wonderful formations and I had viewed the collected marvels of the gods before seeing the gods, before seeing the gardens. From the Garden I went to Glen Eyrie a charming little wooded drive, and then back over the Losa to the City. In the afternoon, in company with a fellow wheelman, I visited Cheyenne Canyon. We rode up the Canyon between the Pillars of Hercules. These are two massive rocks several hundred feet in height, bold in outline and imposing. They rear up their huge mass on either side of the Canyon and their gray-black color adds much to the appearance of irresistible strength. Beyond these is the Seven Falls cascade, where the traveler is again called upon to outrageously deceive himself with a pretended satisfaction. With a few gray rocks, a chisel and a tub of water, one could contrive an equally attractive cascade, and not be compelled to admire nature for a weak attempt at scenery. Colorado Springs is a beautiful city with many marvels in its vicinity, but the great mountains to the west conceal many a more wonderful labor of the Creator. The morning after my days of rapid sight seeing, I arose at 5 and in 3 hours and a half took breakfast at Pueblo, 48 miles away. The roads were fine with exceptions, the morning was the most glorious without exception, and a favorable wind aided me in my flight. Upon my right arose the mountains endowed with a myriad of rich colors by the mornings sun, and on the left extended the sacred prairie which is here covered with cone shaped mounds so regular in outline that one is half persuaded that they are the work of man. The road follows the Arkansaw river, and at two places crossed under, I think, for it vanished under the muddy waters and came up smiling on the opposite bank. I removed shoes and stockings at these localities and by hunting sedulously for shallows succeeded in ferrying myself and wheel to the other side. The Cactus, that arch enemy of pneumatic tires disguised itself in many forms which I had hitherto not seen, and grow in malicious abundance by the roadside, but with wily persistence I kept the road and avoided the destroyer. As I came in sight of Pueblo the first impression of the city was that it was built of red brick. A turkey gobbler, or a bull, would go mad in that town. When I reached the streets I found many fine residences and a city of considerable size. The business part of the town presented a strange appearance to me. There was a foreign air about it and I felt that if I spoke to any one I should be answered in a foreign tongue. The signs of Chinese business men were on all sides, but I saw not a Chinaman while in the city. The restaurant at which I took breakfast and satisfied my appetite sharpened by a 48 mile ride was extremely small in respect to prices and style, but furnished forth sneakingly small dishes for a monster of hunger like myself. My departure from here and journey across Colorado to Lamar, where I am to spend a week upon my uncle's ranch, I will give in my next letter.

A REVIVAL.

Tecumseh has long been noted among the villages of Lenawee as a cycling center. Ever since the advent of the ancient "bone shaker" our village has had many devotees to this invigorating recreation. At one time the Tecumseh Bicycle Club was foremost in the social life of the town and its May Party was looked forward to as the event of the social season.

For some inexplicable reason, even though the number of riders has increased four fold, the old time enthusiasm has died away. Recently however twenty of our prominent young business men have united in forming the Tecumseh Bicycle Association, and in order to properly announce the advent of the youngster, will present to the public, on Saturday, October 6th, a race meeting which will eclipse anything heretofore attempted in this section of the state.

It is desired by the management to make this a recognized success, a success which will long reflect credit upon our pleasant village. To that end they invite the hearty co-operation of all citizens to outdo all previous records for hospitality and generosity.

Four hundred dollars will be hung up in prizes, which will consist principally of diamonds, watches, jewelry and valuable sundries. All events will be strictly 'Class A' events and will be run under the L. A. W. racing rules. Every convenience will be given both riders and spectators.

Appended is a list of the various committees and events.

Executive Com.—B. J. Garlinghouse, E. N. Satterthwaite, John Anderson, P. W. A. Fitzsimmons.

High School Happenings.

Wallace Boyd re-entered school Monday.

Miss Florence Cook entered school last Monday.

Miss Wood visited Miss Elder's room last Wednesday.

Miss Anna Osborne was a visitor in Miss Hartbeck's room one day last week.

Those scholars who entered the Philosophy class with the idea that it was to be all fun and experiment have decided that there is some fun but much more reality than experiment.

It was something unusual after last Saturday's game not to hear "Ra Ra Ra Sis Boom Ba" ring out. The facts were that the T. H. S were defeated. But four times in the entire season have they sustained defeat and they now hold as good a percentage as any team in the county.

For several years past, the teachers have felt that the Lyceum work has not been as generally beneficial as it ought to be, because so few of the scholars could take part in the work, the Lyceum being held but once a month. This has resulted in a new form of literary work, by which each scholar takes some part, twice a term, either by recitation, essay or declamation. Ten minutes each morning is devoted to this work. It is hoped that the new idea may prove successful.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The game of ball Saturday between Clinton and the home team was productive of a variety of entertainments and in this respect was a howling success. The spectators certainly got their money's worth, for the game was long drawn out. Some innings were long, others short. Some were characterized by clean, sharp fielding, others by rank errors and stupid playing generally. In some they went out in one, two, three order. There was some heavy hitting and clever base running. There was a good deal of guying the different players as they came to bat as well as kicking on the decisions of the umpires. This began early in the game and Yaik bore it for a time, but at last withdrew and Ross took his place. He fared no better at their hands, but he endured it like a Spartan. The game was not called until nearly four o'clock and had not progressed far ere rain caused quite a delay so that the last half of the ninth inning could not be played on account of darkness, so the game was called back to even innings.

The game opened with Clinton at the bat. Schofield was given his base on balls and stole second but got no farther, as Carpenter fouled out to Lowe. Hause fanned and Kraft went out on a grounder to Whelan. In the 2nd Wade made a single, stole second and third, making one of his thrilling slides and scored on Kennedy's single, after Rogers and Bice had struck out. Hughes also struck out. In the 3rd Schofield got first on Hicks muff of his high fly to center. Carpenter was out on a high fly in front of plate which Lowe took. Hause got first on a little hit to pitcher, who tried for a double play, but Schofield out at second was all he could do. House stole second and third in good style. Kraft got a base on balls. Wade followed with a clean single scoring Hause and Kraft, stole second but died there as Rogers went out on a long hit to center, which Hicks grappled after a hard run. In the fourth Bice made a hit stole second and third. Kennedy was out on a grounder to Whelan. Hughes got first on balls. Schofield got his base by being hit by the ball. Carpenter's single scored Bice but both were left on bases as Hause was thrown out at first. Kraft again took his base on balls, stole second and scored on Lowe's wild throw to Harris. Wade went out at first. Rogers fanned. Bice made a single as did Kennedy. Bice scored on a passed ball. Hughes struck out. In the sixth Schofield and Carpenter each took first on balls. Hause got his base by being hit by ball. Kraft's single scored Schofield and Carpenter. Wade got first on balls. Rogers made a little hit to shortstop and got first on an effort to put Hause, who had stolen third, out at plate. By some wild throwing by Brounskill and Lowe, Kraft and Wade scored. Bice struck out. Kennedy went out on a long drive to center. Rogers who had stolen third, scored on the throw in, Hughes fanned. In the seventh but three men faced the pitcher. Schofield went out on a fly to center. Carpenter was thrown out at first by Spaulding and Hause went out on a fly to Harris. In the 8th Kraft was hit by the ball and stole second. Wade got first on an error by Keusch, and both scored on Rogers' fine single. Bice, Kennedy and Hughes were thrown out at first

For Tecumseh in the first they scored six runs. Owens went out on a grounder to first. Keusch reached first on an error of Rogers', stole second and third. Spaulding hit to Kraft and was out at first. Whelan was given his base on balls, Lowe got his base on Hause's wild throw which brought Keusch and Whelan home. Hicks took 1st on balls. Harris made a single, took second on an error by Hause, Hicks scoring. Brounskill made a clean two bagger, scoring Harris. McClure's single brought him in but he, instrying to steal 3nd, was thrown out. In the second only four men stepped to the plate. Owens was out on a fly to Kennedy. Keusch got his base on Hause's low throw and stole second and went to third on a wild pitch but got no farther, as Spaulding flew out to Schofield, and Whelan struck out. In the 3rd Lowe hit for a base and stole second. Hicks struck out. Harris made a rattling hit to right. Lowe scored on Hughes's wild throw in. Brounskill struck out and McClure went on a fly to Wade. In the 4th, 5th and 6th, but twelve men went to bat and no runs were made and not a hit. In the seventh Spaulding struck out. Whelan was again presented his base on balls. Hicks made a terrific hit to right on which Whelan scored. Harris followed with another hit, but Hicks in endeavoring to score on it was put out at the plate. In the 8th six men went to bat but no runs were made. Brounskill got first on an error by Hause, McClure on one by Rogers who threw so wild to first that Brounskill tried to score on it but was nipped at the plate. Owen flew out to Wade. Keusch got a base on balls. Spaulding made a single but Whelan flew out to Rogers.

In the 6th inning Clinton made the only double play of the game. Brounskill was given his base on balls. McClure hit a fly to Kennedy who neatly threw Brounskill out trying to return to first base.

A BOOK WORTH READING.

Wealth against Commonwealth, which is announced for early publication by Harper & Brothers, is a book on the "trusts" or monopolies, which are so conspicuous a feature of American life. It is not an argument, but a dramatic presentation of the human facts of the combinations in sugar, coal, matches, meat, oil, and many other things. It has been the aim of the author to give a picture of the realities of modern business, and to make some of its mysteries clear to the common people, out of whose lives and labors its fabrics are made. It is, as he says, a venture in realism, not in the world of fiction, but of realities. Monopoly is treated broadly, as the supreme expression of our commercial tendencies, and the chief social and political fact of a civilization which is giving to business what other civilizations gave to war and religion. Our great trade combinations are regarded as merely illustrations of a movement which is itself but an illustration of the spirit of the age. Of these, the oil trust is taken as the prototype of all the rest, and is described in full detail. Its growth is traced from its origin to its vast proportions now, when it controls the oil, and several other, markets of a continent—perhaps four continents—and is probably the most influential and most dreaded financial power in America. It is a romance of the business, as absorbing in its interest as any ancient or mediæval romance of conquest. The direct bearing of the book upon the most important social and economical questions now under discussion everywhere is obvious. It contributes to the debate an immense stock of pertinent facts. By his well-known article in the North American Review on "Lords of Industry" in 1884 the author gave the public its first clear view of the centralization of industries. The debate which he then initiated has been growing more important every year, and the present volume, the embodiment of ten year's study, finds the subject first on the order of the day in politics as well as in livelihoods.

Some Notable Opinions on Co-Education.

One of the most interesting topics of the day is undoubtedly co-education, and Demorest's Family Magazine, with characteristic enterprise, has set before its readers in the October number a most excellent symposium on this important question. The contributors to it are among the best known educators of the country and comprise such names as David Star Jordan, Thomas S. Hastings, H. M. McCracken, James M. Taylor, Charles H. Knox, Edmund P. Platt and S. S. Packard. As all of these men have very decided opinions on the question and are authorities on educational matters, their views cannot fail to be interesting. "Cadet Life at West Point" which appears in the same number is a well written and entertaining sketch of the life of a cadet from the time he enters West Point until he is a full-fledged soldier. An excellent description of the school and its surroundings is given and, as it is written by a cadet, it has the charm of local color which only one intimate with the place can give; and the article is also superbly illustrated. "A Failure in Dress Reform" is a sprightly and humorous narrative showing some of the difficulties in the way of would-be progressive young girls assuming masculine attire.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

Mrs. Geo. Howell is visiting friends at Buffalo and Rochester, N. Y.

Adrian is happy. An Uncle Tom's abin show is billed for that town.

I. H. Schreder went to Jackson Tuesday to see his brother-in-law, P. J. Farley.

Misses Lula Weeks and Emma Bailey, f Macon, are arranging for a medal ontest to take place soon.

The death of Miss Minnie Barrett, of Ridgeway is a peculiarly sad event. She had many acquaintances in Tecumseh, who will sincerely mourn her untimely death.

S. C. Stacy will give his snap shot ntertainment at Macon Grange hall, n Thursday, Friday and Saturday venings of this week. Turn out and ll the house.

Will J. Ingersoll of this village was ominated for one of the Circuit Court Commissioners by the Democratic county convention. This is a first class selection.

The sick are improving at Milbern Keyser's. Mrs. Keyser is able to be about the house, and little Blanche, who has been so very sick for weeks, is now considered out of danger.

Rev. J. P. Varner has been returned to the Tecumseh M. E. church by the conference, which is very satisfactory to all his parishioners. He has done a good work here during his stay.

James Dunseath, who has been working in the Clinton Local office for several months, made his parents here a short visit last week, before leaving for Toronto, Canada, where he has a good business position.

We took a drive down to Holloway one day last week and found that little burg all right side up with care. Floyd Florence is hustling business, and Winship is running his mill every day. He will soon begin the grinding of sorghum. Maurice Nay was not at home, but we heard good reports about him.

An exchange says that when you talk about there being a better state than Michigan, every potato shyly winks its eyes, every cabbage shakes its head, every beet gets red in the face, every onion gets stronger, every oat field is shocked, rye strokes its beard, corn sticks up its ears and every foot of land kicks. The horses even denounce the statement with a neigh.

At the Democratic caucus held Sept. 8th, the following named delegates were chosen to represent Tecumseh at the 1st. Dist. Representative convention, to be held at the Armory, Tuesday, Sept. 25th Alex. Richard, B. F. Snyder, Saml. Catlin, Jno. T. Boyce, F. Davidson, Thos. Adamson, W. J. Ingersoll, J. R. Hialey, H. B. Tallman, H. H. Keyser.

Drs. Mixer the well known cancer and blood disease Specialists, will be at the Lilley House, Tecumseh, Saturday, Sept. 29th, and all persons so afflicted should not fail to see them. Thirty years experience makes them the most successful physicians in the state, in their work. They are endorsed by many popular M. D's. and come not to humbug the people, but to do them good. A consultation will cost you nothing and may be of great benefit. Call early and avoid long waiting.

The Tecumseh ball team, who were to play our nine Friday to decide who should take first money at the tournament, showed themselves up in a very unenviable light, by leaving the ground just as our team arrived. The game was declared forfeited to Clinton by a score of 9 to 0. We are informed that this was not the High School nine, although several of their players were used, but was got up for the occasion and managed by Roy Hughes. We are glad to hear the T. H. S. are not guilty of this piece of dirty work.—Clinton Local.

Mrs. J. T. Clark and her mother, Mrs. Pemberton, of Clinton, were visiting Tecumseh friends one day last week.

These sermons will be given on successive Sunday evenings.

The Prohibition legislative convention for the first legislative district of Lenawee county, will be held in the council room, of this village, on Saturday, September 22d. 1894, at 11 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination a candidate for the state legislature from said district, and to transact other necessary business. The delegates from this place are as follows: A. P. Coddington, Rev. J. P. Varner, Sam'l McClure, L. M. Mooney, G. H. Tansley, Wm. J. Smith. Alternates, A. L. Millis, B. C. Day, B. F. Steinhoff, John Linton, David Jones, James T. McKinney. A mass meeting will be held in the afternoon to be addressed by the nominee for Congress, D. W. Grandon of Adrian. This will be an open air meeting, corner Chicago and Railroad streets, at 4:00 o'clock.

E. Cora DePuy, of Ann Arbor, has written a short story entitled "The Workingman's Tariff" which is so forcefully written, and so clearly sets forth how the tariff robs the poor man, that the Democratic State Central Committee is going to use it for a campaign document. There will be plenty of copies for free distribution, but they can only be had through the chairman of the town and county democratic committees, who only get it through F. H. Hosford, Secretary of the State Central Commitee, Detroit. Any one can have a copy of the story free of charge by asking for it, irrespective of politics or religion. Competent men of the Democratic party of the state pronounce the story, in point of showing exactly how the tariff works to rob the poor man, superior to any campaign document that was ever circulated. The story while wrought in fiction is based upon fact and cannot fail to convince the most prejudiced and unenlightened.

WENT FOR A SONG.

How a Murdered Detroiter's Heir Disposed of His Birthright.

A Nephew of the Late Charles B. Chauvin Said to Have Sold His Interest in the Estate, Worth $125,000, for $2,000.

DISPOSED OF A FORTUNE.

DETROIT, Sept. 11.—What is regarded as a singular event in connection with the death of Charles B. Chauvin, the wealthy Grosse Point hermit who was murdered last Sunday, transpired Thursday when a deed was placed upon record, conveying a half interest in the Chauvin real estate from William Trombley to John H. Seitz, of this city. The property is worth probably $125,000 and the stated consideration is $2,000. Trombley is a nephew of the deceased and one of his two natural heirs, there being no will in sight.

The story is that four years ago Trombley, who was then a waiter in a New York hotel and who still resides there, was anxious to borrow some money, and, meeting Seitz, who is something of a speculator, arranged that Seitz should pay him a stipulated sum per year, in return for which Trombley executed to Seitz the deed which was filed Thursday, and which by the terms of their agreement became valid on the death of Mr. Chauvin. It is asserted that Seitz carried out his part of the bargain up to the present year, but the later payments have not been made. Mr. Seitz has gone to New York, but his son said that the transaction was a legitimate speculation; that the real consideration exceeded $2,000, and declared that little would have been thought of the matter had it not been for Chauvin's murder.

DETROIT, Sept. 12.—Detective Baker gives it out that not only is Barnaby Trombley alive, but that he is in the city. He is the keeper of a hotel and boathouse near Roby, Ind., and is well to do. He is anxious to have the murderers of his uncle brought to justice, and a large reward will be offered this week. Barnaby says he has not heard from his brother William in seven years and has not seen him in seventeen years. As he and his brother are sole heirs to the Chauvin estate there is $125,000 for him. The detectives claim to be on the trail of the murderers, but will give out nothing definite. The inquest may bring their names to the surface.

John H. Seitz was in New York Saturday and told a reporter he had failed to find William Trombley, one of the heirs to Chauvin's $250,000 farm. Trombley four years ago sold his expectations in half the property to Seitz for $10,000. Seitz admitted he wanted to find Trombley to know if he intended to contest the contract made and that his disappearance was a great disappointment.

MICHIGAN METHODISTS.

Fifty-Ninth Annual Session of the State Conference.

JACKSON, Sept. 17.—The fifty-ninth annual session of the Michigan Methodist Episcopal conference opened in this city Wednesday with an attendance of 100 ministers and visitors. Bishop W. W. Mallalieu of Buffalo presided. The bishop in the course of his remarks said that, with the exception of Ohio, Michigan has furnished more missionaries than any other state.

Reports of the presiding elders of the various districts were received. The afternoon was devoted to the anniversary meetings of the Women's Foreign Missionary society and the Conference Missionary society. The report of the secretary of the former showed that there are 206 auxiliaries in the state, an increase of fourteen over a year ago. The receipts for the year were $5,185.54, an increase of $182.74 over last year.

On Thursday Rev. Thomas H. Jacokes who will have finished his fiftieth year by the next session, was chosen to prepare and deliver a semi-centennial sermon at the next conference. Rev. J. W. Maybee, of Mason, was appointed superintendent of the National Children's Home society for New York and Rev. W. H. Thompson, of Lansing, was appointed to the same position for the National Children's Home for Pennsylvania. Officers of the Freedmen's Aid Society were elected as follows: President, J. H. Thomas, Grand Haven; vice president, Edward Tench, Concord; secretary, T. T. George, Rockford.

JACKSON, Sept. 17.—Every pulpit in the city was occupied Sunday by a Methodist pastor, in attendance on the Michigan Methodist Episcopal conference. The churches were all crowded to their utmost capacity. The leading services, however, were held at the First Methodist Episcopal church, where Bishop Mallalieu addressed a congregation of 2,500 people. At the close of the services sixteen deacons were ordained with most impressive services, and eight elders. Annual memorial services were held at 2:30 in the afternoon. A temperance rally was also held in the afternoon addressed by John G. Woolley.

Asks for an Accounting.

KALAMAZOO, Sept. 17.—Mrs. Deborah Alcott has filed a bill of complaint in the circuit court to compel D. O. Roberts to render an accounting as trustee of the estate of her late husband, W. W. Alcott. The estate was valued at $50,000 and is said to have disappeared entirely. Roberts had absolute control of it for twenty-two years and has never rendered an account. He is trustee of the Michigan female seminary and prominent in the Presbyterian church.

MACCABEES MEET.

Proceedings of the Session of the Great Camp at Lansing.

LANSING, Sept. 13.—The great camp of the Knights of the Maccabees opened here Wednesday with 828 delegates present. Congressman D. D. Aitken, great commander, in his opening address, urged upon the delegates the necessity of adopting the district plan of representation, which will materially decrease the number of delegates to the great camp and allow its business to be transacted with much less friction. The magnitude of the Maccabees order was demonstrated by the report of Great Record Keeper Boyndon. The ladies of the Maccabees number 19,000, which, allied to the Knights of the Maccabees, gives a total membership in the state of Michigan of 75,499. The total membership of the order in the country at large is 157,049, making the Maccabees the second largest organization in the country.

The Saginaw division won the first prize in the competitive drill, securing the challenge cup, valued at $350, and $75 cash. The second prize of $75 was won by the Adrian division.

LANSING, Sept. 14.—At Thursday's session of the great camp of Maccabees the constitution was amended so that hereafter the meetings will be held biennially instead of annually and in June instead of September. The amendment making the county instead of the subordinate tent the unit of representation in the great camp was defeated. Officers were elected as follows:

Great commander, N. S. Boynton, Port Huron; lieutenant commander, Thomas Watson, Roscommon; record keeper, Joseph Boughton, Grand Rapids; finance keeper, R. J. Whaley, Flint; medical examiner, Dr. Edward Eaton, Hudson; chaplain, Henry W. Carey, Manistee; sergeant, Ashley Nobley, Detroit; master-at-arms, W. K. Gustin, Alpena; first master of the guard, Edwin Boyce, Sault Ste. Marie; sentinel, A. H. Lowrie, St. Louis; picket, George C. Ray, Bay City.

LANSING, Sept. 15.—The three days' session of the Knights and Ladies of Maccabees of Michigan ended Friday evening. The next meeting will be held in Saginaw in June, 1896. It was decided to print the ritual in the French language. Mrs. Lillian M. Hollister, of Detroit, was elected great commander of the ladies' branch of the organization.

ON THE INCREASE.

Unsatisfactory Annals of Crime Shown by Attorney General Ellis' Report.

LANSING, Sept. 17.—Advance sheets from Attorney General Ellis' forthcoming annual report shows a considerable increase of crime in Michigan. As a matter of fact, the reports of the several prosecuting attorneys show 3,375 more prosecutions during the fiscal year ending June 30 last than during the preceding fiscal year, with 2.27 per cent more convictions.

The total number of cases prosecuted during the year covered by the report was 22,549, of which 17,349 resulted in conviction, 1,738 in acquittal, 972 were dismissed on payment of costs, 992 were nolle prossed, 945 persons arrested were discharged on examination and 383 either settled the cases against them, escaped or secured their release by other means.

In the number of prosecutions the lesser crimes rank first. The number of persons prosecuted under the general head of disorderly were 10,929, or nearly one-half of the total number of prosecutions. Assault and battery ranks next, with 3,077 prosecutions, although the total of the various kinds of larceny cases is 3,711. For violation of the liquor law 1,019 persons were prosecuted, and 484, or less than one-half, convicted. The number prosecuted for violation of the game law was 249, of which number 178 resulted in conviction.

There were 31 prosecutions for murder, 18 convictions and 9 acquittals. For manslaughter 8 persons were arrested, 5 convicted, 4 acquitted, and 3 discharged on examination. Fifty-one persons were charged with forgery, 29 of whom were convicted. Of 31 arrests for arson 7 resulted in conviction, the greater number being discharged on examination.

Of the total number of cases prosecuted Wayne county furnished 7,570; Ingham, 954; St. Clair, 749; Saginaw, 721; Gogebic, 685; Eaton, 658; Jackson, 632; Kent, 629, and Bay, 624.

Fires Effectually Quenched.

HOUGHTON, Sept. 15.—A heavy rain set in Friday night, continuing for ten hours. The forest fires are effectually quenched over the area of the storm. Reports from various points threatened by forest fires state that the flames were extinguished. With normal rainfall for the balance of the season there should be no further trouble from fires this fall. The loss in the pine districts of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota will reach nearly $10,000,000.

He Knew Jeff.

Pritchard's attention to the fleeing president, was the first to bring him to a halt.

BAY CITY, Sept. 14.—The annual convention of the State Bankers' association opened in the Grand opera house Wednesday afternoon. After the address of welcome by Thomas Cranage, of Bay City, and the response by George H. Russel, of Detroit, the president, Spencer O. Fisher, democratic candidate for governor, gave his annual address. Detroit was chosen as the next place of meeting. On Thursday Comptroller of the Currency Eckels addressed the association on the subject of the currency and the financial upheavals of 1893. He congratulated the citizens of Michigan upon the fact that despite the panic of the last year, the unprecedented withdrawal of deposits, the continued depression of business and the almost complete cessation of manufacturing industries, but four of their state banking institutions had proved unable to maintain their solvency, which was a striking testimony to the wisdom of conducting banking operations upon safe principles and along legitimate lines.

Ex-Postmaster General Don M. Dickinson addressed the convention, and papers on important topics of especial interest to the bankers were read by Frederick P. Hayes, president of the Preston national bank of Detroit; George B. Caswell, national bank examiner; Charles S. Stewart, of Detroit; W. B. Burt, of Saginaw; State Superintendent of Banks T. C. Sherwood and others.

The following officers were elected after which the convention adjourned sine die:

President, S. M. Cutcheon, Detroit; first vice president, C. H. Wheeler, Grand Rapids; second vice president, W. B. Wiggins, Grand Rapids; secretary, Frederick Bates, Detroit; treasurer, W. T. Barnes, Detroit.

Floyd, Grand Rapids; vice president, D. D. King, Olivet; secretary, Thomas Cox, Hastings; treasurer, F. W. Corbett, Evart.

Still Maintains His Innocence.

LAPEER, Sept. 15.—Sherman Blow, of Ionia, was examined Friday afternoon in Justice Perkins' court on the charge of instigating the stock poisoning at Dryden by Martin Blow, his nephew. He still brands as false every statement made by the young man in his confession implicating him. His attorney will endeavor to prove Martin insane. The testimony given was very dark for the defendant. He was bound over to the circuit court for trial. Bail was increased to $500.

Held for Trial.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as does in the North. There are never sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do all farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past 5 years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health. Live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Low rate excursions every month over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. E. E. Posey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile, Ala.

Supposing we turn out Tammany and turn in Platt, what will we gain? Don't all speak at once.

The earlier symptoms of dyspepsia, heartburn, and occasional headaches, should not be neglected. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla to be cured.

For loud, unadulterated falsehood we have never seen anything to surpass the platform adopted by the New Hampshire republicans.

Hood's Pills cure all liver ills.

Not a dollar of state funds for private institutions. That is the true doctrine, and the man who is not in favor of it is no friend of our institutions.

Tammany had better turn on the gas and end it all.

The Southwest Farmer's Club.

The September meeting was held with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spafard on Friday, September 7th, in their beautiful new house in the village. The afternoon was excessively hot, but the dust from which we have suffered so much, was laid by the morning's showers, consequently a full membership was in attendance.

Our attention was attracted on entering the hall by a floral piece containing large choice pansies, an offering from H. L. Rose, the Manchester florist.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Halliday, of Norvell.

At the beginning of the meeting Vice-President S. M. Merithew was called upon to preside. The program began with a select reading by Mrs. Elva Green. It was a criticism of Prof. Goldwin Smith's article entitled "The last resort in favor of women's franchise."

"The representative women of Canada, for whom he has most respect, are opposed to having the ballot granted them. This is an age of individual liberty, and the general basis for suffrage is that all the intelligent community, irrespective of race, sex or color, should have the right to cast a ballot. The plain question is whether giving the franchise to women is for the good of all or not. An antagonistic view taken by man is that woman claims an equality with him in brain power and physique. This she does not do, only in the use of the endowment of intellect she possesses. Woman claims the ballot not as a class or sex but as an individual. It does not mean woman's rule and man's dethronement as some would have us believe. Prof. Smith grants woman the right to think, to express herself in books, upon the platform, but not at the polls."

The writer said that Mrs. Howe and Mrs. Livermore had struck strong blows for freedom.

Next came a fine essay on "Work," by Mrs. Eva Spafard. She said she did not expect to enlighten the farmer upon the subject, but, as the boy said, to talk to herself on paper" about work. He who toils to cultivate the flowers achieves as broad success as he who truthfully places them upon canvas. Very few fortunes are gained by inheritance; they are nearly all the result of toil. The wife cheerfully toils for her household and the sweetness of her efforts will remain when she is resting calmly and peacefully in the last sleep. Where in all the world is another like the farmer's wife? She is the cornerstone of the universe. We, grown-up children, like appreciation. Every woman should give some time each day to literature. God intended we should do this. It is a fact that too many are slaves in their endeavors to prove faultless housekeepers.

The paper upon the subject, "Are Crop Reports of any Benefit to Farmers?" was read by the president of the club, B. G. English. He said the speculator or the middleman has been for a long time in possession of the main facts the crop reports give the farmer to-day. These reports place the farmer and the buyer on an equal footing. General Rusk, Secretary of Agriculture, under President Harrison, said on this subject: "The farmer who does not read some paper devoted to his calling is beyond all intelligent effort in his behalf."

G. S. Rawson thought crop reports placed the farmer on the same basis as the speculator. The seller as well as the buyer must have knowledge of the prices and markets or there will be a very unfair transaction.

H. R. Palmer, for an illustration, said the reports tell us that the potato crop is 18 per cent. below the average for the last ten years. Prices will rule accordingly. Speculation is the life of business. We need the crop reports. We must have them.

A. Hitchcock.—As far as we know, our crops are not overestimated in the reports.

W. E. Pease.—All those buying have some means of estimating the extent of the crops. Our crop reports are not accurate by any means. The reports come from representative farmers who make them as nearly correct as they have the information. Cheapness and plenty do not indicate prosperity. It does not guarantee plenty to the individual for people may starve surrounded by plenty.

A. D. English.—I believe crop reports form a basis for speculation with a consequent result—loss to the farmer.

J. G. English referred to the report of the hot winds in the West which brought up the price of corn to 58 cents per bushel, more than wheat is bringing.

Richard Green thinks the speculator helps the farmer. The markets of the world do not fluctuate as did the wheat market in Chicago when Hutchinson "cornered" the market there a few years ago. (Your reporter would just here refer to the statement made by the author of "This Busy World" in the latest issue of Harper's Weekly, that Hutchinson, once able to control the wheat market in Chicago, was "swallowed in the wheat pit" and went to New York and opened a restaurant. Such is speculation.)

T. B. Halliday—He denied the statement that imputed unfairness toward the farmer. He did not think our lawmakers would legislate in favor of speculators. We should be posted. We should assist the crop reporters by giving statistics of our acreage in crops and their average yield. The markets are controlled by the supply and demand, not by the bulls and bears of Boards of Trade. Corn is high to-day. How do we know but it is best to sell immediately? The information we receive from crop reports says not.

After partaking of refreshments each member took their departure, thanking their host and hostess for the pleasure they had experienced and resolved to attend the October meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Pease.

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia: land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

Cottonseed hulls promise to become a leading competitor of wheat as a food for stock. If the price of corn advances much more, as it probably will in consequence of the shortage of this year's crop, farmers that have corn will probably sell it and feed their stock on cheaper food. Cottonseed hulls are baled like hay and sell at from $4 to $5 per ton in southern markets.

Mrs. Hall is still very sick at this writing.

Don Bowen, of Tecumseh, was in the village Monday.

F. E. Pocklington was in Toledo, last Monday, on business.

Jack Frost made his first appearance of the season Monday night.

A. J. Sutton and Bert Gould were at the fair at Adrian last Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Linn visited relatives near Milan over Sunday.

Rhoda and Lou Arner went to Allegan Tuesday to visit their cousin Mrs. W. E. Barrett.

Beginning with next Monday the library will be open from 2 to 6 and from 7 to 9 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clark, of North Adams, are visiting relatives in this village and vicinity this week.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a franchise meeting at the home of Mrs. F. E. Pocklington on Friday evening of this week.

Eva Osgood, after a ten days visit at Toronto, Niagara Falls and Detroit, with relatives and friends, returned the first of the week.

Kittie Clark left Saturday evening for a few weeks visit with relatives and friends at Detroit, Flat Rock, Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti.

Mary Osgood in company with her cousin, Clara Temple, visited her sister, Mrs. Gorton, at Ypsilanti, from Saturday until Tuesday.

Go and hear "Stacy's Snap Shot Story" next week at the church. You will hear a good entertainment and help the organ fund at the same time.

Geo. Gifford who has been at Sarnia, Ont., for the past three weeks, returned Saturday night accompanied by his wife who has been visiting relatives for the past three months.

Now that Jack Frost has put in his appearance the old garden gate will get a rest until the balmy evenings of spring have returned, and as the couch will be once more in demand, we are prepared to repair the springs and put on new covers, etc.

A special school meeting of District No. 1, fractional, Ridgeway and Macon, held at the school building on the evening of the 19th, for the purpose of securing an addition to the present school ground for a play ground, was largely attended and discoursed at quite a length after which a vote was taken, resulting in 23 yeas and 24 nays. It is somewhat amusing to see how determined some people are to deprive other people's children from equal school advantages as their children had, some of whom have sons and daughters earning their living, and all they have was paid for money raised by tax and the school system, and are always kicking for an increase of salary. It makes a great difference whose child reaps the benefit.

The musical committee of the church having in consideration the tuning of the pipe organ, have accepted S. C. Stacy's proposition to give his Snap Shot Story to secure means to have the work done. "Stacy's Snap Shot Story of the World's Columbian Exposition" is a series of three lectures on the World's Fair. It is illustrated with 300 stereopticon views and is the finest and most elaborate description of the wonderful exhibition held in the White City yet given to the public. We trust all interested in the needs of the church will avail themselves of this rare treat and help raise means to carry out this work. The entertainment will be given in the church on next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Oct. 1st, 2nd and 3rd. Course tickets, three evenings, 35c; second and third evenings, 25c; single ticket for adults, 15c; single ticket for children, 10c. Doors open at 7:00; lecture begins at 8:00, sharp.

A Tribute of Respect.

The reaper Death, ever busy, has removed from our midst one of our most highly esteemed members and it is with sorrow the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church, make mention of the death of Mrs. Caroline S. Randall, who passed to her home beyond, May 18, 1894. Her death occurring soon after the last meeting of the society last year made it impossible to mention it before. Having been a resident of the village many years she became a resident of the society at its organization and throughout all the years has been an interested and active member, doing with her might what her hands found to do. Her wise counsel and thoughtful suggestions when acted upon were always helpful to the society and among all its members none were held in more profound respect than was Sister Randall. Not only in the Aid Society, but in all departments of church work her influence was felt. Many can testify to the words of comfort and cheer spoken by her in our revival meetings last winter, which she attended whenever circumstances would permit. Her whole soul seemed absorbed in the thought of doing for the good of others. Soon after, when stricken down by disease, she manifested the same perfect confidence in her Savior she had ever done and expressed herself as not only willing but desirous to pass on to her heavenly home, saying if this could not be she should be disappointed. We deem her life full of valuable lessons and worthy of imitation, and that we have sustained a loss that words fail to express.

Card of Thanks.

Nothing casts such a gloom, or distracts the home, like the loss of the companion and mother of the household, where all the labors and aspirations of the family circle center. And nothing is more sustaining in such affliction than the sympathy and assistance of neighbors and friends. Therefore, we return grateful acknowledgements to the many neighbors and friends who so kindly and devotedly assisted in our late affliction.

A REVIVAL.

Tecumseh has long been noted among the villages of Lenawee as a cycling center. Ever since the advent of the ancient "bone shaker" our village has had many devotees to this invigorating recreation. At one time the Tecumseh Bicycle Club was foremost in the social life of the town and its May Party was looked forward to as the event of the social season.

For some inexplicable reason, even though the number of riders has increased four fold, the old time enthusiasm has died away. Recently however twenty of our prominent young business men have united in forming the Tecumseh Bicycle Association, and in order to properly announce the advent of the youngster, will present to the public, on Saturday, October 6th, a race meeting which will eclipse anything heretofore attempted in this section of the state.

It is desired by the management to make this a recognized success, a success which will long reflect credit upon our pleasant village. To that end they invite the hearty co-operation of all citizens to outdo all previous records for hospitality and generosity.

Four hundred dollars will be hung up in prizes, which will consist principally of diamonds, watches, jewelry and valuable sundries. All events will be strictly 'Class A' events and will be run under the L. A. W. racing rules. Every convenience will be given both riders and spectators.

Appended is a list of the various committees and events.

A MOTHER'S HEART.

Within her heart she keeps a place
Wherein is chiseled his pure face
As first she knew it long ago,
When life and soul were white as snow.

Unminding what the world doth say,
Along she goes her weary way,
And he whose path is rough and wild
Still is to her pure as a child.

RACE TO DEATH.

There is never any lack of beauty in Dublin ballrooms, and that year I cannot help thinking that there was more than the usual proportion of attraction. But of all the girls who compelled devotion there was nobody quite so charming as Mary Macartney. When she was presented at the castle, the lord lieutenant administered his official kiss with peculiar unction and was afterward heard to say that if his duties were always as pleasant he could bear a very frequent repetition of them. The vice regal opinion was very cordially re-echoed by everybody, and wherever Mary went her progress was a scene of triumph. The Two Hundredth was devoted to her to a man. One dance in an evening was a thing to be proud of, and if she deigned to give any fortunate man two he was at once placed upon a pinnacle of social superiority.

Finch and Seymour were her most devoted admirers and had it all their own way in her preference. I won't say affections, for I believe she could only have looked upon them as two editions of the same man, and they were so loyal to each other that they appeared to have the one special tendresse in common with their other properties.

The Two Hundredth was about to have its great function of the year—its regimental steeplechases. All the best of the animals that had gone through the hunting campaign were entered for the various events, and the mess table talk, which for months had run upon scent, find, finish and the casualties of the chase, turned to handicapping, weights and racing conditions.

Finch and Seymour now, as on other occasions, took a foremost place. Each of them owned horses rather above the average in quality, and each had one entered for the regimental cup. As I said before, both of them were good performers in the pig-skin, and it was more than probable that if they started Captain Seymour's Mousetrap (did I tell you that Seymour had just got his troop while Finch was senior subaltern?) and Mr. Finch's Sorcerer would start as equal favorites. The two friends did all their training and galloping together, and I believe that, though each intended to ride his horse out and do his best, they did not much care how they would be placed at the finish, so long as one was first and the other second.

Of course we expected all our friends to come to our race meeting and made plentiful provision for their entertainment. Given the officers of a cavalry regiment bent on making holiday; add tents, luncheon, band and a fine spring day, and you form a series of attractions which will collect people from far and near, especially in Ireland. When the day of the meeting came, it was all that could be wished. There was a bright sun and a soft wind, and there had been just a sufficient sprinkling of rain overnight to lay the dust and make the drive to the course delightful, while the few light clouds in the heir a were not discouraging enough to prevent our fair friends from putting on their freshest and prettiest toilets. Coach after coach rattled over Carlisle Bridge, each with a full load and each with a bit of muslin on the box; brakes, carriages and cars innumerable, the jarveys doing honor to the occasions by volleys of chaff, and many advancements on their light hearted selves and their apparently equally gay and light hearted, well bred nags. The race course was about eight miles from the city in the Howth direction, and if the day were to have another pleasure the drive down, with occasional glimpses of the beautiful bay of Dublin, celebrated in song, was enough of enjoyment for any one.

We arrived at the scene of action, and the business of the day commenced. The subalterns' cup was the first event, and, I must say, the boys did credit to the old Two Hundredth. The senior subalterns were lying by for the regimental cup, and the juniors had the race to themselves. It was won by young Molesworth, whose round shoulders and uncompromisingly ugly seat had caused much conflict of opinion between him and the old riding master, but who now showed that if he were not destined to shine in the menage he had at any rate indisputable nerve and enough seat and hands to take him over a difficult country. He afterward became one of our best men on a horse and won equestrian honors in many ticklish places. Then came an hour's interval for lunch, but of course those who were going to ride had to put the muzzle on. I just looked into the tent before going to weigh and saw Mary Macartney, looking as sweet as ever. Seymour and Finch were both with her, and she was wishing them good luck in their gallop. As they left her safely in the colonel's charge I heard her say: "Now, mind, I expect you two to beat everybody else, and I shall be particularly nice to the one who wins. I may even give him two dances at the castle ball tomorrow night."

The Two Hundredth were pretty businesslike in matters of sport, and there was none of the fuss and delay in the weighing room that too often marks the doings of amateur jockeys. Punctual to time, the starters filed out of the paddock. I think there were eight of us. Seymour's colors were rose and black cap and Finch's blue and red sash. Mousetrap and Sorcerer were a long way the best of the runners to look at. Mousetrap was a big, bony bay horse, with rather a slack neck, but the best of shoulders, tremendous jumping power and a great turn of speed. He required a workman to ride him, as his temper was easily ruffled, but in Seymour's hands he generally went like a lamb.

Sorcerer was one of those exceptional horses that can take a turn at anything. He had gone through training in the riding school, and on occasions was the best of chargers. He was so good looking that when he had a military kit on there was no horse in the regiment that looked more showy than he did, but the white hairs on his chestnut coat and the silvery locks in his tail showed the blood of old Warlock, and he had a large share of the pace, cleverness and staying power that mark that great ancestor. As we rode down the course I could hear the few bookies who were present in the ring reckoning up the chances of the field in stentorian cries of "5 to 1, bar two." I was riding a confidential old hunter which was warranted to stand up over the country, but I had only entered him to make up the race, and unless most of the others came to grief I had not the smallest chance to be heard of at the finish. There is not much difficulty in starting a steeplechase, and we all got away very well. We negotiated the first three or four fences without any casualties, but then we began to thin out a little. Forrescue's hard mouthed old jade went outside the flag at the first turn, and he did not manage to stop her till she had gone half a mile toward Dublin. Wilson and Mackworth fell at the water jump, to the unconcealed satisfaction of the crowd which had collected there, and there were only five of us left. Jacky Thompson was leading. Seymour and Finch were riding side by side, evidently intending to wait till we were nearer home and then come to the front and finish together. About a length behind them was Percy, and I brought up the rear. There was a long stretch of grass rather down hill on the farther side of the course from the stand, and here we began to put on the pace. Percy evidently thought it was now or never, and that if he allowed himself to get too far behind he would not be able to push forward again, so he made a determined effort and shot past Seymour and Finch. I think old Mousetrap's temper must have been upset by seeing a horse passing so close. I saw him shake his head and try to get away from Seymour.

The next fence was a bank, with a ditch on the taking off side. It was nothing of a place really, but only required a little care. Thompson got over cleverly, and Percy's horse took the whole in his stride. Then came Seymour, who had hardly steadied Mousetrap, but even so the horse ought not to have made a mistake. Perhaps he was flurried, or there may have been a stump sticking up where a bush had been cut away. I don't know how it happened, but the horse hit something, lost his feet and fell on the bank. Seymour was all right and got clear at once, slipping back into the ditch. I told you Finch had been alongside of Seymour, and he was close behind him at the fence. Sorcerer jumped it beautifully; but, to my horror, as he was kicking back at the bank I saw the hoof on his off hind foot strike the head of Seymour, who fell down. Even amid the rattle of the horses it seemed to me that I could hear the dull crash of broken bone, and I was sure that a terrible accident had happened. So sure was I that, though one does not often pull up in a race, I stopped my horse, which indeed had it now the smallest gloucs, dismounted and ran to pick up Seymour. Poor fellow! I had not been mistaken and could almost trace the print of the cruel horseshoe on the back of his head. He was nearly senseless and just muttered "Cold, cold!" A small crowd had begun to collect, and I borrowed a couple of frieze coats from two sympathizing countrymen, trying with them to cover my poor friend, and laid him in as easy a position as possible. The race glasses at the stand had seen that something serious had happened, and our good old surgeon, Macpherson, came up on a trooper which he had taken from one of our men who was keeping the ground. When he had examined the injury, his kind face fell as he said: "I fear the base of the skull is fractured. If so, it is only a question of hours." Fortunately the accident had happened near the road, and a carriage was quickly procured, in which Seymour was placed and taken away by Macpherson.

When I came back to the stand, I found that Finch had won the race easily and was still quite unconscious that his friend was hurt. I did not tell him the particulars, but only said that it had been thought better to take Seymour back to Dublin. He pulled a wrapper over his racing jacket, jumped on a hack and started at a gallop in pursuit. Immediately afterward I met Mary Macartney. She had a very white face and tears in her deep violet eyes as she brought me to tell her if the accident had been dangerous. I made the best of things, but she, I think, divined the sad truth and had her mother take her home. There was a heavy cloud over everybody for the rest of the day, as though we got through all the races in the usual time there was little spirit in anything, and we were glad when we were able to break up. There was little chaff or fun on the drive home.

We had a miserable time of alternate hopes and fears about our comrade, but in three days all was over. Finch was inconsolable, though fortunately neither he nor anyone else at the time knew that he had been the cause of Seymour's death. It was always supposed that Mousetrap had kicked his master in his struggles to recover himself when he fell. I have never told the real story till tonight, and you will not let it go further. Sir Thomas Finch is a great swell now, but I don't think he would learn without deep pain that, however innocently, he was the cause of the death vacancy by which he got the troop that gave him the first start in his successful career.

What became of Mary Macartney? Oh, she is Lady Finch, and, 'pon my soul, I think she is still as beautiful and charming as ever.—Pall Mall Magazine.

Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. OVER A COLORADO DESERT.

LAMAR, Co., Aug. 16, '94.

DEAR MR. EDITOR:—Out from Pueblo I rode straight upon a Colorado desert. Of all desolation the scarred alkali plains present the most perfect type of absolute loneliness. The most abandoned recesses of the mountain are cheerful in comparison with these burning plains where nothing but the winding serpentine road tells you that mankind has been there. I was on the opposite side of the river from the Santa Fe Railroad, and for 30 miles saw neither human face or human habitation. About me grew the sage brush and the long slender leaved soap plant. Evil looking cactus threatened at the roadside and ugly weeds the only vegetation. Not even prairie grass will grow there. In my rear the ever cool mountains were vanishing in the distance and the hot sun was rising before me higher and higher. There had been a rain the previous night and across the roads the flowing rivulets had puddled and formed mud holes which were utterly impassable with a bicycle. This mud is as sticky as tar and once the wheel is in there follows a struggle to extract it. I began to suffer for water to drink. The alkali water is wholly undrinkable for a stranger, and I had ridden 30 miles before I could get even that. When I at last reached a ranch milk was all I could get and that tasted of the rank weeds upon which the cows feed. But I was coming to a town, I saw by my map. Nepesta was only 5 miles away. First a river with a deep bed confronted me. A bridge rested serenely in the center of the stream. Each end was 30 feet from the shore. The shore where I was, had a steep bank fully 12 feet straight down to the sands at the waters edge, and was that way as far as I could see. I saw Arabian Nights visions of flying horses, but my Victor would not fly. No genii showed me a secret tunnel under the river, nor did a beautiful princess come along and order her servants to assist me. I simply and ungracefully hooked my foot under the handle of my bike and lowered away, while I slid over the bank as far as I could, and when my anatomy had let out as many points as possible I let go the wheel, and it dropped to the sands. I quickly descended and found my wheel all right, shouldered it and waded to the opposite bank. After toiling thro' two miles of sand under the burning sun, I found good traveling and rode eagerly to Nepesta. But I might as well reached the ruins of Babylon, for the only house which had ever marked the spot had burned. The noon hour was long past and I was very hungry and desperately thirsty. The large Railroad tank leaked a little and a few drops on my parched tongue relieved me. Hungry, heated and thirsty, and Catlin the next town: like Sheridan, it was 30 miles away. I pushed on and soon saw one of the adobe houses common in this region. I hastened there but it was empty. Birds were using the straw which is mixed with mud in constructing these dwellings, and hornets had taken possession of the cracks which had opened in the outer wall. After passing several more adobe houses I saw one with a roof of new shingles, brand new and I was happy as I hurried toward it in anticipation of a meal. There must have dwelt the giant Despair, but he was not at home; when I pushed the door open and saw the filth of the inside I was glad to plod on and resign myself to await the arrival at Catlin. Slowly enough I rode that afternoon and only at 5 o'clock did I reach Catlin. Here I saw first a neat cottage with real live trees about it, and a garden. I went to the door and rapped and was confronted by a young man of city rather than country town appearance. When I asked for something to drink besides alkali water he hastened to prepare a lemonade, and with thirst relieved, I conversed a few moments and we discovered that we had several mutual friends and were both college boys. The bond of sympathy being established, he invited me to remain to supper and share his bed that night. He explained that he did not live there but his best girl did, so it was all the same. I passed a very pleasant evening with the young man and the family of his intended. Next morning the early dawn saw me upon my way to Rocky Ford, of watermelon fame. Melons were just ripe in that region. Boyhood instincts worked strong with me. The cornfields with its hidden treasures of melons was close at hand. The tempter worked hard, but I resisted, and to-day, far from the juicy melon I am sorrifully innocent of theft. Rocky Ford once safely in the rear, I soon reached La-Junta, near which town I saved several miles of circuitous wagon road by taking to the Santa Fe R. R., and being nearly run over by a fast express while crossing a R. R. bridge. They did not even whistle for me, and I barely reached the end of the bridge as the train whistled past. The terrible heat of the sun upon the arid soil was working mischief with me, and after riding at one place for several miles upon the river bed which the sun had baked hard, I was exhausted. Then I pushed my wheel a mile through rank weeds and a field of alfafa to reach the road which I had abandoned. I rode 42 miles to Las Animcas in an exhausted condition, and then took the cars to Lamar, 35 miles away where I am sojourning for a week. In my twelfth and last letter I will relate my experience on a ranch, and whatever portion of the ride home I take upon the wheel. From here to Kansas City, and possibly to Chicago, I shall take cars rather than ride any more upon those burning prairies.

Some Notable Opinions on Co-Education.

One of the most interesting topics of the day is undoubtedly co-education, and Demorest's Family Magazine, with characteristic enterprise, has set before its readers in the October number a most excellent symposium on this important question. The contributors to it are among the best known educators of the country and comprise such names as David Star Jordan, Thomas S. Hastings, H. M. McCracken, James M. Taylor, Charles H. Knox, Edmund P. Platt and S. S. Packard. As all of these men have very decided opinions on the question and are authorities on educational matters, their views cannot fail to be interesting. "Cadet Life at West Point" which appears in the same number is a well written and entertaining sketch of the life of a cadet from the time he enters West Point until he is a full-fledged soldier. An excellent description of the school and its surroundings is given and, as it is written by a cadet, it has the charm of local color which only one intimate with the place can give; and the article is also superbly illustrated. "A Failure in Dress Reform" is a sprightly and humorous narrative showing some of the difficulties in the way of would-be progressive young girls assuming masculine attire.

Harper's Weekly truly says: "The country does not intend to face to the rear because the Democratic party has not advanced far enough, nor will it take a plunge in the dark after leaders who have no definite views of their own." And that is gospel truth.

A BOOK WORTH READING.

Wealth against Commonwealth, which is announced for early publication by Harper & Brothers, is a book on the "trusts" or monopolies, which are so conspicuous a feature of American life. It is not an argument, but a dramatic presentation of the human facts of the combinations in sugar, coal, matches, meat, oil, and many other things. It has been the aim of the author to give a picture of the realities of modern business, and to make some of its mysteries clear to the common people, out of whose lives and labors its fabrics are made. It is, as he says, a venture in realism, not in the world of fiction, but of realities. Monopoly is treated broadly, as the supreme expression of our commercial tendencies, and the chief social and political fact of a civilization which is giving to business what other civilizations gave to war and religion. Our great trade combinations are regarded as merely illustrations of a movement which is itself but an illustration of the spirit of the age. Of these, the oil trust is taken as the prototype of all the rest, and is described in full detail. Its growth is traced from its origin to its vast proportions now, when it controls the oil, and several other, markets of a continent—perhaps four continents—and is probably the most influential and most dreaded financial power in America. It is a romance of the business, as absorbing in its interest as any ancient or mediæval romance of conquest. The direct bearing of the book upon the most important social and economical questions now under discussion everywhere is obvious. It contributes to the debate an immense stock of pertinent facts. By his well-known article in the North American Review on "Lords of Industry" in 1884 the author gave the public its first clear view of the centralization of industries. The debate which he then initiated has been growing more important every year, and the present volume, the embodiment of ten year's study, finds the subject first on the order of the day in politics as well as in livelihoods.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

(Edited by the Tecumseh W. C. T. U.)

HASN'T FORSAKEN PROHIBITION.

Miss Willard Denies a Silly Story of the Old Party Press.

The old party papers are circulating the story that Miss Frances E. Willard has left the Prohibition Party. They say she has adopted the idea of some of the labor leaders that you must first "abolish poverty" if you would abolish the saloon, and will therefore leave off working for legislative Prohibition. Miss Willard writes thus in reply to a private letter:

"As to the announcement that I, who am a Prohibitionist, am also in strong sympathy with the views and spirit of the Labor party, I am amused to think how very important I must be when the party does not seem at all aware that this has been true of me for many years, and that I have asserted it in my annual addresses, articles for the press, leaflets, etc; also, in 1892, I was chosen by the Labor party as vice-president of its great convention in St. Louis. The Prohibition and Labor parties have almost everything in common and ought to try to cooperate. This has been my belief for years, and now to have the labor papers coming out and saying that I have 'just begun to perceive that the economic conditions of wage-earners have much to do with the drinking habit,' is a form of sarcasm that proves to me how little real influence I have one way or another. Well, so wags the world, and so mote it be."

Among the papers publishing this story about Miss Willard was the Poughkeepsie Enterprise. Chairman Downing of the Prohibition State Committee promptly challenged the editor of The Enterprise to prove his charge. Of course he couldn't and had to say so.

The Boston Transcript is aroused over the question whether screens shall be allowed in the saloons of that city. Strange how interested some people can be in fighting the harmless appendages of a saloon, and how indifferent to the one thing that makes a saloon dangerous, namely, drink!

If the saloon-keeper is to barred out of Catholic societies, how about the man who votes to legalize and protect the saloon? Is one any more entitled to admission than the other; and, if so, which one—the man who goes into the business to make a living or the man who votes it into existence to help his party?

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will celebrate Miss Willard's birthday Friday, 28th, by a social held at the home of Mrs. Annie Bryant Smith. Everybody is invited. Each member is requested to try and bring in a new member. A part of the afternoon's program will be experiences relating to self denial week, which includes Sept. 22 to 28th. A question box will also be opened.

Boston is under $1,000 license and a law restricting saloons to one for every 500 of population. Minneapolis saloons pay $1.000 license and are hedged in by the patrol limits. Philadelphia ginmills also pay $1.000 license, and the number has been reduced nearly three-fourths by the courts. All three cities have what the license folks call a "model law." Yet the Boston Journal is just now rejoicing because it says the authorities have determined to enforce the law prohibiting screens in saloons, which is everywhere violated; Minneapolis is worrying over the discovery of scores of "straw" bondsmen which the ginmills have palmed off upon the public; and nearly every edition of the Philadelphia dailies report numerous raids upon the "speak-easies" or illegal liquor joints of that city. All of which goes to prove that our High-License friends are awfully mistaken in their assertions that High License makes the saloon-keeper a law-abiding citizen and a policeman, to prevent illegal selling. You can license the ginmill, but you can't license into it respectability or regard for the law.

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Case, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

Scribner's Magazine for October contains the first of two articles on English Railways by H. G. Prout, editor of the Railway Gazette. Colonel Prout recently make a trip to England expressly for the magazine, to accumulate fresh material on a subject with which he was already familiar. He has in his articles preserved the open mind and the even judgment of a man who is thoroughly well-posted on the railroad problem in all countries. In this first article, which deals with "Railroad Travel in England and America," he compares the systems of the two countries, particularly as to safety, speed, cost, comfort and construction.

Michigan Fishermen Lay Themselves Open to Prosecution for Piracy.

ALPENA, Sept. 22.—The Canadian steamer Enterprise, wrecked near North Point, had 27,000 bushels of wheat. Seven hundred bushels were saved, but the balance is under water. Fishermen and others in the vicinity finding the wreck abandoned commenced taking the wet grain. About fifty persons are charged with taking from a few bushels to a hundred each. The insurance agent appeared and issued orders for the stolen grain to be returned or the thieves prosecuted. Complaint was made to the custom house department and the persons who took the damaged wheat were informed that their act was piracy and smuggling; that their sailboats were liable to seizure and themselves to prosecution. No arrests have yet been made and the matter is liable to be settled by the men paying for the wheat and custom duties. The thousands of bushels of wheat in the Enterprise will now remain in her until she breaks up. The wet wheat stolen was only good for chicken feed, as it had begun to sprout. The Alpena custom officer has reported the facts to headquarters and is awaiting orders. If the custom department prosecutes the wheat takers, or pirates and smugglers, as they are termed by law, it will prove a great hardship to many worthy persons, who had no intention of violating the law, but believed they were saving wheat which had been abandoned by its owner as useless. An offer of $600 was made for the cargo when there was a prospect of saving a portion.

WILL END HIS DAYS IN PRISON.

For the Second Time Joseph P. Gordon Is Sentenced to Imprisonment for Life.

DETROIT, Sept. 24.—Joseph P. Gordon was sentenced to life imprisonment for the second time Saturday. The evening of July 6, 1892, Gordon went to his home, where he lived with his wife and daughter. Westley Robinson was there talking with his wife, and Gordon got mad about something. According to his own statement he fired one shot at Robinson, and then, seeing him fall, fired again. This second shot struck his little daughter, Flora, and killed her. He was at once arrested, locked up, and claimed at the time that he did not know he had killed his daughter. This was two years ago, and he was convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced to prison for life. A new trial was secured. This resulted in a verdict of murder in the first degree and his second sentence.

JOKE RESULTS IN DEATH.

Fred Eichbroch Drowned While Fleeing from Imaginary Pursuit.

RICHMOND, Sept. 24.—A dozen boys of Ray Center, near here, played a practical joke on some of their companions that resulted in a funeral on Sunday. On Friday they invited their victims to an orchard, where stolen fruit was freely eaten. While the feast was at its height a section of the jokers rushed in from the side and opened fire on the feasters with guns and revolvers. All the shots were fired into the air, but the frightened boys thought they were being killed, and fled pell mell in every direction. All escaped except Fred Eichbrecht, 18 years old. In the flight he stumbled over a log, fell into a mill-pond and was drowned. Nothing was thought of his absence, and his body was not found until Saturday morning. The jokers will be punished.

SAY HE WAS MURDERED.

New Theory of Editor Cronin's Mysterious Disappearance.

GRAND HAVEN, Sept. 23.—The police say they have information which leads to the belief that Editor Cronin of the West Michigan Independent, who mysteriously disappeared from here last spring, was murdered. Residents of Olive township say Cronin was there after leaving this city, paying court to a woman who had a local admirer. This man, they say, killed Cronin in a jealous rage and buried his body on the lake shore. A detective has gone to look up the facts.

LANSING, Sept. 22.—Dr. H. B. Baker, secretary of the state board of health, says: For the second week in September, typhoid fever is reported from thirteen places more this year than last year. More people should boil their drinking water, and all should be more careful not to breathe or take in on fruit, celery or other uncooked article, any dust from dried human excreta, that substance being usually the cause of typhoid fever. The danger usually culminates in October.

TO BE TRIED FOR ASSAULT.

James Curley, Inmate of Jackson Prison, Attacks His Foreman with a Pick.

JACKSON, Sept. 24.—The state legislature of 1893 passed an act providing for the punishment of any convict now or hereafter confined in any prison in this state for any term other than life, who during his term of confinement shall commit any crime punishable under the laws of the state, said punishment to be as if the crime had been committed at any other place or by a person not so confined. This law has never yet been put to a practical test, but it will be soon. A few days ago James Curley, a convict sent from Detroit on a five years' sentence for burglary, made a vicious attack upon John G. McCleary, the foreman under whom he was employed, striking him on the head and face with an iron pick which was used in cutting stone. But for the other convicts the foreman would have been killed. A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Curley, and he will be tried on the charge of assault with intent to murder.

Filers are in line at the courthouse. The most valuable claims are situated on section 15, which includes the big Colby mine, and have been filed upon by Charles F. Button, Herbert M. Morris, John Kinney and Richard J. Spencer. The above property is valued at $50,000,000. Nearly all the land in this vicinity will be affected, a great deal of which is valuable mining property.

SELLS HIS WIFE FOR $10.

She Agrees to the Contract, But Finally Deserts Her New Lord.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Sept. 20.—Olive Heath, of Isabella township, just 16, was married to Henry Cornwell. In a week Cornwell was willing to give her up and she was willing to go. At this juncture a former friend of Olive's named Gates, from Saginaw, appeared at the hotel where they were staying. The Saginaw man was told he could have her for $10. Gates consulted Olive, and as she thought the plan and the price were about right an agreement was drawn up, which all signed, and the transfer was made. Olive went to Saginaw with Gates, but left him the next day and came back to Cornwell. Now Cornwell reports she has disappeared. He says he understands the contract was the same as a divorce.

SHOT HER HUSBAND.

Mrs. Hurd, of Allegan, Makes an Admission Which Is Not Credited.

ALLEGAN, Sept. 24.—Shortly before 12 o'clock Saturday night Ira Hurd was shot and killed at his home here. Mrs. Ira Hurd, his wife, says she fired the fatal bullet, thinking he was a burglar. But there are circumstances surrounding the case which indicate that she did not do it. Saturday night Hurd announced to his wife that he was going on the train to Hopkins, this county, to pay a man some money he owed him. It appears that he did not go, but returned home shortly after dark and hid behind a shock of corn in the yard. About 10:30 o'clock, having removed his overcoat and shoes, he crawled in through the parlor window and made his way to his wife's room. Shortly after this Mrs. Hurd ran over to one of the neighbors and said she had shot her husband. A doctor and the sheriff were quickly summoned and upon investigation it was found that he was still alive. He was placed upon the bed and everything possible was done for him that could be done to save his life, but to no avail, and he died Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. During the night he revived a little, and the doctor tried to get him to make a statement, but he said he did not want to say anything about the matter. Mrs. Hurd said she had prepared for bed, and had blown out the light and was kneeling before the bed saying her prayers, when she heard a door open and some one rush for her room. She says she reached for her pistol, which lay on the commode, and fired. Something fell and then she lighted a light and discovered that it was her husband whom she had shot. It is generally believed, taking into consideration the position in which the body lay, the course the bullet took and the position the woman was in when she says she fired the shot, that it was impossible for her to have done it. Besides this, the pistol does not look as if it had been fired off in a long time. One of the chambers was empty, but the cartridge looked like an old one.

Stockbridge. Sproehnle & Co., State street, Chicago, of about $2,000 worth of jewelry, was arrested Saturday afternoon at the residence of his uncle, Joseph Bennett, in this city. How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Low rate excursions every month over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. E. E. Posey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile, Ala.

Well, this tariff rumpus has accomplished one good thing; it has cleared the field of a lot of fellows who imagined they were little more than Presidential possibilities.

The earlier symptoms of dyspepsia, heartburn, and occasional headaches, should not be neglected. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla to be cured.

Anything is better than uncertainty. The settling of the tariff question, even in the worst possible way, is opening the doors of some closed factories.

1000 Meals for Five Cents

Each person eats on the average over 1,000 meals per year. To properly flavor these would require say 17 cents worth of Diamond Crystal Salt. This is a trifle greater outlay than if the other kinds were used, but 5 cents would more than cover the difference, and pay for the luxury of having instead of the other kinds. But the important thing about it is the finer flavor your food will have and the greater protection your health will receive when you use the salt that's all salt. Ask your Grocer for DIAMOND CRYSTAL. If he has not got it, write to us. Mrs. Genevieve Burroughs left Saturday morning to join her husband in Indian Territory. Her father, F. D. Lancaster, accompanied her to Adrian. She will be greatly missed by the whole community for she is a general favorite. It is hoped a change of climate will prove beneficial to her health and that it will not be long ere she and Charlie both will return to us.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Woodward was held Friday at the family residence west of town, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and was very largely attended. Rev. Dwight Ramsdell officiating. The choir was composed of intimate friends and neighbors. The floral tributes were many and very fine. The floral star from Golden Rod Chapter, of which Mrs. Woodward was a zealous and honored member, was emblematic of the order in colors and was beautiful. The remains were interred in Riverside cemetery. At the entrance the officers of the Eastern Chapter met and proceeded the remains to the grave. Her death was a great shock to all, as but few knew that she was ill. Mary Brewster was born in 1842 and married to J. E. Woodward in 1865. Her whole life was passed in that neighborhood. She was possessed of traits of character which endeared her to all with whom she came in contact, as was testified by the attendance at the funeral.

Saturday the Manchester base ball aggregation came down and crossed bats with the home team. Our boys feel weak as Kennedy was out of condition and could not pitch so Jimmie Ellis, who had never pitched a game, was put in the box. He proved a great surprise to every one as but a few hits were made off of him in the 7 innings he pitched. He of course was a little nervous, giving several bases on balls but he has fine curves and drops and good speed. He is a left hand twirler and he proved a Jonah to their heavy batters, striking out nine men in the 7th innings he pitched. Rogers was in the box in the 8th inning and did good work. Wade pitched the 9th and got three men faced him. Nisle and Kemis struck out and VanDuyn hit to Wade who threw him out at 1st. Wade gave a straight ball but his terribly speed was what did the business. Clinton was first at bat and made 5 runs in the first. They took kindly to Starts delivery and in the 2nd made four more. He was then relieved by Ryan who succeeded in keeping the hits so scattered that in the other 7 innings they only made 5 runs. The features of the game were Wade's home run in the 8th inning and a neat double play by Manchester. The score was 14 to 10. Earned runs, Manchester 2, Clinton 7.

Two-base hits—VanDuyn, Schofield, Spaulding. Sacrifice hits—Rogers, Hogo. Home runs—Wade. Stolen bases—Manchester 8, Clinton 9. Bases on balls—Manchester 13, Clinton 4. Hit by pitcher—Farrell. Wild pitch—Ellis 2, Rogers 1. Struck out—by Ryan 4, by Ellis 9, by Rogers 1, by Wade 2.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. For descriptive pamphlet address Jno. C. England, Little Rock, Ark. When you write, please mention this HERALD.

—Book Binding.—

We have made arrangements whereby we can take orders at this office for all kinds of binding. The work will be done in first-class style at the University Book Bindery in Ann Arbor. Bring along your magazines and portfolios that you may want bound and get our prices. Now is the time to have your books bound.

A MIRROR VISION.

The hostess, an elegantly dressed lady of 60, with abundant white hair puffed above eyes still black and bright with a fire that must once have kindled a flame in many a heart, caught the ball of conversation as it came her way.

"In my youth we never heard of this thing you call mental telegraph, theosophy and the like, but every now and then there took place, as now, occurrences which puzzled the thoughtful, though they had no name to give the phenomena. But, like most young girls, I was skeptical of all that was not directly natural when I thought of it at all, which was not often, until I had the experience I am going to tell you of, which was so strange that it upset me for some weeks, which agitation came not so much from the real shock and fright that I suffered as from the mysterious circumstances that attended it.

"My own home was a country place some 15 miles from a large city, where I had several families of relatives whom I visited once or twice a year or whenever there was to be given any ball or opera or festivity of sufficient importance for me to desire to attend it. I was just 17 when a royal personage from Europe came across the pond to get a peep at the Yankees, and though democratic to the point of being rabid every manly head was uncovered in the country, every manly throat ached with cheering this personage, and every feminine heart beat high with the hope of having the royal eye rest for a moment upon the new gown which was to be had at all hazards if the family dined on potatoes alone for a year to come.

"There were to be a series of entertainments given in honor of his highness, and I, like all the rest of the world, must attend in all the finery my father's ample means allowed me. From my mother's side of the family I had inherited some very fine diamonds, amounting in value to over $10,000, and even a great deal more in those days, when these gems were not so common, and on this occasion I teased my father to let me wear them.

"I had no mother to tell me that such rich jewelry was not in the best of taste on one so young and an unmarried woman, so when I started for the city I carried the diamonds with me. But my maid was an elderly woman, who had also been my nurse since my motherless babyhood, and the jewels were in her care. Unfortunately, however, Marian fell ill the day after I left home, and being confined to her bed I was dependent on my aunt's maid for services in my dressing, etc. In order to lighten this woman's duties, which were heavy, as my cousins also frequently required her aid as hairdresser and seamstress, I looked after my clothes and waited on myself as much as possible, performing such acts of my toilet as I could.

"It thus happened that one night, after returning from a reception at the house of a foreign consul, I disrobed myself of my trained evening dress, and slipping on a loose sack sat down to brush my hair before retiring. My seat was just in front of a large glass above my dresser, or what was then called a 'bureau,' on which I had placed the jewelry I had worn—the diamonds I have spoken of.

"As I plied the brush my eyes naturally fell on this mirror, which reflected the room behind me, and as I continued to look I saw evolving itself apparently from empty air the figure of a man. He was well dressed, even stylishly, and was after a fashion handsome, but deathly pale, and his eyes glittered feverishly.

"He crept nearer and nearer to me, seeming to look only at the diamonds loosely strewn upon the marble before me, but his right hand was thrust into his breast, and as he stood over me he suddenly jerked it out and raised high above me a small Spanish dagger, the hilt of which was of a dead gold, or Etruscan gold, as it is called. This was set with rubies, which I noticed with that peculiar attention to trifles so often displayed on moments of danger. Up to this point I had been too terrified to fall out or even to move, not even turning my head to look at and note, but watching the movements of the assassin as they were reflected in the mirror. But as he brought down his hand with a swift, murderous motion to strike me from my chair with a single blow the spell that had held me snapped, and I sprang to my feet with a shriek of terror and rushed to the door.

"Even as I ran I wondered at not encountering the man, but though I could not remember afterward seeing him at all I did not stay, but unlocking the door flung it open, still screaming as fast as the sounds could issue from my lips. It happened that two of my young men cousins had lingered later than the rest of the family at the entertainment referred to, and having just come in were coming up the main staircase close to my room. Rushing to these, I threw myself into the arms of the nearest, Christopher, shrieking, 'The man, the man!'

"The two young men hurried to my room and looked about, but could see no one. The windows were all fastened, and as I had myself just come out of the single door to the apartment, and from which no one else could have slipped without our seeing him, the only chance was for the burglar to have concealed himself in the room.

"By this time the rest of the household was aroused, and not only my room, but the entire place, was thoroughly searched. The three windows of the room were provided with heavy old fashioned shutters, two of them opening on the street, an unbroken descent of over 40 feet, while the other had not been unclosed for years, for it looked almost into one in the next house, which was also seen to be tightly secured. The house itself was occupied by a respectable family in straitened circumstances. It therefore seemed an impossibility for a man to have entered the room unseen by me and to have made his escape in the few seconds it took my cousins to reach the spot where I had seen him. So it was thought that I had fallen asleep in my chair, and my vision had been the result of my late supper of minced chicken and champagne, and though I was still shivering from my fright I allowed myself to be almost persuaded that this was the real truth.

"By the next night I had so thoroughly been laughed into believing this that I took my seat before the mirror and began brushing my hair as nonchalantly as at first, when to my utter horror I saw that figure form itself from nothing, absolutely nothing, and again advance upon me with that menacing attitude. Again it raised its hands to strike, the terrible eyes seemed to glare into mine, fixed on them in the mirror, and, as before, released from the horror that held me stricken into marble, I leaped to my feet and ran screaming into the corridor without. I glanced back into the room but there was no one visible there, but I was not to be convinced this time that an overheated imagination was to blame. I fled to my aunt's door, and as she opened it fell fainting in her arms. I was not to be stirred from my belief that my life had been threatened in that dreadful room by all the searching and arguments that were made and announced my intention of returning home in the morning.

"But the next night was to be that of the grand ball given in honor of the prince, and that, with the fact that I had the prettiest gown in the city to wear, finally prevailed on me to alter my mind, though I made it a condition that Marian, my maid, was to occupy a little antechamber opening into mine, and that my stalwart cousin, Christopher, who was afterward my loved husband for nearly 40 years, was to sleep on a cot in the hall just outside my door. So with a contented mind I went to the ball, returning late to find my good maid asleep, and as she was still not well I crept quietly in and proceeded to undress.

"I let down my hair, and, though too fatigued, as usual, to brush it, sat for some moments looking at myself in the glass—I was a little vain in those days—when all at once I saw behind me the man with his knife in his hand.

"But this time he did not evolve from air, but was there, real flesh and blood, his hot breath nearly scorching the back of my neck. I leaped to my feet with a scream, and as I did so he struck at me, but the blade glanced aside, wounding me only slightly in the shoulder. I screamed aloud, and he felled me with a blow just as Marian and Christopher came rushing in. Seeing them, the robber and assassin sprang for the open window and would have escaped by leaping—an easy feat for a muscular man—in the window of the house next door, which was also open and only about three feet distant. This had evidently been the way by which he had entered and which he used as an egress. But Christopher caught him and dragged him back, and after a struggle secured him, aided by his brothers, who had been summoned by Marian, so when I opened my eyes from my swoon it was to see the would be murderer lying bound, while near me lay a small dagger, with a handle of Etruscan gold, studded with flawed rubies.

"But here is the strange part of the story: On the night of his capture he had entered my room for the first time, though on the two previous nights he had watched me through the shutters of the two windows. He was the son of the family resting next door, and from the love of dress and pleasure beyond his means had involved himself hopelessly in debt, and seeing my diamonds had conceived the idea of killing or at least silencing me and stealing them to pay his debts. But though his mind had dwelt persistently on the scheme he had lacked courage to carry it out until the night of the ball, when, pressed by an importunate creditor, he had let himself into the room, where he had concealed himself until my arrival, not knowing of the protector I had been warned to have near me."—Philadelphia Times.

Gambling in Calcutta.

Gambling on the race rain and its duration has become so great a vice in Calcutta that the government has been called on to suppress it. Clerks on the way to their offices stop at commission houses to place bets, and the women have been seized with the mania, so that they do not only pawn their own and borrowed jewels, but go further to procure money to gamble with. The bookmakers risk no money of their own and charge a small commission for handling the bets.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What gets the young ladies now is the new styles of hats at Miss Collins' millinery rooms. They are the latest designs and are lovely. Some of them are pretty enough for a bride to appear in at church. Yes, and Miss Dersham, the accomplished dress maker, has a department with Miss Collins, and her work gives satisfaction. As these young ladies are hustlers, the ladies in need of any of their work will do well to call and see them.

"Stacy's Snap Shot Story of the World's Fair," given at the church the first three evenings of the week was well attended. The stereopticon views of the grounds, buildings and scenery is complete in every respect, and the lecture, giving a description of each, is very entertaining. To those who attended the great fair, it recalls innumerable scenes of interest and pleasure. It is one of the most instructive and interesting lectures ever given in the village and is worthy the support of every person.

THE COUNTY FAIR.

The Lenawee County Fair this year was a grand success in every way. The weather was perfect, every department well filled and the attendance larger than ever before, nearly 30,000 people being on the grounds Thursday.

In the live stock there was a fair show of sheep, though not as large as some years. In swine there were some very fine Poland China and Chester Whites, they being the favorite breeds at the present time. In cattle there was a large and exceedingly fine display of grades and thoroughbreds. There were some fine herds of Jersey's, Holstein's, Galloway's, Durham's and Ayershire's. Every breed of horses was represented by almost perfect specimens. There you might see elegant coach and draft horses, roadsters and race horses.

The races were closely contested, consequently very interesting.

The poultry department was well filled with elegant specimens of the different varieties, Jas. Tucker, of Concord, being a prominent exhibitor.

The show of fruit, vegetables and grains was very fine.

The agricultural and mechanical departments attracted large crowds. The show of carriages was choice. Art hall was very attractive and almost everything was there to be found.

For some reason but few wind mills were on exhibition, but of wire fences there was an endless variety. The society are to be congratulated on this year's fair.

The ball games drew large crowds, but the frightful condition of the grounds made good ball playing an impossibility. There is no reason why the association should not have an elegant diamond, and could at a very little expense, for the ground lays well and could easily be put in shape. In the series the so-called Y. M. C. A. (with nearly all professional players) came out ahead.

The association undoubtedly will the coming year make many improvements, such as planting shade and ornamental trees, improving the buildings and adding to their capacity, etc. It will not be long before Lenawee county will have fair grounds of which they may justly be proud.

Fred Kuhmerer, a former resident of this place has been here making a three weeks visit with his parents and friends. Last Monday evening about fifty of his former associates called upon him unawares, and had an enjoyable farewell surprise party, prior to his departure. He left Tuesday for his home in New Mexico, where he is employed as locomotive engineer on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Rr.

The Junior C. E. Society of the Presbyterian church will give an entertainment in the Holloway public hall, Monday evening, Oct. 8th. The proceeds to be added to the missionary fund of that society. The rehearsals of the young people does credit to their instructors, and promises to make an evenings entertainment for old and young.

A REVIVAL.

Tecumseh has long been noted among the villages of Lenawee as a cycling center. Ever since the advent of the ancient "bone shaker" our village has had many devotees to this invigorating recreation. At one time the Tecumseh Bicycle Club was foremost in the social life of the town and its May Party was looked forward to as the event of the social season.

For some inexplicable reason, even though the number of riders has increased four fold, the old time enthusiasm has died away. Recently however twenty of our prominent young business men have united in forming the Tecumseh Bicycle Association, and in order to properly announce the advent of the youngster, will present to the public, on Saturday, October 6th, a race meeting which will eclipse anything heretofore attempted in this section of the state.

It is desired by the management to make this a recognized success, a success which will long reflect credit upon our pleasant village. To that end they invite the hearty co-operation of all citizens to outdo all previous records for hospitality and generosity.

Four hundred dollars will be hung up in prizes, which will consist principally of diamonds, watches, jewelry and valuable sundries. All events will be strictly 'Class A' events and will be run under the L. A. W. racing rules. Every convenience will be given both riders and spectators.

Appended is a list of the various committees and events.

Executive Com.—B. J. Garlinghouse, E. N. Satterthwaite, John Anderson, P. W. A. Fitzsimmons.

Soliciting Com.—T. P. Harris, Charles Eagan, L. C. Hayden, B. A. Garlinghouse.

SOUTH MACON NEWS.

The Macon Township S. S. Institute, held on Saturday, Sept. 29th, 1894, was a successful opening of the township's work in this direction, the duty and object of which is to gather all the children into the Sunday schools.

After the formal opening of the institute by Mr. J. W. Parker, the first topic on the programe was responded to by Rev. S. Rederus of Britton. A most suitable topic had been chosen as opening, viz: "Are You in the Sunday School? If Not, Why Not?" and was all that could be reasonably desired, and was well presented and most satisfactorily answered by the brother.

A short discussion followed, to bring out more intensely some of the valuable hints and suggestions of the speaker. A recess was then taken until 1:30 p. m., during which time a dinner was partaken of in Grange Hall adjoining the church. An hour of social converse and the greeting of friends was spent most pleasantly.

At 1:30 afternoon session was called by Mr. J. W. Baker, and a half hour was spent in devotional exercises, led by Rev. Brown, of Tecumseh. Rev. D. H. Ramsdell, of Clinton, then gave a most stirring and excellent address on the proper use of lesson helps in Sunday school work. After him came an address by Rev. J. P. Varner, of Tecumseh, on the topic, "Methods of Presenting the Sunday School Lesson." Very many most useful and practical suggestions were given in this truly interesting address. Next came Rev. Brown of Tecumseh with an address of stirring interest on the topic, "The Sunday School Teachers' Responsibilities." It throughout was full of good thoughts, presented in such a manner as to elicit well deserved attention and consideration.

The business meeting resulted in the election of the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Isaiah Hendershot; vice presidents, John Buchanan, S. Steele; secretary, Miss Lulu Gilmore; treasurer, Mrs. Hattie Sage.

Tea was then served in the hall, after which, at 7:30, Mrs. Seaton Anderson, of Tecumseh, gave her methods of conducting primary class in Sunday school, which was of great value to any primary teacher. The part in the Sunday school of vital importance. Rev. H. Canfield, of Ridgeway, then gave his thoughts and conclusions on "The Sunday School Teachers Supreme Opportunity." It was listened to throughout with profound attention, being so full of merit none could lose the benefit of his many appeals to Sunday school teachers to realize the supreme opportunity of their being and its consequent blessings, making a profound impression upon all thinking minds and thus closing one of the most profitable days of Sunday school institute work in the experience of the most of us present, and which will be seen in days to come.

Excellent singing and some discussions were interspersed throughout the day's work. When the benediction was pronounced by Rev. H. Canfield we all felt that some lasting benefit had been received.

Gas pipes are now made of paper. Some newspapers should be better than others for the purpose.

TECUMSEH, MICH., OCT. 4, 1894

Missouri is likely to furnish the next President says an exchange. That may be true or not. But the West is almost certain to furnish the next President.

Senator Hill may not accept the nomination for the governorship that was thrust upon him by the New York state convention. If he should decline it would leave matters in rather a mix-up state.

Business is improving so rapidly that Don M Dickinson predicts a fair Democratic majority in the House. The business improvement is an excellent thing in itself, but a Republican permanent is even more so.

Politics will be hot in New York this fall. Hill's nomination has provoked a revolt and an independent Democratic ticket will be placed in the field. It's impossible to tell at present how far the revolt will extend.

Whether Mr. Morton has "coughed up" a quarter of a million or a half a million to the campaign in New York is a matter of dispute. But the fact that his contribution was a large one is sufficiently attested by his nomination for the Governorship.

Congressman Johnson [illegible] Dave Brigg[illegible] Wear the Congressman himself for his election to [illegible] Simon Cameron [illegible] cooper is [illegible] rewarded than [illegible]

No contention exists in the New York Republican convention [illegible] the new tariff on the ground that it was passed in the interest of the South, the Southern sugar planters formally abandoned the Democratic party on the ground that the new tariff was hostile to the interests of the South.

The Ohio Democratic convention passed a resolution in favor of the election of Senators by a vote of the people. This was a direct slap at Senator Brice, who occupied a prominent position on the platform when it was adopted. It also passed a resolution in favor of the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1. Senator Brice is not pleased with the resolution and may resign.

The letter of Senator Jones scolding Altgeld from the Democratic party is a formidable boomerang. It will not only drive the silver states into the Populistic camp and give them the balance of power in the Senate. It is now said that Senator Teller will soon follow with a similar letter. This rumor has spread consternation among Republican managers who were not prepared for such a move in affairs.

Bill Nye says: "Every newspaper man has, at some time in his life, met a man who takes more papers than he can read. He was in town last week. He paid for one paper and borrowed three others and said he would send to subscribe for a paper of his own as soon as he got time. He wanted to know what kind of a paper we published, and we told him. He said he would subscribe for it as soon as he got time. He wanted to know what kind of a paper we published, and we told him. He said he would subscribe for it as soon as he got time."

New York is the [illegible] [illegible] In [illegible] great States there [illegible] contest in New York [illegible] [illegible] parties stand [illegible] [illegible] and the result [illegible] most important bearing upon the Presidential election two years hence. The party that carries New York next fall will start with a great advantage, and the successful candidate for governor will be a formidable [illegible] for Presidential nomination [illegible]

The Detroit Free Press says: "A very excellent campaign document is a series of story, 'The Workingman's Tariff' published from the pen of Miss E. C. DePuy. It is written in an entertaining manner, combining facts with everyday romance, and shows clearly how the American workman is robbed by a protective tariff. The Democratic state central committee, it is said, will issue a large edition of the story supplying the various county committees and Democratic clubs. Its wide circulation ought to aid very much the cause of tariff reform.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Sept. 28, 1894.

The Congressional campaign committees have reached the stage at which figures are given out showing what the claimes of each are. At least the democratic and republican committee isn't giving out any figures, merely claiming the balance of power in the next House. When the figures given out by both committees are carefully examined the fact becomes apparent that unless some big bluffing is being indulged in somebody is bound to be terribly disappointed when the election returns are in. The republicans make the largest claims. According to their figures they will elect 200 members of the next House, and control 21 State delegations, while the democrats will elect 147 members and the populists only 3. The democratic committee figures that its party will elect 190 members, but that it will control only 20 State delegations. It gives the populists 10 members. In only naming 41 State delegations the democratic committee does not concede that the republicans are a certainty in electing the next President should the election of the next President be thrown into the House. On the committee's figures 5 States will be [illegible] as they count upon the delegations of seven states being [illegible] the populists controlling two of them.

One [illegible] of the figures of the two committees is that while there is [illegible] Vermont of one in three districts as to the total number of people that will be cast for the next House, there is a full 10 difference in their estimates of the States from which they will come. For instance, the republican committee gives eight districts from Missouri, and the democratic estimate none. From Texas, as I [illegible] democratic [illegible] At the same time the democratic committee gives four districts from Colorado, [illegible] from Kansas and [illegible] from South Carolina, the republican estimate gives none from either of these States.

The political event of the week was the nomination of Senator Hill for governor by the Democratic [illegible] of New York. Although it was predicted some time ago [illegible] it was received with surprise by most people in Washington. It indicates one thing very clearly—that Senator Hill still has Presidential aspirations. Many [illegible] Senator Hill's nomination [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

A pretty and successful surprise party was tendered on the 10th inst. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cummins. GRAND OLD MAN.

Wolverines Honor Ex-Gov. Felch's Ninetieth Birthday.

Governor, Senator and Supreme Judge, His Long Career Has Been a Notable One—Remembered by the Washtenaw County Bar.

A NOTABLE CAREER.

ANN ARBOR, Sept. 28.—A banquet was given Monday evening by the Washtenaw County Bar association to ex-Gov. Alpheus Felch in honor of his 90th birthday. The governor is hale and hearty and, barring a slight deafness, is quite as lively as a man of 50. He has had a most notable life. The dates of the leading events are best

The guests assembled in the Cook house parlors. After a formal greeting and introductions by A. D. Sawyer, president of the bar association, the company descended to the dining room, where the tables were loaded with all the delicacies of the season and many speeches were made eulogistic of the ex-governor.

Alpheus Felch is Michigan's "grand old man," one whom the entire state honors and esteems. His life is a page from Michigan history, and more than an ordinary part of the early history of the state he helped to make. He was a member of the first state legislature, serving in 1835, and is the only survivor of that body. He is the oldest living governor of the state, the oldest senator and the oldest auditor general, the oldest justice of the supreme court and the first state bank commissioner. He has [illegible] known all of Michigan's chief executives, from Gov. Mason down to the present time, and he has a wonderful fund of [illegible] reminiscences regarding them. He has known all of Michigan's visitors from Lucian Lyon's day and can recall reminiscences or anecdotes of most of them, especially of those who served prior to the war.

Mr. Felch was born in Maine in 1804, graduated from Bowdoin college in 1827, studied law, was admitted to the bar at Bangor, Me., in 1830 and in 1836 came to Michigan, settling first at Monroe, where he lived ten years, then removing to Ann Arbor.

Ex-Gov. Felch with ex-senators George W. Jones, of Dubuque, Iowa, and Peter W. Dailmay, of Augusta, Me., are the only surviving members of the Thirtieth congress. Both of the latter gentlemen are a trifle older than Mr. Felch. The ex-governor's memory is very clear and he delights to speak of the past, particularly of his experiences as commissioner to settle the Spanish claims in California, which took three years time. He wrote with his own hand almost one-third of the opinions, which were nearly all confirmed by the supreme court of the United States. Among these was the new Almaden quicksilver claim, which opinion and report made five large volumes, the largest ever published in America and next to the Tichborne case in England, which made nine large volumes. During the patriot war excitement which resulted in Monroe he had the courage in the face of great public excitement to address a meeting and show the citizens where they were drifting to a war with England. This speech gave the conservative people courage and turned the tide of public opinion.

He Delights in Incendiarism.

AFTER FIFTY YEARS.

The semi-centennial of the dedication of the Congregational church, Clinton, which has been looked forward to with so much interest, was celebrated September 30th and October 2.

The church had been newly papered and painted and presented a very pleasing appearance. The floral decorations were done by a committee of the Y. P. S. C. E.

The Sunday services were conducted by the pastor. In the morning there was a very large audience. Prayer was offered by Rev. G. E. Wilson, and the sermon was preached by Rev. E. W. Miller, of Eaton Rapids. The text was Matt. 13:33. The subject, "The Growth of the Kingdom of God." The preacher after stating that only a perfected society could correctly understand christianity, went on to show how the religion of Jesus Christ had gradually overcome the great evils that existed in the world, and predicted that it would continue its beneficent work until society was thoroughly purified. In the Sunday school, after the review of the quarter's lessons, short addresses were given by Revs. G. E. Wilson and E. W. Miller.

The church was crowded at the evening service, chairs having to be placed in the aisles. The introductory service was conducted by Revs. E. W. Miller, C. M. Stout and D. L. Ramsdell. The sermon was preached by Rev. G. E. Wilson, of Clyde, O. The text was Mark 9:2. After describing the transfiguration scene, the preacher showed how anxious the three disciples were to stay on the mount in holy communion. But the Master had work for them to do in the world. He said that when the christian was privileged now to hold communion with God he desired to stay in that condition, but there were duties to be performed, and the Master would have us take these up and do them thoroughly. He went on to show that the world needed earnest, consecrated workers to-day, and closed with an appeal to all christians to do what they could to make society better. Special music was rendered in a very efficient manner by the choir at both services.

October 2nd the services began with a meeting in the afternoon at 2 o'clock. There was a large attendance. After singing, Heb. I was read by Rev. G. E. Wilson, and prayer offered by Rev. E. W. Miller. The pastor made a few remarks, and then the history of the church was given by Mr. J. B. Wells. He began by describing the organization of the church in 1843, and the erection of the house of worship in 1844. In a very interesting manner he traced the subsequent events, having something to say about each pastor, his peculiarities and his work. The history indicated that although the church had had its trials, yet there had been continual prosperity.

Mrs. H. R. Williams, wife of the late pastor, read a poem, composed by herself, entitled "The Church of Christ." It dealt with the lessons to be learned from the history of the past fifty years, and was much appreciated. This was followed by a solo by Miss Grace Davis, of Detroit, "The Beautiful City."

Reminiscences of the past were then given by Dea. G. Calhoun, Dwight Hause, Ceibert Halladay, Mrs. J. Clark, and Mr. L. Conklin. They all had kind things to say of the pastors. The pastors present then told of some of their experiences, and spoke in high terms of the kindness of the people among whom they had labored. This proved one of the most interesting features of the celebration.

Prof. Estabrook had been expected to take part in the proceedings, and much regret was expressed at his death. He had sent, just before his departure, a message to be read at the meeting. This duty was performed by Rev. H. R. Williams, an old friend of the deceased, who spoke very feelingly of his noble and loving life.

Letters were read from Revs. A. S. Kedzie and J. Swindt, explaining the reason of their absence, and conveying their greetings. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Ramsdell, Sr.

An adjournment was then made to the parsonage where a reception and supper was held. This was in charge of a committee of the Y. P. S. C. E. and they did their work very creditably. The tables were decorated with flowers and presented an attractive appearance. About 130 sat down to supper, and a very pleasant time was spent in meeting old friends and recalling the memories of the past. The evening meeting was opened with singing, and prayer by Rev. D. L. Ramsdell. Letters were read from Revs. S. S. Hyde, and J. A. Barnes expressing their regret at not being able to be present, and conveying their good wishes. The first speaker was Rev. G. E. Wilson. He quoted the prophecy of Ingersoll made some years ago, that christianity would soon be a thing of the past, and then showed how history had belied it. Christianity was more powerful and popular to-day than ever, and multitudes of hearts were loyal to Christ.

Rev. E. W. Miller said we might learn much from the history of the past. We had no right to reject a thing because it was old, or accept a thing because it was new. The beaten track along which so many had walked safely might be the best for us. The true principal was, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."

A solo, "Assurance of Jesus," was sung by Mrs. G. E. Wilson, and this was followed by the closing address, given by Rev. H. R. Williams. He said it was a cheering fact that while pastors and members came and went, the church remained to carry on its blessed work. It was impossible to estimate the good done during fifty years. It was in reality a short space of time and another half century would soon be gone. If they were faithful, more could be accomplished than ever before. He urged the church to be loyal to the pastor, and to pray for him continually.

With the singing of "God be with you till we meet again," this memorable occasion was brought to a close.

Frank Hughes, whose tragic death occurred at Adrian Sunday morning and which seems shrouded in mystery, was the son of John Hughes of this place. He was found early Sunday morning by his brother Raynor, who had stayed at a neighbor's over night. He was lying on the bed, his dog was lying by him, a loaded revolver, a hammer and a bottle of chloroform, nearly full, were found near him. The first supposition was that he had committed suicide and many sensational reports were circulated, but the friends are satisfied that the had been foul play and will have the affair thoroughly ventilated. Frank Hughes was 20 years of age and a baker by trade. He was married at Adrian a year and a half ago to Bessie Storey, daughter of Charles Storey. The body was brought here for interment, the funeral being held at the Baptist church Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Mr. Whitney of the Baptist church, Adrian, his pastor, officiating.

The clergy of the Southern convocation of Michigan met in St. Peter's church last Thursday for their regular quarterly work. A celebration of communion was held in the morning at 10 o'clock, at which there were 30 communicants. In the afternoon the principal work was discussion upon and arrangements for missionary work by the clergy, in the way of giving services to the many scattered church people within the conventional limits, who are deprived of the benefits of the church by living miles away from organized congregations. At evening the addresses were given by the Rev. B. B. Beleon of Jackson and the Rev. H. Tatlock of Ann Arbor. The same day a quarterly meeting of delegates of the junior anxiliary within the convention, was held in the reception room of the armory. Delegates were present from Detroit, Grass Lake, Jackson, Clinton and Tecumseh. A very successful work was accomplished and the President, Mrs. Richard McCauley, of Detroit, went away very well pleased with the interest taken and also the work of the young ladies of St. Peter's branch. The Junior anxiliary is a society of young ladies in the church, formed for the special purpose of creating interest in mission work. Obtaining money is not the first object of the organization, but never-the-less a large sum is contributed yearly to the work.

A World's Tribute.

America Leads the Nations in the March of Progress.

Among the wonders of the World's Columbian Fair the grandest was the exhibit of American products. The Exhibition was, in this respect, an object lesson of the grandeur and glory of the Republic. Among the exhibits from the United States no article of its class stood so high as

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

The Chief Chemist of the Agricultural Department at Washington, backed by an intelligent jury at the Exposition, found it strongest in leavening power, peerless in its purity and beyond comparison in uniform excellence.

Received Highest Award At the World's Fair.

The award is a matter of official record.

Nothing could settle so decisively the immeasureable superiority of Dr. Price's over all other powders as the great honor bestowed at Chicago.

The Last Game of Base Ball.

The Base Ball season practically closed last Thursday, Oct. 4th, when the Britton's crossed bats with the High School team. The weather was very disagreeable. It was damp and very chilly and both spectators and players found it very difficult to keep comfortable. At the east end of the grand stand a fire was kept going all through the game. With the atmosphere as frigid as it was the attendance was very light and confined almost exclusively to small boys and base ball cranks. A very few ladies were brave enough to come out. While fine ball playing was out of the question and many errors were made, particularly by the Britton team, they having 16 charged up to them, still there was some almost phenominal plays made by both teams. Although our boys won the game by a score of 9 to 8, so declared by Umpire McClure, they were not entitled to any credit really, for they did not have an earned run and only made 5 hits off of Brunskill (who pitched an elegant game,) and these were made in as many innings—one hit each in the 2nd, 4th 5th, 7th and 9th. Had Brunskill had any support our boys would not have been in it and up to the 9th inning it looked as if the Brittons would win the game in spite of their many errors. Harris did not pitch as well as usual for ten hits were made by the Britton's, among them being 2 base hits by Lee and Lowe, and 3 base hits by Larrabee. At times the game was interesting and exciting. Dickson and Lowe both caught well.

A Piano at a Nominal Price.

Chicago's largest music house, Lyon & Healy, has moved into a magnificent new building. They have a number of slightly used and second-hand pianos returned from World's Fair renting, etc., etc., which they have determined to sacrifice rather than to try to make room for. These instruments comprise Square pianos at $40, $65, $100 and $125. Upright pianos at $125, $140, $150, $165, $190, $200, $225, $240 and upward. Grand pianos at $200, $250, $300 and upwards. Nearly all originally sold for from two to four times their present price. Almost all prominent makes (in squares and uprights) are represented, including among numerous others Cheikering, Knabe, Steinway, Weber, Decker, Steck, Fisher, etc. This is an opportunity that will not occur again, as Lyon & Healy have not moved for twenty years. Immediate attention is therefore necessary. A good plan will be to order a piano, leaving the selections to Lyon & Healy. However they will send a list and full particulars on application. Any piano not proving satisfactory may be returned at their expense. Address at their new salesrooms, corner Wabash Avenue and Adams street, Chicago. Distance is no obstacle in taking advantage of this remarkable chance to obtain a piano, for in proportion to the saving to be made the freight charges are insignificant. If you do not already know them by reputation any banker will assure Lyon & Healy's entire responsibility and record of over a third of a century for honorable dealing. Write to-day so as to avoid disappointment.
